U.N.B. WINS INTERCOLLEGIATE RUGBY TITLE

N.B. Rugbyists Win Title In Sudden Death Game With St. F. X.

SACKVILLE, N. B., Nov. 9—The Maritime Intercollegiate rugby title remained in New Brunswick this afternoon when University of New Brunswick, Fredericton, defeated St. Francis Xavier University, Antigonish, 6-5 in a hard fought "sudden death" match played while cold wind swept across the field.

Mount Allison University of Sackville won the championship last year St. F. X., winners in 1937, copped the Nova Scotia title this fall by defeating St. Mary's and Acadia University. U. N. B. entered the Maritime final for the first time in five years by taking the New Brunswick-Prince Edward Island crown.

In the first half U. N. B. worked the ball down to the Antigonish ten-yard line, heeled cleanly from the scrum, and Ralph Lockhart broke through for the first score. Art MacLennan failed to convert. Not long afterward U. N. B. was awarded a penalty kick when the St. F. X. scrum half was caught offside on the 30-yard line. MacLennan booted the ball between the posts to give U. N. B. a 6-0 lead and enough margin to win the game.

Heavy Gunnery Is Mathematics With Shellfire

By GUY E. RHOADES Canadian Press Staff Writer SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND. Nov. 9—(CP)—It takes a lot of training to turn out a competent heavy artillery officer, a man who understands maps and survey work has a knowledge of explosives and aerodynamics and can apply this knowledge when the shell is cutting loose all around him.

At an artillery school this correspondent watched the practical end of such training, watched firing practice on the ranges and saw officers in their classrooms. They got their mathematical schooling out of books, but they must go into the field to find out if they can apply it.

Gunnery is something like the game of planning the fall on the donkey, except that there are men available to tell you how far and in which direction you are wrong. Eyes of the artillery are the observation posts, stationed on high ground commanding a good view of the intended target, and in communication by field telephone with the firing posts.

The technique is like this: The observation officer lies on the ground with a contour map before him. On it is marked the location of his battery. He spots through glasses, say, machine gun nest which would impede the advance of infantry and must be demolished or frightened into leaving.

He seeks to plot its exact location on his map and measure its distance, height and direction from his battery. Then he calls his estimation of the distance and bearing to a signaller by radio. The signaller repeats it over the phone to the signaller at the battery. The battery signaller tells to the officer who plots it on a map on a "changeable" checks the bearing and figures the elevation of his gun from a table giving elevations for various distances for his particular weapons.

Maybe Short Or Long The guns are set and fired. From the observation post the officer sees the puffs of earth and smoke made by the bursting shell. Usually the first estimates wrong. The shells drop behind the target or short. So he tries again, lengthening or shortening his range by degrees as the shells drop long or short until he scores a hit or gets sufficiently close to cause his enemy to evacuate the post.

When Stull joins the Glace Bay team he will also be lining up with a former Abergvill teammate, Johnny Squarebriggs who played with Ray on Abbie teams before leaving for Baltimore where he is playing for four seasons is also with the Miners and will be the reunion on the same club will be a happy one.

Stull's departure marks the sixth Island Hockey league to hook up with the Cape Breton League. The five that preceded Ray are Johnny Squarebriggs with the Miners and the Williams, Buddy McEachern, Tarky Whitlock and Ab McKinnon all with the Sydney team, runners up last year for the Maritime crown.

Canadiens Take Second Straight Victory In 2-0 Win Over Amerks

MONTREAL, Nov. 9—(CP)—Montreal's surprising Canadiens ran their National Hockey League record to two straight victories tonight, defeating New York Americans 2-0 behind great goal-tending of Claude Bourque and saves by Doug Young and Charlie Sands.

Victors 2-2 last Sunday night over Chicago Black Hawks in an almost mechanical display of speed, power and backchecking, the flying Frenchmen used the same tactics to get the decision over Mervyn (Red) Dutton's Americans. Young scored his goal in the 18th minute of the second period while defenseman Al Murray of Americans was off for tripping Louis Trudel. The habitants were in command all the way after that, adding their last goal in the 18th minute of the third period when Sands rode in on goalie Earl Robertson after taking a pass from Toe Blake. Sands found it easy to slip in a 10-footer.

The Americans, with Charlie Coachman, Hooley Smith pacing their play, generally were unable to do much against the tight Montreal backchecking. Coachman, however, making his first N. H. L. start as a defenseman after years as a forward, turned in a starry game and at least three times overtook Montreal men on breakaways to save possible goals. Smith was a master defensively, especially when the Americans were short-handed, and was the most prominent of New York attackers.
