SMALL ENOUGH TO ENTER KITCHEN

Lyle Resser, Illinois farmer, is shown with his Hereford steer which although he will be two years old in May, is only as tall as the yardstick Lyle holds. "Shorty" would be an obvious name for the stubby fellow but—guess again—he's known as "Toby". Small as he is, Toby has come a long way from his baby days when, at 21 inches in height, he could walk under any cow on the farm and practically had to stand on the toes to reach his dinner. Now at nearly 300 pounds the rebellious natured "Toby" is treated as a pet and has the run of the Resser farm. Owner Resser to date is uncertain of his future plans for "Toby."
