Capitol's "No Time To Marry" Fun-Filled Film

If you can stop laughing long enough to count them, you find six complete and live goats scampering through this screamingly funny picture, "No Time to Marry," which opens today at the Capitol Theatre. Things go so screwy and haywire at various points in the film that you half expect the goats to bleat out a "hey, nanny, nanny!" and start doing The Big Apple.

Richard Arlen, Mary Astor and Lionel Stander are the main players in this hilarious magazine story.

Perry Brown (Arlen), star reporter on The Daily Blade, and Kay McGowan (Miss Astor), crack sob-sister of the newspaper, are scheduled to get married Christmas Eve. Two hours before the wedding, the city editor finds out that Eleanor Winthrop (Miss Dale), Boston heiress, has disappeared. Perry refuses to go out on the story. Then the managing editor summons him and orders the reporter to obtain two goats for the managing editor's son immediately, as they're to be a Christmas present.

Perry comically gets involved with the heiress and together they go goat-hunting. Perry's frantic search for the goats, his sweetheart's getting him out of jail after he filches a goat from the zoo, and countless other looney episodes make "No Time to Marry" a certain cure for the blues.

W. F. Burke Addresses Fox Breeder's Club On Parasite Control

The Sunglo Fox Breeders' Study Club, at their regular meeting on Monday evening last, heard interesting addresses by Mr. W. F. Burke, Provincial Fox Fieldman, and Mr. Geo. Bishop, Assistant Fieldman, on the necessity of control of internal parasites in ranches throughout Prince Edward Island. These addresses were made in conjunction with the work of the Provincial Department of Agriculture in attempting to lessen the number of ranches infected with parasites. Tests are being made by the Fieldmen through the province and ranchers with infected foxes advised on methods of clearing up the trouble and preventing reinfestation in the future.

Mr. Burke pointed out that the need for such steps by the Department had been fully justified in that over 90 per cent of the ranches from which specimens had been taken were infected with one form or another of parasite, and pointed out that he was of a firm opinion that this infestation was one of the major causes of the poor quality of pelts now becoming quite common in the province.

Mr. Bishop read a short paper on the various types of infestations found in the Province and conditions favorable for their continued existence. In the course of his remarks he pointed out that it was quite easy for a ranch to become infested without any apparent damage as far as the rancher could notice. This is accounted for by the fact that the damage from the infestation is apparent only gradually and great inroads on the quality of the fur on the animals and the health in general would have taken place before much notice of the conditions would have been made by the rancher. Mr. Bishop pointed out that damage resulting from internal parasites might take the form of poorer health of the animals, lessened resistance to disease or be shown more prominently in poorer quality of fur.

Speaking on the subject of resistance to infestation on the part of foxes he pointed out that in some cases resistance was built up in the case of some foxes but that this quality was individual and while the parasites had little effect on those particular animals, they acted as hosts to the parasites and reinfection in other foxes would occur. He pointed out that the great need on the Island today is the general practice of sanitation methods throughout the ranches and stressed the importance of keeping up such practices. The parasites will have little chance to thrive if cleanliness and good sanitation methods make conditions for their existence unfavorable.

Mr. Burke explained that samples for tests were to be taken at ranches in the vicinity of Summerside during the next few days and invited ranchers who were not at the meeting to get in touch with him at the Sunglo Meeting Rooms so that they too might have their ranches checked up and a definite blow be struck this weakness in the industry in the province.

The usual Question Box was passed and questions pertaining particularly to the work in eliminating parasites and sanitation in ranches were discussed by the members and the guest speakers. —S.

Gives Rotarians Behind Scenes View Of Fair

Speaking at the Rotary meeting Monday Past President J. Wilfrid Boulter, Secretary and Treasurer of the Provincial Exhibition Association said in part:—

The Provincial Exhibition for 1938 is past. We believe this was the best show since the organization of the Provincial Exhibition Association in 1889. Based on our records, the display in the main building, the entries of poultry and live stock, and the general conditions which go to make up a fair this year eclipsed all others. Mr. Boulter referred to the crowded condition of the exhibits in the main building and also to the horse stalls. There were many factors which contribute to its success. In this short talk, I can only mention very briefly some phases of this great work, but before saying anything about this year I would like to pay a tribute to the men who half a century ago laid the foundations for the success of last week.

In 1889, about 126 men organized the Provincial Exhibition Association. They were wise in their choice of a site.

You have the picture in detail before you, the main building rich in architectural design, both from within and without. The necessary buildings for the livestock, and poultry, clean and fresh in their dress of paint. The large grand stand with the new bleacher to the east and a smaller one on the west facing the most picturesque scenery of water and pastoral landscape that nature could form, and with all this was added a great display of exhibits from all over Canada, representing the skill of the exhibitors in art, fancy work, and domestic science.

There was live stock, some of which are not surpassed in Canada, and for entertainment, a midway with all the mysteries, rides, and games of chance. A well balanced vaudeville program. An evening horse-show, and the greatest attraction of all that king of sports, horse racing.

The first races on this track were held October 2nd, and 3rd. 1889. There was wet weather and the total receipts were less than $2,000.

Three Phases

I would like to touch three phases of the show: 1st. Its value to the Province. 2nd. Some essential requirements and 3rd. Finances.

Dealing with the first, the value of an exhibition, I would divide it into three parts. 1st. The educational value to the exhibitor and the spectator. Credit is given the world over to exhibitions for the steady improvement of all classes of live stock, poultry, and farm products. It is of particular value to the youth, who watch with keen interest, the various judging classes. We were pleased to see so many boys and girls around the show ring and exhibiting. To some of these exhibitors, the judges have paid very high compliments. We must give the youth the training they should have.

An exhibition affords a week of much needed change relaxation, and entertainment to the hard-working public who so generously patronize our Fair. Many a farmer plans his work so that he may have exhibition week clear, claiming it is his only vacation during the whole year, and with their vacation they get a new slant along many lines pertaining to their work. Then again our Exhibition is the greatest medium of advertising our province that we have.

Transportation Unsatisfactory

Las year from the Thursday before Exhibition, over 1,000 cars came to the Province in eight days. This year we had in the same time, 1137, cars. Right here we regret very much to register the only complaint that interfered with the smooth working of the whole work, and that was the transportation facilities. With two boats available we advertised there would be a double boat service. Imagine our surprise and indignation when we learned the second boat was not put into service until Monday. Think of it, an idle boat, a paid crew, and scores of cars waiting for hours for a chance to cross. If such methods of service were followed by the Exhibition management, the second boat would not be a necessity. In justice to those connected with the freight department of the railway we have nothing but highest words of praise. They rendered a remarkable service, but we cannot afford to disappoint tourists who came here by the hundreds, who talk about our Fair when they return to their homes, encouraging others to come to the next years' Fair.

Our posters reach every part of Eastern Canada, the owners of race horses all speak of the wonderful time they have here, and as a result, we have annually an increase in the number of our visitors.

Is it too much to ask for the co-operation necessary to give our visitors every possible means of reaching our province without undue delay?

Essential Requirements

What are some of the most essential requirements of a successful Fair? I think first of all we must have an interested public; not only those who exhibit but also the thousands of others who visit our Fair and who by their presence encourage both the management and the people of this province who showed in such a tangible manner a keen interest in our Fair.

I have often stated at our annual Association's meeting in Toronto that the percentage of our population who attend the fair is far greater than that of other places, and I am sure the statement is correct. Second, we must have the earnest co-operation of the exhibitors. Generally speaking we have a wonderful class of exhibits. There is seldom if ever a real complaint. Changes and improvements are asked for and always in such a way that if it is financially possible, the requests are granted. It is really a pleasure to have the opportunity of meeting such genuinely fair thinking people.

Third. An organization that must have the thousand and one details of so complicated a work all planned so that when the climax (Fair week) is reached, there is ready a courteous service for all who pass through the gates.

From such service and understanding there has developed a confidence both among the exhibitors and among the racing fraternity, which is valued highly by the management.

In fact this and the satisfaction that comes from success are the only compensation realized. The service includes the employment of hundreds of men and women, and our President, Lt.-Col. D. A. MacKinnon is an adept in the organization of human effort.

The Finances

What about the finances: Well, I think you all know the Fair is not a paying investment. The last dividend paid the shareholders was in 1924 when 2 percent dividends were paid. The highest dividend ever paid since 1900 was 4 percent, in 1913. Other dividends paid between 1900 and 1924 varied from 2 1-2 per cent to 3 per cent. The grants received are all paid out to the exhibitors. Were it not for the money taken in on the grandstand, the exhibition could not continue despite the fact both the President and the Secretary work without remuneration. There is a constant expenditure to keep the buildings in shape. The cost of putting on the Fair is tremendous, running into thousands of dollars. If either or both Wednesday and Thursday were rainy days, the result would be disastrous. Herein lies one of our greatest worries, but so far we have been favored. Even last week when the Skowhegan Fair was rained out on two days, when Montreal was deluged with cloud bursts, and even Summerside and surrounding sections had heavy rains, we were dry. We have been so fortunte that the weather for Fair week in the broadcast was named The MacKinnon-Boulter weather.

In conclusion I wish in behalf of the Management to express our appreciation to Lt. Gov. DeBlois for making possible such a magnificent display of flowers, to the Provincial Department of Agriculture for the new refrigerator installed for the dairy products, (we were sorry this exhibit was not larger), and to all others who in any way contributed to the success of the Fair.

He also expressed thanks to the CFCY, the Press, the exhibitors and others. He commented also on the fact that throughout the Fair attended by thousands there was no disturbance and little if any drunkenness in evidence.

Aces Take Lead In Shore League

Brighton Aces raced into a 2-1 lead in games for the Brighton Shore Softball Championship last night when they took the measure of the Bankers team 8-7 in the third game of the best of five series.

Scoring five runs in the first inning the Aces led all the way through the encounter but in the final innings were hard put to keep their margin as the losers fought back hard in every innings, only to lose out by the narrowest of margins.

Roy Brett was the winning hurler while Durell Murray was on the slab for the Bankers.

Percy Gay was umpire-in-chief with Hugh Michelon acting on the bases.

Next game will likely take place on Friday night next with Aces needing but another victory to cop the title.
