WAR HONORS FOR DUKE OF WESTMINSTER

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The leveling processes of war, giving the man of obscure antecedents a chance to put his name in history by some feat of signal courage, has given the Duke of Westminster, Britain's richest peer, equally a chance to prove his real calibre as a brave man full of resources as well as patriotism. To his Grace, already renowned as aviator, polo player, hunter, horseman and all round sportsman, the war came as a relief from boredom, from which, his friends say, he was an acute sufferer in the summer of 1914.

Early in the war the Duke obtained a position on the staff of Sir John French, the commander-in-chief of the British armies in France. At headquarters it was said, things did not more rapidly enough to suit him, notwithstanding the fact that he took over to France three automobiles and five hunters. On one occasion he saved the life of Captain Grenfell, who had been left behind in the retreat from Mons.

When conditions began to grow monotonous in France, his Grace obtained transfer to the Egyptian front where he was given command of an armored car section and an early opportunity to distinguish himself. No exploit of the war gives evidence of more valor than the Duke's rescue of 100 British captives in western Egypt, who were the survivors of Taras, seized by the Arabs when they landed on the Arabian coast after their vessel had been torpedoed.

Having exhausted the possibilities of stirring adventure in Egypt, the Duke recently returned to England in quest of a new assignment. His wish has now been gratified by appointment as second in command of one of the tank battalions operating on the Western front. If half of the stories told of the experience of the "tankers" are true, his Grace will have ample opportunity to satisfy his desire for dangerous adventure when he gets back into Flanders.

The Duke of Westminster was 38 years old on March 18 last. He was educated at Eton, and served at A. D. C. to Lord Roberts in the Boer war, 1899-1900. It was in 1899 that his grandfather, the first Duke, died, leaving him the vast estates of the Marquisate and Earldom of Westminster and Grosvenor respectively, much of which is entailed—600 acres in the most valuable part of London and 30,000 in Cheshire and Flintshire. The second Duke also fell heir to the famous Grosvenor House Gallery, and after the Boer war added to his domain by purchasing 19,000 acres in the Orange River Colony. The colossal wealth of the Duke dates only from the time of Charles II, when his ancestor, Sir Thomas Grosvenor, married the only daughter of Alexander Davies, the famous money lender.

In 1901 the Duke married Constance Edwina, youngest daughter of W. C. Cornwallis-West, from whom he was separated by deed in 1914. The Duchess, it is said, refrained from suing for divorce out of consideration for Queen Mary. Their two daughters divide the year between the Duke and the Duchess.

The separation of the Duke and Duchess surprised nobody. The Duchess, lovely in face and figure, thoroughly frivolous and lacking in dignity, was not any more culpable than the Duke. He lived the life of a fast man, with more money than he knew what to do with, unrestrained by any matrimonial obligations. He was anxious to sue the Duchess for divorce, wanting his freedom. She wanted to sue him, to get her own. The wishes of King George and Queen Mary finally prevailed, as those of King Edward had done before. There was a deed of separation, the Dukes colossal income, estimated at several million dollars a year, was divided to provide for the Duchess, and each began a new life alone.

By his family and intimate friends the young Duke of Westminster is called "Bend Or." He received the nickname on account of the famous horse, Bend Or, with whom his grandfather won his first Derby in 1880.

PUBLICITY SOON BRINGS SUPPORT

New Method of Applying the Law is Followed with Close Interest by Legislators.

OTTAWA, Oct. 20.—Legislators are following with unusual attention the work of the Military Service Council, a non-partisan body, in explaining to the Canadian people the provisions and operation of the Military Service Act. This is the first time in Canadian history that such a method of placing a law in operation has been adopted with every newspaper and magazine in the country carrying the message to the citizens.

The advantage of publicity is now apparent to all, since with the dissemination of the facts regarding the Military Service Act public appreciation of its fairness and justice has grown by leaps and bounds in every section of Canada. 726-10-20ME11

JUST WHAT HE WANTED.

Old Gentleman Likes His Prospective Son-in-Law.

(Atlanta Journal.)

The old gentleman in his heart did not object to the young gentleman as a son-in-law, but he liked to raise objection and then reach an agreement as though conferring a favor. When the young man called he was ready for him.

"So," he interrupted, fiercely, almost before the suitor could commence, "you want me to let you marry my daughter do you?"

The young man very coldly responded. "I didn't say so, did I?"

"But," the old gentleman gasped "you were going to say so!"

"Who told you I was?" inquired the applicant, seeing his advantage.

"But you want me to let you marry her don't you?"

"No." "No!" exclaimed the old gentleman, almost falling off the chair.

"That's what I said."

"Then what the mischief do you want?"

"I want you to give your consent," replied the youth, pleasantly. "I am going to marry her, anyhow, but we thought your consent wouldn't be a bad thing as a start."

It took the old gentleman a minute to realize the situation. When he did he put out his hand.

"Shake hands, my boy," said he. "I've been looking for a son-in-law with some pluck about him, and I'm sure you'll do first-class."

GERMAN SPIES IN MOROCCO ZONE

TANGIERS, Oct. 16.—The recent escape of the German submarine at Cadiz arouses indignation among the authorities, the subjects of the allied powers and the large Moslem and Hebrew population, who have already often witnessed the distressful state of the crews of allied and neutral vessels landed here after their ships had been sunk by submarines, the nefarious instigation of murder and massacre by the German Consulate at Tetuan in continually supplying the rebel army in the Tazar regions with arms and ammunition and all requirements from the ports of the Spanish zone, the ferocious propaganda of so-called neutrals from Alcazar, and German intrigues with Raisuli and other chiefs. The Spanish resident-general at Jodana and Gen. Barea at Larache have shown an honorable desire to guard the strictest neutrality, but unfortunately their example is not accepted and followed by others. Daily fresh proofs are arriving of the facilities given the German propaganda of crime. Silence has been kept too long. Germanizing of the Spanish zone in Morocco will prove dangerous to the peace of Europe in future. Islamic powers like England and France cannot permit the installation in Spanish Morocco, nine-tenths of which Spain has not yet occupied, of a great unchecked centre of anti-English and anti-French intrigue amongst Moslem peoples. Already this danger is costing France loss of life and great expenditure in protecting the northern limits of her zone where it borders on Spanish territory.

Spain must remember she has other interests in her zone beyond the dividend of a few iron mines. The fact that she has not yet occupied one-tenth of her territory is no excuse for what the Germans are doing in the other nine-tenths, also the tenth already occupied. The fact that the Spanish Government is reported to have realized that the sole responsibility for pacifying the zone must be by a vigorous campaign and that preparations have already been undertaken to carry out the campaign in the Spring is satisfactory if true, as fixing a limit to the existing policy of lethargy with accompanying facilities for German crime propaganda.

Typus in Mexico

The Mexican Department of Public Health in a recent bulletin says the scourge of typhus throughout the Republic has diminished 50 per cent and small-pox is being successfully combated by widespread vaccination. Almost the entire army has been vaccinated, as have the school children and occupants of prisons.

Metals Are Wanted

Speculators are ransacking China for metal and the resultant shortage of brass and copper coins threatens to become acute. Old cannon and other similar materials are being bought up and Japanese speculators have offered the Government at Canton $1,200,000 local currency for a lot of discarded artillery. Exports of copper in 1916 from China amounted to 87,600 tons, against 3,000 tons the year before.
