JUST A GIRL

BY JANE PHELPS

ZENA GIVES HER CONFIDENCE

CHAPTER 98. I was discouraged. I felt I was not doing well, was not earning the $10 Mr. Claxton paid me. The knowledge was humiliating. I must have shown the struggle that was going on in my mind, the feeling that I should give up the place I so longed to keep, because Mr. Claxton said to me: "Are you feeling ill, Miss Stewart?" "No, not at all." "Then you are worrying. Can I help you?" I told him then just how I felt—that I knew I was insufficient and worth little to him at present, and that I had almost decided to tell him I would go. "But why, if I am satisfied?" Then without waiting for an answer, he said: "Are you willing to tell me something of yourself, Miss Stewart?" As I told you when you first came, it is easily seen you do not belong in the working girl's class. "It would be better if I did." I returned bitterly. Then because of his kindness and the way he spoke to me, I told my story just as you have been reading it. For the first time since I lost Dad, I talked freely with a man. I told him of my early life, of my home and social standing. He asked many questions about Dad, and I told him of the horror of his sudden passing, and how it had affected Mother. Then I told of leaving New York, coming to Chicago where I knew no one, and of the struggle to live. I said nothing of my work, and my inculcated detail of our little shop, its inception, and how well it was doing. "May I have the pleasure of going there for dinner with you some night?" he asked with a smile. "I am as devoted to pancakes as that Mr. Pope you talk about." "Mary would be delighted," I replied. Then in answer to some questions, I went on with my story. When I finished he smiled, and said: "Your story is a good deal as I imagined it, Miss Stewart. I want to help you, but how?" Finally he raised his eyes to mine and said: "I shall keep you, and give you an assistant. That will give you time to do your work slowly, and we will be extremely careful, which is a great asset for in this business a mistake sometimes costs dearly." "But then you cannot afford to pay me!" I exclaimed without thinking, then blushed furiously, naturally he wouldn't pay me very much if he had to have an assistant to help me do the work. "How much does Mr. Betts pay you?" "Ten dollars a week." An indrawn breath showed his astonishment—I thought it was because he considered it too much. "I am afraid he took advantage of your inexperience. Miss Baker drew $25." "Oh, I gaped, you must not blame Mr. Betts. He gave me all I asked for, and all I am worth." "Very well, if it simplifies matters for you, I shall give you $12 and our assistant $10. Then I shall be making money—saving it, rather. We have a girl in the other office who is very quick, but who is not worth a large salary because of her carelessness, which appears to be incurable. But if you will watch her and go over what she does, I think you will get along famously together." When I told Mary, she was agape with wonder and delight. "There ARE good men in the world, many of them," I told her. "He sure is a peach! Never mind the others. And the way things are going I guess, I ought to be married sooner than we planned so you can have a decent place to live. We are going to take a nice flat right near the hcp. They are new, not quite finished, and dandified!" "You mean you will let me live with you, Mary?" I asked. It was so good to be true. "Well, I'd like to catch you livin' anywhere else. Though I bet I have a fracas with Mrs. Fagin when she knows it." "Oh, Mary! That will be wonderful!" "Ain't our money just as good for Tom and me as it is for Mrs. Fagin?" she asked gruffly, while I wept for pure joy. It was like Mary to disguise a kind act by her seeming gruffness.

Keep Children Well During Hot Weather

Every mother knows how fatal the hot summer months are to small children. Cholera, infantum, diarrhoea, dysentery, colic and stomach troubles are rife at this time and often precious little life is lost after only a few hours illness. The mother who keeps Baby's Own Tablets in the house feels safe. The occasional use of the Tablets prevent stomach and bowel troubles, or if the trouble comes suddenly—as it generally does—the Tablets will bring baby safely through. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

YOUNG HERO SAVES LITTLE BROTHER

Heroic work on the part of an older brother, Frederick McDonald, aged 12, saved the life of Kenneth McDonald, aged 8, 69 Glendale street, Revere, from drowning in the Pines River at the Point of Pines, Sunday afternoon, says a Lynn, Mass., exchange. The McDonald had and three other playmates were swimming at a shallow point of the river, when he was caught in the outgoing current and carried beyond his depth. The older boy, who could swim but had been managed to get a hold on the drowning boy, while the panic-stricken playmates called for assistance. Scores of passing autoists paid little attention to the cries, but Vogle E. Abbott, 321 Tremont street, Newton, and Otis Rawding, 15 School street Lynn, were attracted by the cries. Abbott jumped into the river and brought both boys to shore. First aid work partially resuscitated the youngster and he was rushed to the Lynn hospital in Rawdings' automobile. The machine was hitting a fast pace along the Revere boulevard and Motorcycle Policeman Joseph Gannon gave chase. Rawding managed to get the boy to Lynn hospital before being stopped by the motorcycle officer and the McDonald youth was revived by the attending doctors. After treatment the boy was kept at the hospital for a few hours and left last night for his home in Revere. The McDonald boys are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. McDonald of Revere, and grandsons of Joseph MacDonald of Vernon Bridge.

Earth Cracks in Kansas

Cravices Twelve Feet Deep and Three Wide Appear HUTCHINSON, KAN., August 24.—Geologists and scientists of his part of the state are displaying much interest in great cracks in the earth reported to be appearing in Kiowa County. On the John Marriage ranch, cravices 3 feet deep half a mile long and come of them 3 feet wide have appeared recently. Attention to them was attracted by the finding of two steers in one of the cravices. The cattle were wedged in, apparently having fallen in when the earth cracked. Geologists generally agree that the cracks are due to hot, dry weather and the counter effect of the subterranean supply of water. In Kiowa County, further west the underflow of water is tapped by many wells.

THE OVERHEATED RADIATOR

The Radiator May Boil Without The Radiator's Overheating Overheating is naturally a trouble most commonly experienced in hot weather, and a clear distinction should be made between two kinds of troubles described by this term. When the radiator steams and water is rapidly boiled away, the engine is said to over-heat, but it may not be so in the true sense of the word, because the cylinders may not be at a temperature higher than boiling water; the jackets may be full of water and practically free from pockets of steam and no parts of the cylinders hot enough to cause self ignition and knocking or to thin the oil sufficiently to interfere with lubrication. The engine itself may operate at its best efficiency but of course, it is inconvenient and risky to have the water supply in danger of exhaustion at any moment. In such cases the engine jackets are very little hotter than the radiator and the circulation of water through the system is as it should be. The trouble is either that the radiator is unable to get rid of heat as fast as it should or that the engine has an abnormal amount of waste heat to be taken care of. The radiator's inability to dispose of heat may be due to its prior or interior surfaces not being clean enough to be properly conductive or to the failure of the fan to force air through it at a sufficiently high rate. The engineer's abnormal waste heat production may be due to an unusual amount of friction resulting from poor oil or its ineffective distribution or its tight fitting of newly installed parts; to an abnormal delivery of heat to the cylinder walls from the mixture because of its slow burning character usually from over-richness; to the firing of the charge at the wrong time in the cycle, resulting in the conversion of a small proportion of fuel heat into useful power and the rejection of a large proportion of it to the cylinder walls; a condition brought about by too late and sometimes too early work timing; to the undue retention of hot exhaust gases in the cylinders, resulting from faulty valve timing or an obstructed muffler. Under such circumstances it can properly be said that the radiator is overheated or that the cooling system is overloaded, but as the engine itself does not become overheated so long as its jackets are filled with water and not steam.

Great Falls Girl Killed Saturday In Portland Fire

MISS GERTRUDE EVANS JUMPS FROM FOURTH STORY WINDOW OF APARTMENT HOUSE IN BLAZE

The following clipping from the Great Falls Tribune of August 17th will be of interest here as Miss Evans was a grand-daughter of the late Mr. Neil McPherson of Uigg and niece of Mrs. Thomas McMillan of this city and had visited here on two different occasions, and Mr. Michael Evans of Greenfield. Gertrude Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Evans, 1901 Sixth avenue north, was one of those killed in the Elton Court hotel fire in Portland, Ore., Saturday forenoon. She jumped from a fourth story window, and sustained such severe injuries that she died in a hospital a few hours later. Two others were also killed in the same fire. Miss Evans had been employed as stenographer with the Allan-Lewis Wholesale company at Portland, since October, 1918. She was born in Great Falls, and graduated from the high school here in 1914. For three years she was stenographer with the Lindsay Great Falls company, and she was employed one year with the Great Falls Dairy Products company. Her parents, four brothers, Charles, Kenneth, Roderick and William, and two sisters, May and Mrs. R. Buckland, survive her. Mrs. Buckland resides at 1509 Fifth avenue north. Charles is now in Yellowstone park, and has not been reached as yet by relatives. Kenneth Evans has left for Portland to bring the body to Great Falls. She was 24 years of age.

Importation of Autos and Diamonds NORWAY BARS LUXURIES

Forbidden. CHRISTIANIA, August 24.—Importation into Norway of articles of luxury such as automobiles, diamonds, lace, paintings, piano and phonographs is forbidden by a government order effective today. The list of forbidden imports also includes silk, jewelry, watches, furniture, furs, patent leather shoes and motorcycles. The action was taken in order to halt the decreasing value of Norwegian money, largely caused by overvaluing imports, while exports declined. American trade is thereby restricted, as the greater part of the articles named have been imported from America. The high dollar rate had already restricted the purchase of American goods. The rate today was 6.67 crowns to the dollar, as against the normal rate of 3.72.
