COMPANION COURT OF I.O. FORESTERS

Organized on Friday Night in Charlottetown.

Bright Prospects for the Order in this City—New Members Installed into Courts Mount Stephen and Avondale.

Owing to the many meetings held on Friday evening as reported in the Guardian, a report of the very interesting meeting for St. James held in Castle Hall that evening was unavoidably left over.

L. U. FOWLER, High Secretary of the I. O. F., who organized the Charlotte own Companion Court.

some time. He was assisted in the work of admitting the new members by John H. Bill, the High Chief Ranger, F. S. Jost, S. E. Hodgson, Dr. Warburton and other prominent members of the Order.

While the Companion Courts are entirely composed of ladies they have the right to attend all meetings of the Order including the High and Supreme Court meetings and the male members can attend the meetings of the Companion Courts. Sick benefits are not yet extended to the ladies but the insurance benefits at the same rate as charged to men are available.

For years Dr. Orohatchka, the Supreme Chief Ranger, worked hard to convince the Supreme Court of the Order that women were as good risks as men. His contention has been borne out by the figures that the Order now gives as to the death rate, being 61 per thousand among men, and 44 among women.

RUSH IS STARTED FOR NORTHWEST

The Spring Immigration has Already Started

More Than Three Thousand Five Hundred Immigrants Pass Through Montreal in Twenty Four Hours.

The Montreal Herald says: The Windsor station officials are being rushed today, handling the trains of immigrants that arrive from St. John. The rush started at 1 o'clock this morning, with a train of 700 Italian, Englishmen, Swedes and Polish Jews, and it was followed at 3 o'clock by another special containing 350 B. marino boys.

Nearly all of the Englishmen are booked to West-ern Canadian ports, but many of the foreigners are going "all over the shop," as a covey explained to a Herald representative last night. He meant by that that they were bound for the States. There were only 150 Englishmen upon the first special that got in, and over a score of these were accompanied by their wives. They were of an entirely different class from the swarthy, unkempt men and women who swarmed on to the platform before them, staggering under the weight of possessions done up like a ma's dress, and respectively dressed in riding leggins and peaked caps, broad-shouldered, thick-set men, they looked like a case of themselves in any country.

"That's the sort of wife a have," said a Canadian spectator, enviously, as a Syrian woman rolled up and a load of goods that heavily burdened her, while her strong healthy husband, clad in fur-lined coat, walked leisurely along smiling good-naturedly.

The possessions that these people carried were as strange as their language. One woman had upon a tag of tawars, a tiny red cross. This was for luck, so that nobody would steal it. There were many of the men who had nothing but the clothes upon their backs, and not too many of those, but they carried up and down with their hands in their pockets, and were as cheerful as if they had been clad in fine linen. A Swiss had around his neck a tin tea-pot, and so far as could be ascertained this constituted his luggage.

The English immigrants are bound for Winnipeg and from there will go to the Saskatchewan Valley. Perhaps a third of the 3,500 immigrants who arrived last week are from England, and they will distribute themselves over the Northwest Territories.

"We are going to work out for a while," said one of them, "and then take up land ourselves, for most of us have a little capital." The immigrants landed from the Canada, Carthignian and the B. Marino, which was 14 days making the trip. They report that the passage was a very rough one, but they enjoyed the ocean trip compared to the anxiety over baggage, and the tedious waits since landing. The difficulty which officials experience in dealing with some of the foreigners can be imagined, when many cannot speak a word of English, and their own tongue is known only to themselves.

The Englishmen themselves know little of the west nor of what they will encounter there. Winnipeg, is their way word, and the impression rooted with many of them that work lies a few miles beyond. Of the wide sweep of wheat country and of prairie beyond and of the distances they will have to traverse to reach it, they have little idea.

INQUEST ON DEATH ON CHAS. SLATE

Held in the Police Court Room Saturday Night.

Dr. Kelly Gives His Opinion That the Deceased Came to His Death by Congestion of the Lungs.

The inquest into the death of the late Charles Slate, well known throughout Charlottetown and the country, who was found dead in bed at the house of Martin Murray, Kent Street Saturday morning, was held in the Police Court Room with Dr. B. McNeill as Coroner.

Jessie Murray, wife of Martin Murray testified that deceased had come to her house on Thursday last at eight o'clock partly intoxicated. He stayed till he died. He was not well Friday morning, ate nothing but took a warm drink of tea. He vomited it. An hour after he drank half a cup of hot water. He slept mostly all day but got up at four o'clock. For a couple of years he was a frequenter of our house. He said he received a black eye at Arbutke's at the hands of Dennis Doolan. When he left on Tuesday he had good undergarments on. Thursday he had nothing but a cotton shirt. He said he had the clothing to David Kavanagh, Richmond Street for 30 cents. He had two empty bottles with halment labels. He had said he would have a suit of clothing for 50 cents to an Italian on Grafton Street. She went to get about ten and when she got up he was dead.

Martin Murray testified that Slate was under the influence of liquor when he came to his house Thursday between six and seven. He left with an empty bottle to get some beer. He returned at eight without beer or bottle. He said he left the bottle at Arbutke's and went to another place for money which he failed to get. He was no more under the influence when he returned. He complained that he could not get a drink. He was in the house all day Friday and that night he appeared as usual. When I went to bed he was lying on the lounge. About midnight deceased called "My wife and myself went down stairs. He said I'll do some work on the quilt and wait for them to get up. I asked to send for a doctor and he said he would doctor himself in the morning. I'd be seven and nine and came down stairs to find deceased dead. He sent a note to Ellis' Drug Store Friday night. The drugist could find nothing.

Mary Murray, the eleven year old daughter of the foreigner's wife testified that she had gone to Ellis' Drug Store with a note from deceased. The clerk replied he could do nothing. H. A. Ellis, druggist, testified that he had received a note from deceased asking for half a pint of liquor. The clerk refused it. In the bottles (produced) he had not myriated spirits and sweet oil for treating a horse.

Dr. F. F. Kelly testified that he had known the deceased for twenty years. He saw deceased last on Tuesday in Ellis' drugstore. He asked for a certificate for liquor which was refused. From the evidence he would not be surprised if he died from congestion of the lungs. He had been treated by witness for heart trouble. Two ounces of myriated spirits would be about equal to five or six drinks of ordinary whiskey. Such would irritate the stomach and depress the heart. All irritants tend to produce vomiting. Geo. Arbutke, testified that he kept a saloon. He had a black eye outside my place Tuesday night. He drank nothing at my place. In a fight on the street heart he was hit. He told me he didn't know who hit him. I saw him Thursday night at my shop. He was fairly sober. He asked for beer which I refused. He left between nine and ten. After deliberation the jury came to the following verdict.

That the said Charles Slate came to his death on the morning of the 4th of April, 1903, from exposure and weakness of heart and intemperate habits of life.

R. McNeill, Coroner. Angus D. Martin, foreman. John T. McKenzie, Geo. Sealabury, Patrick Hughes, Harold Jenkins, Patrick O'Brien.

FEAR OF THE FUTURE. Most people who dread the future are victims of some terrible disease. Mrs. W. Brantly, 204 Colborne St., Kingston, was in bed with kidney disease. She had severe pain in the back and legs, was gradually losing flesh and felt a dread of the future. A friend recommended Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and the result was complete recovery. It is certain to produce a thorough cure. Pills do not cost 25 cents a box.

MENTAL ACUMEN IS THE SUBJECT of Dr. Anderson's Address in Y. M. C. A.

The Learned Educationalist is Listened to With Deep Attention by the Large Number Who Were Present.

The Y. M. C. A. Hall was filled yesterday to hear Dr. Anderson, Chief Superintendent of Education, speak on "Mental Acumen." The large number who were present had expected an address which would be productive of much good; and it is safe to say that the words spoken by the learned educationalist will have a lasting influence on many of his auditors.

The Doctor in opening stated that the ambition of all young men and women of the present day is to "get on"—to work their way in the world and earn a lasting name for themselves on the roll of fame. The rising genius is stimulated by books which stir his life up and show him how to accomplish his lectures on the success and the self help of others—and the particular instances of those who have won for themselves a name and a claim on the memory of mankind.

These, who have won success, are characterized by individual "push," the great motive power whether for success at home or abroad. Ambition to get on is first aroused at school, the equipment secured there is intellectual and moral, consequently the teacher must be a man of culture, character, and scholarship. This point Dr. Anderson particularly impressed upon his audience.

The virtuous must be virtuous because within the reach of all possibility—the most shrewd, not genius which is granted only to a few—but fair and parts, but fair ability coupled with intelligent professional industry, and therefore within the reach of all. To the rising generation who are so gifted with an infinite faculty for application, to these we must look for the hope of the future.

The address of which the above is a brief summary, could not be done full justice in our abbreviated report. To be fully appreciated it had to be heard, and to those who had the privilege of being present, much good must result. Excellent music was furnished by the choir of St. James Church.

DR. ANDERSON, who addressed the Y. M. C. A. yesterday on Mental Acumen.
