The Other Man

By RUBY M. AYRES

CHAPTER XIV It was a happy evening, and yet nothing was settled. It was like going round and round in a circle.

He laughed unhappily. "Well — there is Barnet and your husband and myself — we all want you. The delicate colour tinged the whiteness of her face.

"But I only want one of you, Dennis. You know which one." He answered doggedly that she could have him if she wished.

"You have bewitched me, Barbara. I seem to be nothing but desire for you. I can't — God forgive me — even forgive the pain." He went close to her and looked down at her with passionate eyes.

"Let me think." He moved away from her impatiently and began pacing the room. Barbara stood very still, looking into the fire.

"To-morrow, to-morrow never comes," he said almost violently. "How do we know what will happen before to-morrow? Don't go in Canada. No one from the Empire has ever made so long a stay so deep, an impression on the British."

Dorothy Dix Says—

MEN DUMB WHEN EXPECTED TO SHOW SENTIMENTS TO OTHERS

Middle-Age Wife May Be Complimented By Husband's Taking For Granted Sincere Love

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—Is it abnormal for a woman in her forties to crave the affection of her husband? Or should she try to crush and strangle every loving impulse to bestow this affection upon him when he has turned cold and meets an attempt of a demonstration of love with an icy rebuff?

Here is our story. We married very young and had a family during the first few years. We were very much in love and I still am with him, but he has apparently lost all affection for me and I do not know why, because we have always gotten along beautifully together and I have always been a devoted wife and a good mother, and we are regarded among our friends as an ideal couple.

My husband is a splendid man in every way. He is a fine business man and a very good father and many of the luxuries of life. He has been kind and generous to me and I am perfectly sure that he is not involved in the case. All I have to complain of is that he no longer shows me any affection. Never pays me a compliment, never shows the slightest interest in anything I do, and I am just starving for a little affection.

I can find no reason for his change in conduct unless he is jealous of my music, as I am in such demand at concerts, dinners and public functions. Am I being silly about the affair?

ANSWER—A starting woman isn't silly when she begs for food. She is being driven to it by her necessities and is just obeying a natural impulse. It is the same way with a wife who hangs on to her husband. But, alas, there is no public charity to which the wife, who is furnished with a neglectful husband need apply for aid, nor does anyone know how to make a neglectful husband feed her.

COURT WILL PROTECT ABUSED WIFE DEAR MISS DIX—My daughter has been married for six years and is married to a man who will have another child within a few months. She is a living hell. He runs around with other women and makes her life a hell. She has no money and he takes her money. She has no friends and he has made up his mind to leave her. He has made up his mind to leave her, but if she does he says she will never let her have the children, for he will pay the money to get half-crazed at the thought of having her children taken from her and given to this worthless brute.

DEAR MISS DIX—When you see a civilian man and woman walking in a dignified and conventional manner. The woman is wearing a hat and a coat and is carrying a bag. But when you see a man in uniform and a girl, she is hanging on to him with death-cold arms and she is afraid that he would be snatched away from her as if she were a piece of property.

ANSWER—I wish I knew because I have observed the same strange phenomenon myself and wondered at it. It must be that the girls who are so escape they will never have another. But why the sailors and soldiers submit to being made figures of fun by predatory little nitwits, I don't imagine.

HE THAT RESPECTS HIMSELF IS SAFE FROM OTHERS; HE WEARS A COAT OF MAIL THAT NONE CAN PIERCE. —Longfellow.

HINTS ON ETIQUETTE Don't go to visit your husband's brother's son, sweetheart's Army camp without planning. Let him know you are coming, give him time to make the necessary arrangements for you. Ask your Army hostess if you can help. If you don't make plans carefully you may find your soldier coming to see you and you will have a little time with you and that you have no place to stay at night.

HIS PRIVILEGE Ool. Clifton Brown, the new speaker of the House of Commons in England, inherits the questionable privilege of living in a 50-room residence attached to the House of Commons. Around the various rooms are ranged the like paintings of the speakers of the past, and gilt plaques record the services of each holder of the office. In addition, there are more than 100 servants employed at the speaker's house which, by the way, he has to maintain out of his own income.

THE MIRACLE OF MAKING OLD THINGS NEW

A Re-make Revue

PRINCE OF WALES COLLEGE AUDITORIUM JUNE 30th, Afternoon and Evening. Shows starting at 3 P.M. and 8 P.M. Tickets procurable at various ladies' wear stores in Charlottetown. Admission Free. Re-Make Revue is being conducted under the personal direction of Kate Aitken.

OVER 40 EXAMPLES OF RE-MADE GARMENTS WILL BE SHOWN ON LIVING MODELS. ILLUSTRATED BOOKLET Free to all attending these demonstrations. This booklet gives practical working patterns and full instructions on how you can put into practice the examples you have seen at the demonstrations.

LESSON IN ADDITION Given the basis for a complete spring wardrobe — tallour in soft shadow plaid or plain colors, bag in ripple call and bow-toed calf pumps — add crisp white accessories for daytime perfection. Add sophisticated dark touches for cocktail or tea, dark gloves, a flower on the legal, small hat with saucy dark bow — add feminine furbeles for dining-out, tiny white straw hat topped with posies, frilled lace jabot and white gloves and what have you? It all adds up to CHIC.

Living & Leisure The Woman's Realm. He that respects himself is safe from others; He wears a coat of mail that none can pierce. —Longfellow.

BEADS ON RETURN Thick chains of wooden or plastic beads in bright colors with simple summer dresses. In bright pink, bright blue or bittersweet, they make a gorgeous splash of color. The narrow lock in a Chinese translation, this coat-dress of rayon crepe and big satin coolie hat.

DOUBLE DUTY PRINCESS FROCK Wear it as a Sunback or a Jumper — just the smart and useful type of thing that everybody wants for summer — a smooth-cut dress that serves as you will for a cool sun-back or a jumper and in the same pattern, a second piece that you can make up as either blouse or jacket topper or both. It all adds up to one of the most practical outfits you could possibly plan; a real "quickie", to wear for work, play and travel.

BLACK LACE USED TO TRIM SHEER. NEW YORK—Since black lace is romantic and usually flattering, no wonder designers have settled on it as the best sort of garniture for the sheer tulle dress which need not be black in order to be so trimmed but usually is. Under the cobweb lace one inserts a satin ribbon in 80% lovely shade of pink or blue, one gets a stunning effect, especially when the color is repeated for the hat, or the bouquet one wears on one's head. These flowers often have no firmer foundation than a comb which holds them to the hair.

Living & Leisure The Woman's Realm. Includes a crocheted square pattern and a photograph of a woman.

Needlecraft For The Home. Includes a photograph of a woman in a dress and a list of items for sale.
