Decrease Is Indicated In Potato Crop

The fruit and vegetables crop report of the Federal Department of Agriculture has been received. It states that while complete potato acreage by provinces is not yet available, indications are for a 9 per cent decrease in plantings for the Dominion. The eastern provinces show decreases ranging from 7 per cent in Ontario and Quebec, to 30 per cent in the Maritime Provinces, while the western provinces, except Saskatchewan which indicates no change, show an increase from 5 per cent to 18 per cent. Low prices during the past season are attributed to the acreage reduction in eastern districts. The light potato crop in the Prairie provinces and British Columbia last year is no doubt the reason for the increased acreage this season. Planting is late in the east because of adverse weather conditions.

CROP PROSPECTS—Discussing the crop prospects for the Province, Hon. W. M. Lea, Minister of Agriculture states that clover has wintered well and gives evidence of heavy growth. The grain, while going in later than the average, is planted on moist earth and should make very rapid growth. The root crop is going in under especially favorable conditions and should prove to be beneficial for the growth of all vegetable seeds that require abundant moisture. The acreage of potatoes will be somewhat greater than was anticipated earlier in the season, but somewhat smaller than that of last year. These are being planted also under very favorable conditions. While about ten days later than the average last season, they will not be greatly behind that of the season which is ten days or two weeks later than the average over this area. Pastures are most luxuriant, and as the dairy cattle are being turned out in splendid condition, we look for an increased supply of milk and cream at our dairy plants. The production of all classes of live stock is increasing, the farmers being encouraged by the higher prices received for dairy and beef cattle, hogs, and lambs during the past year.

Plague Strikes Famous Forest

LONDON, June 14.—Hundreds of acres of trees in Britain's largest oak forest, the Royal Forest of Dean, are being attacked by a mysterious disease. In many parts of the forest trees are prematurely dying and thousands have had to be cut down. A vast tract of the forest has been stricken with the plague. Trunks are overgrown with moss and fungus, their branches shrivelled and dying. The diseased trees are being cut down at the rate of 300 acres a year. Wherever possible oak trees are being replanted, but large numbers of spruce and fir are being introduced and those threaten to change the whole character of the forest. Covering an area of approximately thirty square miles, the woods were planted immediately after the Napoleonic wars to provide timber for a future navy. The origin of the disease, which is known as heart rot, is obscure, but investigations tend to show that it is connected with the attacks of oak leaf fungus and the oak leaf caterpillar.

MARITIME NURSES WILL ATTEND

MONCTON, June 14.—According to latest advice at least about twenty-five nurses from the Maritime Provinces are expected to attend the International Council of Nurses to be held in Montreal, July 8th, to 15th, next. A special sleeper has been set aside by the Canadian National Railways to take care of nurses travelling over their lines to Montreal.

Health Experts Gather In Force

Truly International is Meeting of Nurse's Council At Montreal in July.

MONTEAL, Que., June 14.—The world-wide nature of nursing will be emphasized at the sixth quadrennial congress of the International Congress of Nursing which meets in Montreal during the week of July 8-13 and which will be attended by some thousands of delegates from all parts of the globe. The largest auditorium in Montreal, the Forum, has been engaged for the general sessions of the congress. The program for the congress has been almost completed and will be split up into three sections—nursing education, public health, and private duty. The international aspect of the congress is evidenced by the chairman and speakers at the round table and sectional conferences, some of whom are announced to be: Miss S. C. Hearder, matron of Bethlehem Royal Hospital, London; Mile. Cecil Mechelynyck, director of the Visiting Nurses' Association of Belgium; Miss Nellie Hawkinson, Dean of the School of Nursing, Western Reserve University, Cleveland; Miss Zefira Majdrovack, Bulgaria; Miss J. An address on the subject of exchange scholarships will be given at this time also by Miss Alice Lloyd Still, matron of St. Thomas's Hospital, London, England. The Tuesday evening general session, perhaps more than any other, will picture clearly the growth of nursing during the past 35 years. The presiding officers will be Mrs. Bedford Fenwick, founder of the International Council of Nurses. There will be greetings from pioneer members of the Council, Miss Lavinia L. Dock, representing the United States; Miss Margaret Brey, Great Britain, and Miss Mary A. Snively, Canada. After a busy morning Wednesday at round table meetings, those attending the Congress will join in a general session at which Miss Annie W. Goodrich, Dean of the School of Nursing, Yale University, will describe the university schools, and "The Nurse as a Citizen" will be the subject of Sister Bertha Wellin, member of the Swedish Parliament and president of the Swedish Nurses' Association. Reports of the affiliated national organizations will be given at the general session of Thursday morning, July 11, and the general session of that evening will be noteworthy because of the subject presented, "The Scientific Method in Social and Health Work," will be the subject of Dr. Julius Tandler, Professor of the University of Vienna and Health and Welfare Commissioner of that city. The second address will be given by Dr. J. L. Biggar, National Commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross Society, who will speak on "The World's Health."

Dressing-Table Fashions

Old-Fashioned Spinnet May Be Adapted-Console and Victorian Draped Types Favored.

No piece of furniture plays such an important part in a woman's life as her dressing table. On the most momentous occasions of her career, it is her guide and philosopher—and almost always her friend. The bride takes a long and reassuring look at her shimmering reflection before she leaves for the church. It is usually the looking-glass that acquaints us with the arrival of our first grey hair—a piece of information that even our nearest and dearest hesitate to impart.

You can read a woman's character by her dressing-table. If it is ugly and inconvenient she is plainly rather foolish, because any defect is so easily rectified in those days. If it is untidy, the brushes not over clean, a little spilt powder, and a bottle of perfume with the stopper missing, she is untidy. A dainty, practical table is sure to be the property of a well-dressed woman.

Originally dressing-tables were simple tables without drawers and with a separate hanging mirror. The most fascinating were some of Sheraton's masterpieces which were fitted up with drop mirrors, patch boxes, and bottles of scent and cognac. These often lived quite happily side by side in case My Lady was over fatigued with the arduous work of her toilet.

One of the best specimens of this kind is in Lady Lever's Art Gallery. It was made by Chippendale in 1769 and is described by him as having drawers, and places for combs, rings, and bottles and boxes." It is in the flamboyant Rococo style, very handsome in a museum, but overpowering in the home.

For one's own use what could be more charming than adapting one of the old-world spinnets? They were always made of the best wood, and sometimes their decoration is beautiful, being either in paint or inlay. Of course the notes have to be taken out and drawers put in their place, and how we all appreciate their length, which gives such ample room for ecstasies! It is best always to have the top covered with glass otherwise it is practically impossible to keep it from being scratched.

A great many women favor the knee-hole shape of dressing-table. For one thing it enables one to get a close view of the glass, and rectify all those little blemishes that otherwise might pass unnoticed—too little powder on the tip of the nose, too much pink on the right cheek. Another tremendous advantage is to be able to get at the drawers on either side without moving from your comfortable chair. While one is dressed there are innumerable little things that are in constant demand. Even the nearest thing sometimes requires an invisible hairpin. Then there are nail polish, handkerchief, scent and rings. It is a great thing to have all these things within easy reach.

Another type that is becoming very popular now is the console table. This would look well in a French room, as the carved and gilded legs and marble top would be so in keeping. They are usually very narrow, so it would be best to hang the glass at a convenient height. Yellow silk cords with heavy tassels could be used for this, and would harmonize rather well.

Quite a lot of people, especially those living in the country, are reverting to the Victorian draped variety of dressing table, and these can look most attractive. They must be

New Machine To Travel 600 Miles An Hour

LONDON, June 14.—A patent has just been applied for to protect an invention which, it is claimed, will make possible the construction of a machine capable of aerial velocities of 600 miles an hour.

The application was lodged under the title—"An improved method of varying the weight of matter," which deals with the greatest problem that has agitated the human mind since Newton first propounded his great theory.

"The scientific theory behind this invention," says W. D. Verschoyle, the inventor, "has been developed by experiment and is largely in accord with the latest mathematical theories of gravitation as propounded by Einstein, and that of the electron by Sir J. J. Thomson."

The essence of the theory is that gravitation is of much the same nature as magnetism, and, like it, is controllable electrically. The means of doing so have been rendered available only within the last few years. It is claimed by Verschoyle that his invention will make possible a machine capable of aerial velocities of 600 miles an hour with no more danger of discomfort than sixty or seventy miles an hour in a modern high-grade motor car. The machine will be able to rise or descend vertically from or to any desired point, although it will have no planes, gas bags or helicopters.

A man will be able to rise straight up from the door of the London garage, cross the Atlantic, transact his business, and return to his garage within twenty-four hours.

"The most recent advances in all least seven important branches of human knowledge," says Verschoyle "will have to be used to the full to perfect the aeromotor, as it will be called."

The new aeromotor will cost about the same as a modern high-grade car.

Present year as compared with last year, and there has been a corresponding increase in the movement of British settlers to Canada. From now on until the end of the year, the decrease in the number of continental Europeans especially from Oriental and Southern Europe, will be even more marked, as the railway companies are to bring to Canada this year only 30 per cent of last year's total of a certain class of workers from the non preferred countries. These 30 per cent relates chiefly to unmarried farm workers, and they were all to be in Canada before May 30. At the same time the reduction in ocean fares for British settlers has had the effect of increasing the number of migrants by 100 per cent of the class paying full fares. Thus the preponderance of settlers this year will be of British or Northern European origin.
