It is quite a number of years since Mr. MacArthur paid a visit to the Island and he was very pleased to be back to the home of his childhood, especially to have the opportunity to go to the brook nearby his old home, and fish a fine catch of brook trout. It brought back memories of by-gone days when he was a school boy and spent many happy times in and around the same familiar stream, and bridge. His wife Mrs. MacArthur's first visit to the Island and enjoyed her very much and hopes to return again in the near future.

Premier King

London newspapers to establish an Imperial war cabinet with representatives of the Dominions as

At his press conference, Mr. King said he opposed a set-up of that kind and political observers here tonight drew attention to an earlier rejection by Prime Minister Churchill who, at the time, said he would welcome, at the appropriate moment, an Imperial conference but could see no advantages in such a permanent war-time organization.

Early morning visitors in Boston Station were aware that something big was on the program today when they saw Boston's official greeter, Stationmaster Joseph Harrison, all dressed up in his silk hat and frock coat. That sartorial outfit is used only to greet special guests.

Standing on the limestone step leading to Number 10, Prime Minister Churchill, with the ever-present cigar held at a jaunty angle in the corner of his mouth, greeted the Canadian leader with a prolonged hand-shake while cameras clicked and flashes flashed.

Shortly after the arrival, New Zealand, the two Dominion leaders conferred for an hour and later, Mr. Fraser said they discussed many problems "and especially the Pacific crisis."

After lunch with Mr. Churchill at 10 Downing and a few minutes spent viewing air raid damage at the House of Commons, Mr. King attended the press conference at the Ministry of Information.

Reasons For Trip

To a roomful of Canadian, British, American and Australian newspapermen, Mr. King listed four reasons for his flight to Britain:—

1. To emphasize Canada's determination to be at Britain's side to the end of the struggle and to the utmost of her effort.

2. To renew a friendship with Mr. Churchill that started in 1907.

3. To tell the British people of Canada's admiration for their indomitable courage.

4. To visit Canadian troops, airmen and seamen in British training centres.

It was an Australian newspaperman who started off the Prime Minister on the question of an Imperial war cabinet.

In reply, Mr. King dealt with existing means of communication among governments of the Empire, particularly between Canada and Britain. He said he firmly believed that important decisions should be made by a government, not by one man and if he had been asked today at the war cabinet meeting to put a definite answer to that question, he would not have been able to do so without consulting his ministers in Ottawa.

No Differences

He said the present system of communicating the facts to Ottawa and having the Canadian Government come to some collective decision, to be relayed back to London—was working effectively. Then he added: "As far as I am aware, there has not been a single point of difference between the Canadian and British governments since the beginning of the war."

In the last war, when an Imperial war cabinet was in operation, there had been "continual differences," he questioned about conscription and replied that it had not been introduced by the Canadian government because "it has found the people so zealous."

National unity in Canada was fundamental to Canadian war effort, he said and no difficulties were being encountered in getting men for the armed forces.

"There is nothing finer than the attitude of French-speaking Mr. King declared, replying to another question. He said the province of Quebec was solidly behind the Canadian and British governments in the prosecution of the war because they appreciated, perhaps more than any other province "to what we owe our liberties."

Asked if there was any truth in the saying the dominions were merely rubber stamps for London, Mr. King replied with a smile: "Just ask my political opponents whether I'm a rubber stamp. I never intend to be."

ADMIT LOSS

Just how near the invading Germans had advanced was not announced—for the Moscow general staff in its mid-day communique spoke again only of bitter fighting in the walled city of Novorod, 100 miles to the south—but the Red army commander of the district, Marshal Klement Voroshilov, spoke bluntly of a "dread danger."

But, he said, however dark the position, the Nazi offensive could and would be broken with the full support of the city's population.

Again and again during the day his proclamation went to the people:—

"With our own hands we have built the powerful factories and workshops of Leningrad, the remarkable buildings and gardens and they will not fall into the hands of the German robbers."

"It is not the first time that the people of Leningrad are repelling the advancing enemy...we can and will stop the bloody horror which 's threatening the Soviet people."

During the day Lozovsky also voiced defiance while admitting that the Germans had made large advances.

Denying alarm or pessimism in the Soviet ranks, he declared the areas occupied by the Nazis were actually small when compared with all Russia.

Only areas "without provisions, containing only wrecked cities, ruined factories...guerrilla warfare and local hatred" had fallen to the Germans, he declared, and he continued with defiance:—

"It could not occur even to a crazy Hitlerite that the German army is capable of smashing the U. S. S. R., Great Britain and then the United States."

Germany, he added, will be beaten "no matter how many months or years we have to fight."

At Leningrad, Marshal Voroshilov and his political associates struggled to keep production going full blast—despite German bombs falling in daylight upon the city and the approach of invading armies—and at the same time to organize more and more detachments of laborers into the people's army supporting the Red troops

North and South Critical

While the situation in the north was plainly most critical for Soviet arms, and far to the south the armies of Marshal Semeon Budenny were striving to escape disaster about the Black Sea port of Odessa and along the Dnieper in the lower Ukraine, the Soviet itself was declared still holding the offensive upon the central front.

Evidence of enormous losses to the invading Germans in many areas was given in military dispatches.

For example, it was stated that in a 10-day battle the German 94th infantry division, which had marched victoriously in Belgium, France and Poland, fell with three-fourths of its man power lost in trying to take a single village in the Ukraine.

(Military observers in London took a gloomy view of the Russian situation, saying that big Nazi advances on the northern wing about Leningrad and in the Ukraine were evident.)

est in any year since 1934.

The curtailment, announced jointly by the office of production management and the office of price control and civilian supply, will start at 26 1-2 per cent for August, September, October and November.

However, since much of August has already elapsed, the cut during the remainder of the four-month period will be somewhat greater than 26 1-2 per cent. During the following three quarters of the year, still sharper reductions will be made progressively.

Sidney Hillman, associate director of the O. P. M., said that immediate steps are being taken to offset the effects of the passenger car curtailment on employment. A joint committee of industry and labor is being formed, he said, to carry out a three-point program.

It proposes:—

Orderly transfer of automobile workers to defence plants now being built by the automotive industry.

Co-operation with the employment services of Michigan and other affected states to obtain jobs for the displaced workers in other defence industries.

Fitting of additional defence work into facilities now devoted to passenger car production.

Followed Canada's Action

OTTAWA, Aug. 21—(CP)—A 26 1-2 per cent curtailment in passenger car production in the United States, ordered today for August, September and October, is in line with, but not so drastic as action taken in Canada.

Last month munitions minister Howe and J. H. Berry, motor vehicles controller, said that production of passenger automobiles for sale in Canada during 1942 would be cut to "less than half the 1940 figure."

QUEEN'S CANADIAN FUND DONATIONS FOR AIR RAID VICTIMS

Repeated bombing raids on British port areas and the industrial midlands has attracted fresh attention to the frightful suffering of the many thousands of civilians in Great Britain who are harried from shelter to shelter and finally driven into the open country by successive raids. Eventually places are found for them all, places of relative security, but their belongings of all kinds are destroyed. The task of emergency feeding alone is difficult. The task of setting them up once more in some quantity of clothing and bedding is much more difficult.

To meet these enormous needs, funds have been started in various parts of the world. Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth has permitted the use of her name in connection with the Dominion campaign, which is officially known as "The Queen's Canadian Fund for Air Raid Victims."

Every dollar contributed to the Queen's Canadian Fund goes without deduction to the Lord Mayor of London for distribution to the homeless and needy.

Contributions from this Province should be forwarded to the Royal Trust Company, Christchurch, which reports the following receipts to date:

South District Deputy President's Association of Rebekah Assembly, I. O. O. F.—$25.00.

Paralysis cases mounting in Western Canada

WINNIPEG, Aug. 21—(CP)—The number of infantile paralysis and sleeping sickness cases in western Canada steadily mounted tonight as leading medical authorities from both eastern Canada and the United States searched for a cause and studied conditions in the affected areas.

Infantile paralysis, which has been reported in all four western provinces, had 668 cases and 10 deaths since the outbreak early in July and there were 209 cases and 17 deaths in the sleeping sickness epidemics of Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

The epidemics centred in Manitoba. Yesterday 30 new cases of sleeping sickness (encephalitis) were reported in the province and earlier in the week the poliomyelitis cases passed the previous record of 536 established five years ago. Eleven persons died from sleeping sickness and nine from infantile paralysis.

Dr. John R. Paul, professor of preventive medicine at Yale University came here by plane for conferences with provincial and Winnipeg health authorities. Earlier Dr. Donald W. Gudakunst, medical director of the United States national foundation for infantile paralysis, studied the current infantile paralysis epidemic.

Dr. J. M. Ulrich, Saskatchewan minister of health, said he has invited Dr. Donald Cameron, Dr. G. Watson and Dr. H. Gibbons of the dominion government's health department at Ottawa to come to Regina and study the epidemics in the province.

Encephalitis fatalities in Regina increased to six and there are nearly 60 cases in city hospitals, he said. The province also has 22 infantile paralysis cases in southern districts but none in Regina.

In Alberta there are 45 poliomyelitis cases and no deaths while British Columbia has four cases and one death. No persons have been stricken by sleeping sickness in Alberta and British Columbia.

Meanwhile the sleeping sickness epidemic in the northwestern states showed some signs of abatement. Minnesota reported there have been 592 cases with 45 deaths since the outbreak there.

The United States senate has approved a resolution authorizing $3,000,000 for investigations into the causes of sleeping sickness in northwest plains states and western Canada.

Dr. Gudakunst recently told Dr. F. W. Jackson, Manitoba deputy minister of health, that the present epidemic of infantile paralysis is a mild type and urged complete rest under constant medical supervision for persons afflicted.

Dr. Paul is making a study of both infantile paralysis and sleeping sickness here in an attempt to discover if there is any relationship between them and how they are communicated.
