THE QUESTIONS THEY ASK A BOY.

(Cleveland Plain Dealer.)
Whenever I come home at night,
An' I've been in a little fight—
The folks have found it out, some way,
An' each one has a word to say;
The first one is my sister Gert;
She squeals: "How dreadful! Are you hurt?"

Well, Baint hurt, as Mother knows,
But she says: "Did you tear your clothes?"

Then Gran-ma says: "To fight is sin,
And that's how wicked men begin."
But Father waits till they're all done,
An says: "Well, did you lick him,
Son?"

A Personal Letter:

We seldom if ever speak about the credit end of our business. Credit is a good thing. The only evil is in its abuse, and we propose so far as we are concerned to stop the abuse. Our business year ends May 1st., and we are now making a complete survey of all accounts on our books, at the same time making some radical changes in this Department. The greater number of our customers pay their bills promptly. A few do not. The accounts of those who do not will be closed and placed by themselves for collection. Remember if you are a regular customer, and paying promptly, you will receive the same generous treatment as heretofore; or if you are not already one, and desire to open a charge acct, furnishing satisfactory references, we shall be pleased to have your business.
