What the Fashionables are Wearing

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With Every Pattern By Annabelle Worthington

Today's model is quite the easiest thing in the world to fashion. The caped collar gives it a smart difference, and is so girlish and pretty. You'll like the rather straight tailored appearance of the skirt. Inverted plaits at the front, provide ample flare.

Deep blue sheer checked woolen made the skirt and bolero jacket. Then there's the delicious blouse of fresh linen in orange-red shade. The tie of crepe de chine tones with the blue.

Or perhaps you don't care about wools? You prefer daughter in wash frocks. Why then the entire dress may be made of linen in lovely new pink shade with white or in French blue with white.

Style No. 857 is designed for sizes 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. Size 8 requires 1 3/4 yards of 39-inch material for bolero and skirt with 3/4 yard of 39-inch material for waist.

Be sure to fill in the size of the pattern. Send stamps or coin (coin preferred.) Price of pattern 15 cents.

Form for requesting a pattern, including fields for Name, Street Address, City, and State.

Why Please Your Husband? Dorothy Dix Says: For Your Own Good

If a Husband Was Worth Having in the First Place, Why Isn't He Worth Holding? Asks Dorothy Dix, Particularly When a Woman's Happiness, Her Financial Well-Being All Depend on Her Husband's Love for Her

Are husbands worth holding? A peeved young woman writes me that she considers all of this advice to wives about working themselves to death trying to throw some sort of spell over husbands that will keep them perpetually fascinated and nailed to their own fre-sides is, in the language of the day, simply the bunk, and that for her part when she gets married if her husband wants to roam she will give him the air and welcome.

Oh, I don't know, a woman takes care of other valuables, why not of her husband? She doesn't leave her diamond brooch or her string of real pearls lying around loose for any light-fingered lady to appropriate, so why not keep a watchful eye on hubby whose price is above jewels?

If a woman is sitting pretty in a good job, she is mighty careful how she handles her boss, so why shouldn't she make as much effort to please her husband as she would an employer? Certainly it is lots worse luck to lose out as a wife than it is to lose out as a stenographer or private secretary or buyer or what not.

Everything that we get in this world has a price tag on it, and the things that are worth having are marked up pretty high. We pay for our luxuries with toil and sacrifice and striving. And the treasures we have won we hold by our intelligence and vigilance.

And this law of life holds in spiritual things just as much as it does in material things. And especially does it hold true in marriage. A happy marriage is bought at a great price. It is only the men and women who are willing to pay over the counter for it with unselfishness, with patience, with self-control, with tenderness and understanding and forbearance who ever get one, and only those who keep married happiness who are willing to give up their ease and comfort to guard it night and day.

It is a hard and strenuous undertaking. No disputing that. So it is not surprising that many women balk at paying the price. It was trouble enough to keep themselves dolled up and with honey on their tongues while they were trying to catch their husbands, and they have no idea whatever of adding to that a lifetime of keeping on their Sunday clothes and their Sunday manners in order to hold him. Perish the thought. Besides, it is a man's duty to be faithful to his lawfully wedded wife and spend his evenings being a freiside companion to her no matter how hard she is to look at nor what dull company.

Hence many women consider that marriage gives them carte blanche to go sloppy and eat onions and grow stupid and to be as peevish and fretful as they like. Their cheerful theory is that there is some conjure about marriage that keeps a man loving the unlovable and desiring to kiss the unkissable.

This optimistic belief is, alas, unsupported by facts. Indeed the evidence is all to the contrary, and to the effect that if Mary wants to keep her little lamb she has to watch her fences and lock her gate at night and feed him angel's food to keep him eating out of her hand. Otherwise he is pretty sure to be lost, strayed or stolen.

Not a few Marys question whether this is worth while, all of this bother about pleasing a husband and keeping the home pastures green. I think it is, provided the man was worth having in the first place. If he wasn't, of course that is another story.

When all is said, marriage is the career for which Nature created women, and it is the one in which they find their greatest happiness. Husband, child, home—the woman who has these has something that satisfies her, and without these she is never content, no matter what else fate gives her.

But no woman can be happy or make a peaceful home for her children to grow up in unless her husband loves her. If he is indifferent to her, if he neglects her, if she is torn with a thousand jealousies, she is the most miserable of all creatures and her home becomes a place of torment. Hence just for her own wellbeing, to keep a husband in love with her and admiring her is worth any effort it costs her, any struggle and sacrifice it may demand.

Then there is the financial side of the subject. A husband is not only a woman's "heart." He is her meal ticket as well. A girl generally marries at the time of life when she would be starting out in some business by which she would make herself self-supporting by which she might possibly make a fortune. Marriage throws her into what is called the nongainful occupation of the housewife, and no matter how hard she works in it she never has any money of her own.

Whatever she has depends upon the generosity of her husband. Often he laps her in luxury, but if she is to keep this she must keep on good terms with him. She must keep him still loving her well enough to talk for her.

Many and many a time we see a divorced wife living niggardly on grudgingly given alimony, while a second wife splurges around in splendor, and we wonder if the first wife does not think that to have kept her husband's love would have paid her even in dollars and cents.

Virtually all husbands are lost through the carelessness of their wives, and the moral of this story is that inasmuch as a woman invests her all in the man she marries, it pays her in every way to keep him. DOROTHY DIX.

John Gresham's Girl By Concordia Merrel

(Continued) "Yes," she broke out, passionately, "and we went yachting, and let it happen!" She caught a breath. "Dad," she added suddenly, "I'm going to him. I don't care if he said a hundred times over that he didn't want to see me. I'm going to him. This minute. . . This is just breaking my heart. . ."

"Very well, dear, if you think it best. . . It is your affair very much more than it is mine. . ."

Less than fifteen minutes later, Lucy was in her little two-seater car, heading for the Hertfordshire house where her disastrous honeymoon had been spent. A suitcase, with a few necessities hurriedly thrown into it was on the seat beside her; and "Daddy," she had said, "if he wants me to stay with him, I shall stay. . ."

When she turned into the drive, her heart was beating almost hurtlingly fast. She pulled up at the steps, and ran up to the door. It was fastened. When she had rung the bell and stood waiting to be admitted, she felt that her heart must be going to suffocate her. The maid who opened the door was surprised to see her, but very welcoming.

"Is Mr. Lee in?" she asked quickly. "Yes, madam," the girl answered. "He's in the drawing-room. I think. . . I'll go and tell him. . ."

"No! I'll go myself. . . Just see that the car is garaged, and my things taken to my room, will you?" She gave the girl her hat and coat, and went along through the family parlour to the drawing-room, opened the door quietly, and went in. Lee was sitting by the fire, elbows on knees, his head in his hands. His attitude was one of deep dejection. The winter afternoon was already going dusty, and his bowed head made a detail-less silhouette against the fire-light.

She closed the door softly, raised a hand to still the wildness of her heart, and said as steadily as she could: "Jim. . ."

One word, but it brought him starting up to his feet, a smothered cry breaking from his lips.

Across the room their eyes searched through the deepening dusk, met, and held. Then: "I told your father to tell you. . ."

"I love you, too," she answered. There was silence again. Then: "I love you enough to know that I mustn't let you love me," he said. "And I love you enough to know that you can't stop me," she said. He went on quickly: "I've done some things that you could never really overlook. Never really forgive. . . Looking back, it's like a dream, and a mighty bad one. . ."

My Back Would Always Ache Something Awful

Nova Scotia Lady Found Relief In Dodd's Kidney Pills Mrs. Albert Singer Speaks Highly Of Canada's Premier Kidney Remedy

Georgetown, N. S., March 2.—(Special)—Thousands of women who seemed destined to a life of frequent suffering, have been freed entirely from their ailments by using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mrs. Albert Singer, a well-known resident of this place, suffered with a lame back. She writes:— "Dodd's Kidney Pills are a great remedy for women and men who are troubled with kidney disease or lame back. For a long time my back used to ache something awful. I got a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills and they gave me great relief."

You have no idea what a difference Dodd's Kidney Pills will make to you. They are great blood enrichers. They can do nobody any harm. When you consider they have been a household remedy for nearly half a century and the thousands of women, men, and children, who have derived benefit from using them, you must be sure they are a good medicine.

that? Doesn't it make a difference? Suppose I realize that it isn't a question of forgiveness at all, but just a recognition of something that has been and is past. . . ? Doesn't all that make a difference? Doesn't it wipe out all question of whether I will, or won't forgive in the future?"
