THE QUEEN'S COUNTY GUARDIAN

It pays to buy in this Province. Rev. E. J. Rattee, Malpeque, will conduct the services in Zion Church tomorrow morning and evening.

The Charlottetown Arena will have a regular skating with band this afternoon.

Any smart boy with a fair education can secure permanent employment to learn office work and run errands by applying at Guardian office at once.

While the end of the season fast approaching the patrons of the Charlottetown Arena are reminded of the skating with band this afternoon. An excellent sheet of ice is ready.

The Comedy Drama "Breaking his Bonds" will be played in Rustico Hall on Monday March 25. The 82nd Regt. Band has been engaged for the occasion. Doors open at 6.30. Play begins 7.45.

Rev. J. F. Floyd, Charlottetown, will occupy the pulpit of the Central Christian Church tomorrow morning and evening. Morning at 10 o'clock. "The New Jerusalem." Evening at 7.30. "Compelling People to Love the Church." Baptism at close of evening service.

The funeral of the late Miss Jennie Martin, sister of J. J. Martin, Stipendiary Magistrate of Charlottetown, took place Wednesday afternoon and was largely attended. The remains were taken from the homestead where her mother, sister, and brother reside, to the Belfast Presbyterian Cemetery, where services were conducted by Rev. A. J. McNeill. The pallbearers were: Judge McDonald, D. K. Morrison, Peter McQueen, Charles A. McKenzie, D. A. Martin, William McLaren.

The Pathe Weekly shown at the People's Theatre last evening was by far the most interesting that has yet come to hand. It showed The Emperor of Germany receiving the King and Queen of Spain, the reunion of the blues and the grey, and their old fashioned berberc, at Memphis, Tenn; the annual convocation of the Mystic order of Veiled Prophets held at Washington, D. C., the peasants of Sicily fleeing with their grape crops before the lava flow from Mt. Etna. The visit of King George V to his Scottish subjects, and last but not least the latest fashions in hairdressing at the French capital Paris, France. The other pictures on the program were as usual good and full of interest, the hall was comfortable indeed.

The concert at Cornwall Hall recently in aid of the rural telephone line between York Point and Meadow Brook, realized for the telephone committee the sum of $65.00. In view of the prevailing condition of the roads which caused other disappointments, the result is most gratifying to the energetic committee. This committee is composed of eight earnest workers who are: D. W. White, President; Harry Hyde, James Drake, Hammond Crosby, John McLean, Hector Murchison, Will Crosby and Gordon McMillan. In the report of the concert in a recent issue it was inadvertently omitted to make reference to a solo by Harry Hyde and a recitation from Drummond by George White. These two numbers were greatly appreciated and the performers materially assisted in the pleasure of the evening.

J. H. ANDERSON

Its worth is regarded by us, not only as a genuine pleasure and a becoming courtesy, but as a civic gain. You were one of the earlier seers to see the vision of a rising town at the erst-undiate centre and you have given uninterruptedly your time and talents to laying the foundations and shaping its institutions.

You have been intimately associated with its industrial progress while you have labored for its moral and intellectual betterment with conspicuous perseverance. You have been a fearless champion of law and order, a loyal supporter of church and school, a consistent advocate of temperance and moral reform and one to whom any institution making for the good of humanity took for support.

We congratulate you on the public recognition of your merits which we call to a position of great trust and responsibility implies your long live to adorn the office with the mental gifts and integrity of character which lent lustre to your public life in Kensington.

We beg you to carry a souvenir of our happy relations in the past and a token of our good wishes for the future.

The presentation was a handsome leather lined travelling bag, the best obtainable, and following it Mr. Anderson rose to reply. This he did with that fluency for which he is noted and with an added tone of earnestness and feeling.

Following this an excellent program of instrumental and vocal music was rendered interspersed with bright speeches. The program included a well balanced male chorus, recitation by Ella McMahon, solo by Miss Morrison, duet, "Maying," and a solo by Thomas Donahoe, and was appropriately concluded by the rendition of "Home Sweet Home" by the quartette. The accompanists of the organ were Miss Marnie Bentley, Miss Morrison and Miss McArthur.

The speeches were all eulogistic of Mr. Anderson to a marked degree and many and varied were the well deserved commendations. References to his high personal character, his popularity, his true worth as a man and citizen and his earnest regard for all that tended towards the uplift of the town and the local industry which it served. Among the subjects touched on by the speakers, a number of whom were among the most prominent in Kensington and the surrounding country, were citizenship, education, law and order, dairying society, etc. Thomas McNeill, President of the Kensington Dairying Co., in his address, and Mr. Anderson's invaluable services in that connection as also W. McN. Simpson, a former president of the same concern.

The speaker who covered a number of other subjects referred to were laudatory in their praise of Mr. Anderson and his willingness to labor to advance the interests of anything which might improve conditions in any matter in which a better state of things was either necessary or possible.

At the supper served in a large number sat down to a well provisioned table at which the party lingered until the late hours. Letters of regret from a number of Summerside citizens who found it impossible to attend were read.

Kensington, being regarded as an exceedingly sharp, wide awake business community, a few among the inland towns and some to refer to if any of the seaport towns in business activity in the Province, was quick to realize the loss of a good citizen and equally prompt in tendering to him such recognition of his past services as was possible.

HER GROWING GLORY

FAIR TRESSES ADMIRRED SINCE EARLIEST TIMES.

The Feminine Sex Has Always Realized the Charm Attached to Hair From the Egyptian Maiden to the Lady of the Twentieth Century—Girls, Wives and Widows Have Been Distinguished by Coiffures.

The Bible simply teems with allusions to the luxuriant tresses of the fair daughters of the East, and there is little doubt that at an early period in the world's history women awakened to the fact that a well-tended head was a very potent attraction, and had a recognized market value. Jewish women were particularly famed in this respect, and employed female barbers, pliers, horns, and trowels, prepared their clients for conquest. These jeweled horns were generally made of the precious metals, and the position denoted the condition of the wearer.

A married woman had it fixed on the right side of the head, a widow on the left, and she who was still an unmarried maiden on the crown. Over the horn the veil was thrown coquettishly. Assyrian women delighted in long ringlets confined by a band of metal, and the men were not above the weakness of plaiting gold wire with their hair.

Rimmel, in "The Book of Perfumes," relates a curious anecdote of Mausolus, King of Caria, who turned his people's fondness for flowing locks to account when his exchequer required replenishing. "Having first had a quantity of wigs made and stored in the royal warehouses, he published an edict compelling all his subjects to have their heads shaved."

A few days after it, the monarch's agents went round, offering them the perukes destined to cover their denuded heads, which they were delighted to buy at any price. It is not surprising that Artemisia could not console herself for the loss of such a clever husband, and that she spent some of her lamented lord's ill-gotten revenues in building such a monument to his memory that it was counted one of the wonders of the world.

The Egyptians were also partial to wigs, some of which are still preserved in the British Museum. Ladies wore a multitude of small plaits and jeweled headpieces resembling peacocks, and other ornaments which contrasted with their dark tresses with brilliant effect. The coiffure of a princess was remarkable for its size and the abundance of animal, vegetable, and mineral treasures with which it was adorned.

Greenian sculpture affords us the opportunity of studying the different models in favor in that country, and it is astonishing to find what a variety of methods were adopted by the belles of ancient Greece for enhancing their charms. Loose knot fastenings by a clasp in the form of a grasshopper was a favorite fashion. Curls of network, metal mitres of different designs, and simple bands, and sometimes chaplets of flowers, all confined at different periods, the luxuriant locks of the Helens, Penelopés, and Xanthippé of ancient times.

It was a common custom among heathen nations to consecrate to their gods the hair when cut off, as well as that growing on the head, and it was either consumed on the altar, deposited in temples, or hung upon a tree by a clasp in the form of a grasshopper was a favorite fashion. Curls of network, metal mitres of different designs, and simple bands, and sometimes chaplets of flowers, all confined at different periods, the luxuriant locks of the Helens, Penelopés, and Xanthippé of ancient times.

When her husband came back, she kept her word, and offered her hair in the temple of Cyprus. Another remarkable instance is that of Xerxes, who, according to the historians, cut his hair, put it in a casket of gold set with jewels, and consecrated it to Jupiter Capitolinus.

The hair of the head and beard appear to have been held in great respect by most nations. Orientals especially treat the hair which falls from them with superstitious care, and bury it so that no one shall use it to their prejudice.

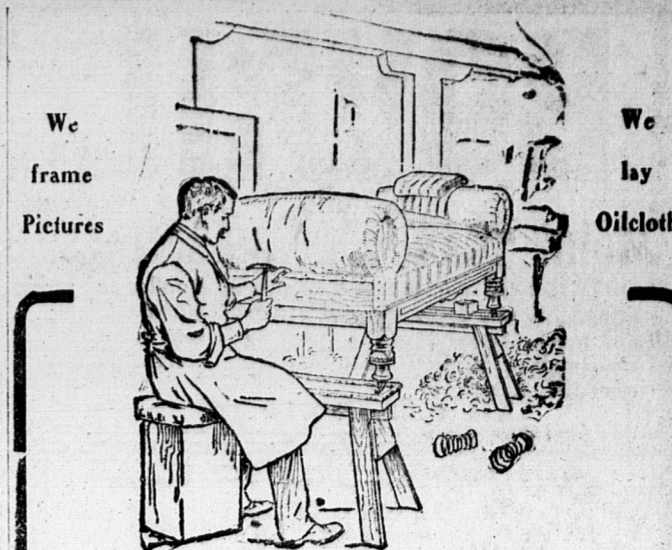

Roman matrons generally preferred blonde hair to their own ebony tresses, and resorted to wigs and dye when nature was unkindly. The Britons, before they mixed with other nations, wore a fair-haired race, and early writers refer to their washing their auburn tresses in water boiled with lion's head to increase the reddish color.

Bonnet is described with flowing locks which fell upon her shoulders; but after the Roman invasion the hair of both men and women in England followed the fashion of the conquerors. During the middle ages feminine headgear underwent many changes. Golden nets and linen bands closely pinned round the hair and chin were followed by steeply-shaped erections and horned head-dresses in a variety of shapes and later became the coil or the French cap to be seen in the portraits of the unhappy Mary Stuart. Those who were unmarried had their hair simply braided and embellished with knots of ribbon, strings of pearls, or nature's most beautiful adornment for the maiden—sweet-scented flowers.

Successful In One Line. "That fellow will never succeed at anything." "What's the matter with him?" "As nearly as I can figure it out, he's lazy. I know of six jobs that he has held within the past three months." "Well, he seems to be pretty successful as a job finder."

A Successful Suit. "So you were successful in your efforts to break your uncle's will in which he left you only $20,000?" "Yes; I won out easily." "And how much did you finally get?" "After paying the lawyers I took down $3,900."

Quebec Man Who Suffered from Head aches, Run-down System and Kidney Disease Finds Quick Relief and Permanent Cure. COIN ROND SUR RICHELIEU Vercheres Co., Que., Mar 22—(Special)—More evidence crops up in the vicinity every day to prove that for run-down people there is no remedy so quick and sure as D.D.'s Kidney Pills. Among the many who have come forward with statements is Octave Colicome, a well-known resident, whose testimony can easily be corroborated. "Before using D.D.'s Kidney Pills I suffered always from headaches," Mr. Colicome states, "in fact my whole system was out of order. D.D.'s Kidney Pills cured me, and I have had no return of any of my old troubles." D.D.'s Kidney Pills are popular all over this country, because they not only cure the pains and aches of the different diseases springing from disordered kidneys, but also give new life and energy all over the body. They do this naturally. They cure the kidneys. Cured kidneys strain all the impurities out of the blood, and the pure blood carries nutriment instead of poison to all the nerves and muscles. You have never heard of a person D.D.'s Kidney Pills harmed. You hear of thousands who have been benefited by them.

Advertisement for a Little While. A LITTLE WHILE. Dedicated to my friend, N. R. B. Not now, oh God! The flowers bloom so fair. The earthly music sounds so sweet. A little while to wander, here and there, A little while, and then let me forget. Not now, oh God! The flowers fade away. The music notes have sweeter accents still. A little while the earthly pleasures stay. A little while I feel a joyous thrill. Not now, oh God! The flowers bloom again. The recompense of music that has gone. A little while, the sorrow's eve I ken. Is but a forecast of a joyful dawn. —M. St. Macintosh.

Advertisement for Farm for Sale. A young Calif. wife tells about coffee. "It was hard to drop Mocha and Java and give Postum a trial, but my nerves were so shattered that I was a nervous wreck and of course that means all kinds of ills. Tea contains caffeine—the same drug found in coffee and is equally harmful." "At first I thought bicycle riding caused it and I gave it up, but my condition remained unchanged. I did not want to acknowledge coffee caused the trouble for I was very fond of it." "About that time a friend came to live with us, and I noticed that after he had been with us a week he wouldn't drink his coffee any more. I asked him the reason. He replied, 'I have not had a headache since I left off drinking coffee, some months ago. till last week, when I began again, here at your table. I don't see how anyone can like coffee, anyway, after drinking Postum!'" "I said nothing, but at once ordered a package of Postum. That was five months ago, and we have drunk no coffee since, except on two occasions when we had company, and the result each time was that my husband could not sleep, but lay awake and tormented talked half the night. We were convinced that coffee caused his suffering, so he returned to Postum, convinced that the coffee was an enemy, instead of a friend, and he is troubled no more by insomnia." "I, myself, have gained 8 pounds in weight, and my nerves have ceased to quiver. It seems so easy now to quit the old coffee that caused our aches and ails and take up Postum." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason." Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.
