United Nations Council Awaits Yugoslav Move

By LARRY HAUCK

NEW YORK, Aug. 22 — (AP) — Delegates to the United Nations Security Council reserved comment tonight on the United States ultimatum to Yugoslavia which threatens to throw the entire plane-shooting incident into the hand of the Council and engender a bitter showdown on the veto power.

It was generally assumed by the delegates that the United States — if Yugoslavia failed to meet terms of the demands—would bring the case under chapter VI calling for "pacific settlement of disputes."

The Council could recommend "appropriate procedures or methods of adjustment." Any such decision would be subject to veto by the Big Five.

Dean Acheson, acting Secretary of State, was expected to argue the issue personally before the Council with the help of Herschel Johnson, permanent United States representative. Mr. Acheson was reported busy in Washington preparing the case and was expected to ask the Council to go into emergency session if Marshal Tito rejects the ultimatum.

Should the Council fail to settle the case under Chapter VI, the only remaining recourse would be to Chapter VII covering "action with respect to threats to peace, breaches of the peace, and acts of aggression."

If the case should progress this far, the U.N. would have two possible courses of action:—

1. Invoke sanctions, economic or diplomatic or both.
2. Order the use of armed force by members of the U.N.
