LABOR DAY.
 To the thoughtfulness of Sir John Thompson and the growing influence and importance of the labor organizations of the country we owe the fact that since 1894 Labor Day has taken its place among the statutory holidays of the Dominion. Its adoption in the United States was some years earlier, so that in creating a special holiday in honor of labor Canada followed in the wake of the great Republic. The same day being chosen for observance by both countries, the holiday has become general throughout almost all the North American continent in which there are so many millions of workers.

In all monarchical countries the birthday of the reigning Sovereign is a public holiday, set apart for rest, recreation and for honor to the head of the state. This is proper and well enough in its way, and conducive to patriotism, but the honest industry of a nation collectively is always of more consequence than any single individual, however high his station may be. By observing Labor Day we recognize the dignity and the worth of industry. We express our sense of the fact that labor is the source of all wealth, of all progress, and a prime requisite to the welfare and happiness of the world. In Canada nearly all are workers. In the field, the mine, the workshop, the factory, in the lumber camp, the fisheries, in sailing the ships, driving the trains, in the store, the office, the household, the work goes on, each performing some necessary part in contributing to the supply of the general wants.

And after all the workers are the happiest people in the world. We can readily see that not so much in anger as for the welfare of the race was the command given, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread." To be busily employed from day to day in useful work adapted to the taste and inclination of the worker is one of the privileges and solaces of life to the normal human being endowed with good health. It is only when compelled to toil beyond one's strength, or too continuously, or in some distasteful calling, or when toil is insufficiently paid for, that work becomes irksome. Yet the occasional holiday was always a necessity. It becomes more so as owing to the conditions our time the stress of work becomes more pressing. It is even truer now than in the days when the proverb was written that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."
 And what is true of Jack is true of Jill as well, and of the father and mother of both, especially the mother; for there is no class we know of who have so few genuine holidays as the mothers, especially in the country households. We trust that Labor Day may be this year and from year to year, a day of healthful rest and recreation as far as possible. The observance has now become general in the cities, and this year a good program of sports has been prepared. We trust that many of our country friends may come to the city on Monday to witness them. But we trust that among those who do not come, in the villages and country districts as well, there may be a general observance of the day set apart by law in honor of the workers.

BRITISH EMIGRATION.
 The volume of British emigration this year is larger than for years past. In the seven months ended with 31st July last 202,855 emigrants left the ports of the United Kingdom for other lands. Of these 102,030 were British subjects and 100,825 were foreigners or persons whose nationality was not known. Within the seven months 41,292 of the total emigration from the British Isles came to Canada. This is 15,000 in excess of the number for the like period of last year. A portion of these no doubt have the United States as their ultimate destination, but every year an increasing number settle in this country. Every year also an increasing number of the British emigrants who sail for the United States in the first instance afterward settle in Canada.

As to their first destination abroad it is remarked that nearly 90 per cent of those emigrating from Ireland, 40 per cent of those from Scotland and 35 per cent of those from England go to the United States. Emigration from the British Isles to Australia has greatly fallen off, while that for Cape Colony and Natal has increased to 21,311—nearly double the number of last year. This movement to South Africa seems likely to increase in the years to come and is of the most vital importance in the way of establishing the preponderance of the English-speaking races there. Immigration will yet solve the race question in Cape Colony, Orange River and the Transvaal as it has solved it in Canada.

THE EDITOR'S MAIL.
SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

The Guardian:
DEAR SIRS—We are very pleased to tell that our advertisement in your paper has proved to be a splendid salesman. We give it credit for a large share of the success our "Headlight" matches attained, which has been phenomenal! Of course the match itself repeats sales, for where it is once used it is always used, it is without question the best parlor match ever put on this market.
 We have heard the objection that it goes out too easily in the wind, but it is not intended to use outdoors. It is distinctly a parlor match without sulphur.
 Our "Telegraph" sulphur match is for outdoor use. And yet with all the good qualities these matches possess, we are only able to make them known through you, and you are doing the work admirably, as our large and increasing sales conclusively prove.
 Yours Truly,
