eral times. He may have told them that that fellow was strong in the back and weak in the mind and didn't care to eat us wild geese; at any rate when I threw the last few ears they took his word for it and did not attempt to fly. My reason for throwing the corn at him was to prove to my own satisfaction that he had seen me throw it before, as when taking a bag of corn out, I sometimes stood still and throw it amongst them. This did fellow's confidence in the safety of this place will be fully explained to you when I say that he actually dodged some of these ears. Yet it took him fully fifteen minutes to convince his family that there was no danger. The goose, his mate needed no introduction to an ear of corn; she started eating the very first opportunity, but the four young were dreadfully shy of those golden ears of corn, and it did imuse me to see h m introducing them to it. With one eye focused on me he would reach down and pick up the ear in his beak, shake it until he got that grain loose, then reach out and drop this kernel at the feet of one of these big babies. But when he did get them started they cleaned off nearly every cob before it came his turn to start in. Yes, as hungry as he evidently was, he stood guard until the other five ravenous appetites were relieved, then he willingly took the leavings. To prove they had come over the top for a long way, these six geese ate every kernel of these twelve small ears, at the one meal. Then after going in the pond for a few minutes they came out on the green sod to rest and did not fly around for a day or two.

In about ten days they were as tame as ours and I concluded we could drive them under the net. So one day when all was quiet and no strangers about, I asked my mother-in-law's daughter to help me and she cheerfully consented. We unrolled enough binding twine to go clear across the pond; then as she held one end and I the other, stretching it about two feet above the water, we drove them quietly towards the net. Finally ours, which are educated to that purpose, led the way, the six followed them in and the trap door fell. I, being so confident of getting them, had six tags already stamped, and they were in my pocket. So I opened the door and let our geese walk out. The six others huddled together in the corner of the pen, but as I approached the gander opened his wings and faced me. I at once overpowered him and clamped a tag on his hind leg, then took him to the door and let him go. Did he fly away to the lake? No! He did not fly two rods, but lit about twenty-five feet from the door, and his beautiful breast just heaved as he called aloud for his loved ones, "A-honk! A—honk! A—honk!" The interpretation is, "Come on! Come on! Come on!" As I was catching number two I heard a commotion at the door;; I looked around, and this lady who was holding it preferred being on the inside looking out, for this old gander had come back and was fighting the wire to get in at me. To be brief, he never left the door until every one of his family was liberated.

Now remember, I am telling you about the same species of bird that I once crawled all the buttons off my wishbone wishing to get a shot at him with a high-powered rifle, fully three fields away; and, like thousands of other men who have tried the same plan, I seldom succeeded. But now he was trying to get where could strike me with his wings. Well, for his faithfulness I brought him and put a tag on each of his legs, making seven tags for the six geese. On each of these seven tags we stamped the following verse of Scripture: "No good thing will He withhold from them that walk uprightly. Psalms 84:11." We named this gander Sir John Moore, after a noted, self-sacrificing General I have often heard father speak of

They all migrated in December and the first week in March I received the following letter:

To whom it may concern:
Outside of tag "Write Box 48, Kingsville Ontario." Inside of tag, "No good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly."
These words were found on a band on a wild male goose's leg.

The gander was captured March 1st, 1918, and I am doing as the words on the band requested.

He was certainly a nice one, weighing twelve pounds and as fat as butter.

I certainly would be pleased to hear from you telling me how, when, where and why the band was put on his leg, and I wish you would please tell me all you can tell me about the habits of the wild fowl up in your country.

They come down here in December, but the winter was so cold this year that they went farther south; but they came back in February and are still here. They feed in the rivers and creeks at night, and at sunrise they fly out in the wheat fields for green wheat until sundown, and then go back to the rivers. They leave here for the far north about the middle of March.

I remain waiting for your reply,
LINDEN ARCHIBALD,
Kennedyville, Kent. Co.,
Maryland, U.S.A.

I at once wrote Mr. Archibald and he kindly returned the tag.

On March 19th as we were eating dinner one of my boys spoke up quickly, and pointing out the window exclaimed, "Look, father! Look!" And sure enough, here was Sir John Moore and four out of five of his family standing in front of the window eating corn, the two bright tags glittering on his legs.

This Moore family stayed together nearly all the time they were here, the five of them going to the lake at night and returning early next morning. Fortunately it was one of the young that got killed, hence the family was not broken up.

Now and then during the month of April the Johnson and Smith youngsters, yes, and sometimes the McDonalds and Jones' and other young Canadians too numerous to mention, would call on these three young Moores and all would go about the premises together, apparently playing "Pussy wants a corner," "Drop the handkerchief," "Coward, coward, can't catch me," and so forth. But I never knew these, or any other young Canada geese, to be gone from their parents over an hour at a time during their stay here in March and April and I am confident these families do not break up until they reach the nesting ground.

Well, about the 25th of April, 1918, Sir John Moore and his family disappeared, and in August I received the following letter:

Fort George, Hudson Bay
June 26th, 1918

Dear Mr. Miner,—

Enclosed find four tags which I received this morning from an Indian; and as our boat is just leaving for the South, I am sending them to you at once. He tells me an interesting thing about these tags, as he says there was a flock of seven geese came to their decoys, and this Indian and another got four of them, each of which had a tag on it. One of the others killed by another hunter had two tags on.

There was a good flight of geese this spring, but not very many were killed.

The wavies, or snow geese, were very numerous this spring. The Indians say that they have not seen so many for a long time.

Hoping the tags reach you safe, I remain,

Yours sincerely,
L. G. MAVER,
Fort George, Hudson Bay

The reader can scarcely imagine my feelings when I read the message that each one of these tags contained: "No good thing will be withhold from them that walk uprightly." This was proof that Sir John Moore's family was exterminated. It was not that I am opposed to the Indians getting the geese; no, no. It was only the thought of my special pets all being killed. As for the Indians and Esquimaux getting these birds, I believe all honest, conscientious, thinking men will agree with me that there are no people in America who are more justified in shooting them than these natives up at Icicle Junction with their backs to the wall trying to exist. Personally I feel that the best missionary work I have ever done in my life is the thousands of geese that I have fattened up and permitted to go back to that isolated country where they were hatched.

Although these tags were mailed from Fort George, Hudson Bay, these Indians may have brought them for three or even five hundred miles, Fort George being their trading post.

Now I have given you quite a collection of rough, unadulterated and unpolished facts about the ways of our lovely Canada geese. And when I call them lovely remember I do not mean because they are so uniform in color; nor is it because they are mostly all Canadian born. Not at all. It is on account of their winning ways and I really want to say Godly principles that in many respects could point the finger of shame at us human beings. This is why I call him "our beautiful Canada goose;" and if five per cent. of us Canadians really knew him, the other ninety-five per cent. could not, or would not try to, keep him off one corner of our Union Jack.

MONTREAL, Feb 9—Strength in the late stages of the previous session failed to continue on the Montreal stock exchange today and a sell-off resulted in another setback. A little resistance to the selling movement was displayed in the late minutes of the day's session in particular and the market did not entirely reflect the heavy decline in Wall Street where heavy waves of selling forced listings still lower from the high levels touched in the advance earlier in the week.

Today's selling was more or less anticipated by dealers on the street, with the stock exchange regulation bill scheduled to make its appearance before congress in the United States. Market commentators were also forecasting a secondary reaction in prices before the advance could be resumed and many financial houses advised lightening of committments.

NEW YORK, Feb 9—Leading currencies were stable in terms of the United States dollar on the foreign exchange markets today.

Except for a brief period during the morning when it sold 1-16 better than yesterday, the Canadian dollar remained stationary throughout the session at a discount of ⅞ precent.

Sterling moved within a range of about a cent and closed at $5.02, up ⅛ of a cent. The French franc, closing at 6.43⅛ cents, was off .00⅛ of a cent. Earlier it had been a trifle higher.

MONTREAL, Feb 9—Foreign exchange currencies moved narrowly on Montreal foreign exchanges today and at the close of trading the list had an irregular appearance. Both the pound sterling and the United States dollar held gains while the French franc was unchanged.

The pound closed with a gain of 12-16 cent over last night's close, trading at $5.06⅝ while the dollar advanced 1-1⅛ percent to ⅜ percent premium. The franc continued at 6.49 cents.

WINNIPEG, Feb 9—Export sales of Canadian wheat failed to reflect in operations on the Winnipeg grain exchange today and prices were depressed by fresh downturns at Chicago. Closing quotations were ¼ to ⅜ cent lower.

May wheat finished at 66⅝ with July at 69⅝ cents. Trading was rather sluggish. Export interests were credited with scattered buying orders while Chicago traders were noticeably on the selling side.

Between 400,000 and 550,000 bushels of Canadian wheat was reported sold for foreign shipment but its influence on trading was small. Threat of rain over the United States southwest was a bearish influence at Chicago.

Prices in the southern pit ruled one to 1¼ cents lower, while Liverpool wheat ended unchanged to ¼ cent up.

Wheat exports from the southern hemisphere for the week reached a total of slightly more than 6,000,000 bushels, with Argentina supplying about two thirds. Compared with a year ago Australian and Argentine shipments were down about 5,500,000 bushels.

Cash markets were slow, and coarse grain values tended slightly easier.

CHICAGO, Feb 9—Possibilities that long-continued drought would be broken tonight in western Kansas and western Nebraska put wheat values on the downgrade today.

Setback in prices of securities had a further disturbing influence on the wheat market and on other grains as well. Much of the selling of grains was associated with expected bearish results of a special message from President Roosevelt to Congress relative to government control of stock exchanges.

Wheat closed unsettled ⅝ to 1¼ under yesterday's finish, corn ⅝ to 1¼ down, oats at ⅜ to cent decline, and provisions varying from 5 cents set back to a rise of 7 cents.

MINING

(Canadian Press)

TORONTO, Feb 9—The mining section of the Toronto stock exchange turned moderately weak this afternoon after developing a firming tendency in the early part of the day. Interlisted gold shares reflected a state of nervousness on the New York market over coming regulations affecting exchange operations and cheaper issues turned soft with them. Volume was better than a million shares.

McIntyre registered the only important loss, dropping back to 40.25 for a net loss of 1.75. Dome backtracked 90 cents to 35.35. Lake Shore lost 50 cents to 44.50. Pioneer 40 cents to 12.10 while Teck and Hargreaves added 5 cents each. Bralorne 20 cents and Hollings closed unchanged.
