BURGESS BEDTIME

trouble at all he caught and killed it. Later he caught another. He felt that Snakes were as harmless as Mice and Grasshoppers and others whom he hunted without fear.

Then one day he was hunting in the upper part of the Old Pasture where there was a ledge of rock. As he stepped out from the bushes into the open a Snake, a larger Snake than he had yet caught, half coiled on the rock. This one didn't try to glide away as the others had done. Instead it faced him with head lifted a little and drawn back. It stared at him with unwinking eyes and in them was nothing whatever of fear. And all the time there was a strange, loud, buzzing sort of rattle. At first he couldn't tell where it came from. Then he noticed this fellow's queer tail was lifted and being shaken fast, very fast indeed. He decided the noise came from this. He had an uncomfortable feeling that it was a warning. Just as the stamping by those small Skunks had been a warning.

The young Fox stood still. He was remembering, and he was thinking. This Snake was a different kind from those he had caught. He was bigger, but not big enough to look at all harmful. Neither had those two young Skunks looked harmful. But they had not been afraid, and this fellow wasn't afraid.

The young Fox shook his head. "One who isn't afraid must have a reason for not being afraid. I'll leave him alone until I find out why he isn't afraid," said he to himself. He turned back into the bushes and sat down to watch. Now that he was out of sight that strange noise ceased. "That was a warning. I'll remember if I ever hear it again," thought he, and trotted off. He had met the first test of what he had learned the hard way. That Snake was one of the poison folk, a half-grown son of Buzztail the Rattlesnake.

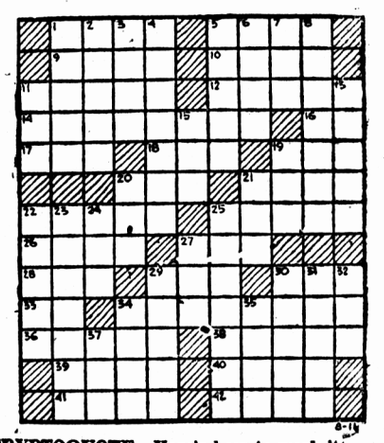
Yesterday's Answer



DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R, is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

A Cryptogram Quotation

O A M, N H W F G A, T A L A S Z N B V F E H F N; V A W H B V A J M V A L F G A, K Y M B Q H S A J M V A T H N A — B Z F X M.

Yesterday's Cryptoquote: GIVE UNTO ME, MADE LOWLY WISE, THE SPIRIT OF SELF-SACRIFICE—WORDSWORTH.
