fore declining. "But the experience of the last four years has shown that Government war expenditure on a sufficient scale can produce full employment."

"There might be a tendency to conclude that Government expenditure for other than war purposes "at a high enough level" would be enough to prevent depression in peacetime. However, that "does not give sufficient weight to other important conditions existing during a war."

"The need for war goods and services has by common consent been given preference over every other interest," the report continued. "The public has been willing to do whatever is necessary to obtain the maximum output for military purposes."

"The Government's willingness to spend the large amounts of money involved in the war program has been a necessary and important feature but even more important has been the unity of national purpose which has produced such remarkable economic results over the past four years."

"After the war is over, the present driving stimulus to maximum employment and production will be removed."

"If we are to maintain full employment in peacetime, we must substitute other objectives for the current will to win the war. Broadly speaking, our goals should be to provide a rising standard of living and to contribute to the establishment of a world economy which will remove the threat of war."

Mr. Towers reported the Bank of Canada had a net profit of $9,097,478 from 1942 operations, after providing for contingencies and reserves. Payment of a dividend of $25.00 on capital stock held by the Finance Minister left $5,872,478 compared with $3,388,285 in 1941.

Chartered bank holdings of Dominion and Provincial Government securities rose $485,000,000 in 1942, mostly accounted for by the Dominion Government's selling of the amount of such certificates outstanding at last Dec. 31 was $440,000,000.
