Advocates Same Style of Rugby In Both Counts

MONTREAL, November 16.—The sporting editor of the Montreal Star received the following letter a few days ago and as it bears directly on a matter that has been eliciting considerable attention in the "ball" circles down here of late, it is printed in full:

"Having read with interest the various arguments pro and con regarding Canadian Rugby the writer thought perhaps his ideas on the subject being from the American point of view might be interesting.

"It appears that there are three types of arguments presented; one favoring a return to the old game of English rugby and another some changes and modifications in the present rules so as to eliminate injuries, and the third favoring an adoption of the American game.

"As regards the English game of rugby the writer is ignorant. As far as changing the rules is concerned in order to eliminate injuries it appears unnecessary. The very ruggedness of the game is what makes it appeal so strongly to both player and spectator. If the players enter the game in the proper physical condition and with the proper knowledge of the game and plays, the danger of serious injury is slight. Accidents are bound to occur in any branch of athletics or business. Personally, the writer would feel much sater in a game of rugby than he would crossing a busy part of Sherbrooke street. The writer has seen several games of Canadian rugby as played by the Canadian universities and colleges and has tried to learn as much as possible about the game in order to more thoroughly enjoy it and so as to effect a compromise between it and the American game.

"The present game, judging by hearsay, regards English rugby and his own acquaintance with the American game, is a cross between the two. He does not know what good or bad features have been lost from English rugby but feels quite positive that in not having the forward pass the Canadian game has missed that one vital thing that has made the American game so wonderfully popular the last few years.

"Before the adoption of the forward pass the American game was as severely criticized because of the excessive number of injuries as is the Canadian game now. With its adoption strategy replaced by strength speed replaced weight and a situation was created wherein mental abuse became as necessary as strategy. When the forward pass became an important factor in the game the diagram of attack and defense changed immediately. Instead of two or three backs playing directly in back of the line as a support they had to move back from ten to fifteen yards in order to meet the possibility of an aerial attack. To further offset the threat of the forward pass the centre on the defense began to play out of the line and the roving centre has become a new feature of a team's defense. Instead of the line playing very low, defensively and charging blind, they began to play higher, heads up, eyes open, continually on the alert for any feature of a diversified attack which a forward pass had created.

"This one innovation—severely condemned by the old timers at first, made the game so radically different and so vastly improved that within the past few years nearly all the changes in the rules have been made with the idea of speeding up the game and making it more interesting from the spectators' standpoint. To further offset the danger of eliminating injuries, the exceptions to these being, the rules forbidding clipping from behind and roughing the kicker.

"It would seem to the writer that just as hockey, baseball, and basketball have become international sports in Canada and the United States that nothing but could be done to further cement the common interests of the two countries in them to play the same. To of rugby, the greatest game of them all.

"Very truly yours,
"R. P. HOLMES,
"Line Coach, Mass. A. C., 1920-1921."

MISSED TOT OF RUM
LONDON, Nov. 14—A flock of ducks was presented recently by Emmanuel College to the Cambridge University Botanic Gardens. After a few days sojourn in their new homes the birds began to lose their liveliness. They strolled about in a listless manner, refusing to be gladdened even by the appearance of their keeper with a supply of food.

Finally the veterinarian administered some liquor to the birds. The effect was remarkable. They resumed their quacking, and began flying about in a most gleeful manner.

The Emmanuel ducks have for some time had a reputation for inebriety. They had inhabited an oldworld garden, two sides of which are overlooked by the students rooms, and it has been a favorite sport of the undergraduates to feed them from their windows with cake or bread soaked with alcohol.

At Grimshy Nov. 16.—Sir George Frederick Sleight, first Bart., of Westley Hall, Great Grimshy, fish merchant and fishing vessel owner, whose will has just been proved, left a fortune of £982,147.

The late baronet began life by gathering and hawking cockles from Cleothorpes Beach, eventually becoming the largest individual owner of trawlers, J.P. for the county, a former chairman of the Unionist party in the district. The greater part of his life was used during the war for sweeping and patrol work. It was for the great service he rendered during the war that he received his baronetcy.

CENTRAL POINT FOR EXECUTION ADVOCATED

AMHERST, N.S. Nov. 16.—Judge Russell of Halifax speaking at the opening of the Commercial Club of Amherst last night on "Some Belated Reforms," urged the execution of condemned prisoners to take place at a central place in the Maritime Provinces that central place should be in Lunenburg.

He said he could see no objection if such a change were not affected could not perform the deed. Grover Cleveland once did it while he was sheriff. There should be no more bunnings as took place at the Bennie Swim Execution.

His Lordship thought that criminals should be kept in custody until cured of their propensity for crime and that prisoners should be given some money-making employment so that their dependents would not result in more than two sevenths of one per cent. of the Dominion's labor.

Judge Russell urged simplification of the laws of procedure in civil cases. He believed judges should be given more paternal power and should act in knocking together the heads of the accused and the defendant.

Judge Russell at an early date plans to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of his being admitted to the bar.

LIVE OR DIE

CALGARY, Nov. 16.—In the opinion of H. W. Wood, president of the United Farmers of Alberta, the first thing the Progressives have to decide is whether they are going to commit suicide or not. "If they are not going to solidify their forces along definite lines toward a definite purpose, they cannot hope to live," he commented. "At least I cannot see how they can."

NO END OF TROUBLE

PARIS, Nov. 16.—"Batling" Siki, the Senegalese heavyweight boxer, celebrated Armistice Day by donning the uniform of a Senegalese sharpshooter, which he wore during the war.

Siki promenaded along the boulevard until a policeman hustled him to a lookout, where he was charged with unlawful wearing of a military uniform. He was ordered home to change to civilian clothes.
