SANDRA THE JEALOUS

By Jane Phelps

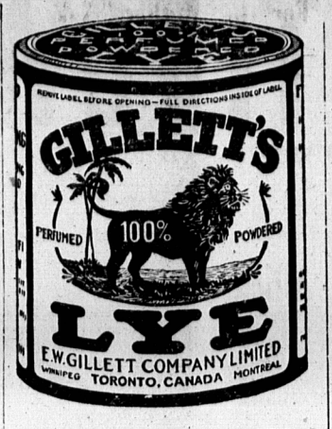
SYNOPSIS

Everett Graham, a New York broker, and a widower of 41 meets and marries Sandra Courtney, a girl living in a town where he had a branch office. Sandra was 18 with all a girl's desires and dreams.

Sandra's father was pleased that she was to make so good a match, but her mother felt anxious, worried for fear the disparity in ages would not work for Sandra's happiness.

Sandra's friends plauged her unmercifully calling Graham "Grandpa" and telling her she would have to play nurse to him when he was all doubled up with age and rheumatism' Rose Grandon, Sandra's most intimate friend was particularly disgusted because Sandra thought of marrying a man as old as her father. But he was rich, generous, and his very dignity that frightened Rose, added to his attractiveness in Sandra's eyes.

Sandra's brothers also made her courtship a rather trying one until Graham won them over by gifts. One of them, Toodles, said, when Sandra told of her marriage: "So you are going to play second fiddle," expressing what her young friends all felt, and what she herself hated to think of. She says in telling her story: "I have a notion that a young untried girl is a good deal like a book with its leaves still uncut. A man takes her with a thrill of possession; but just what is in her he does not know. It may be she will be interesting, and — able to hold



HIS interest once it is aroused. Or it may be that each page as it is perused grows harder to read, his thoughts wander, and will not concentrate because of lack of action, or because of a sameness in the story which bores him. Women, very young women especially are so anxious to be everything all at once that they leave no page unturned, nothing fresh and new to stir a man's jaded appetite.'

Sandra goes to her new home with all the enthusiasms of girlhood, only to almost immediately become jealous of the wife who was number one, while she was number two. Graham's friends never tired of telling her how lovely his first wife was, and she also had to constantly gaze upon her picture hung in a prominent place in the home. He also bought her sapphires, and sapphire colored gowns which she adored until she was told he did the same for his first wife, whom everyone said she resembled.

Graham, a cold undemonstrative man was unfitted to marry the girl who longed constantly for the expression of love. We wanted Sandra to be dignified, he hated tears, and Sandra was inclined to weep when unhappy. Irma Barton, an old friend of Graham's is introduced. Sandra has many sad hours over what she thinks is a love affair between Irma and Graham. Also Sandra meets Halliday, a friend of Graham's, a man about town. Through this acacquaintance she also finds herself in unpleasant situations.

Instead of the home she has pictured, all rose and bright colors she has the old home and the furnishings used by the first wife. While everything was good, solid and substantial, it was not dainty, not "girly."

Graham affects clubs, etc. While he is out Sandra finds pictures, letters, etc., from Leola, his first wife. All these to her mean that he still loves the other woman more than he does her, a nd she agonizes accordingly. For she has learned to love him in spite of his careless treatment of her.

As time rolls on her troubles become more poignantly real. She suffers, and endures until she is driven almost to desperation because of his lack of understanding her nature; his absorption in self, and his own affairs. In the end however Sandra finds that even being wife number two has its compensations, that she possesses a love that is deeper, stronger than that he had given the first wife of whom she is no longer jealous.

CHILD EATS PILLS AND DIES

SALISBURY, June 25.—The three-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Steeves died suddenly here. By some means the little one had gotten possession of a box of sugar-coated medical tablets which were being used by a border at the house as a dinner pill. The box was nearly full and the child ate them all and almost immediately went into convulsions. The Moncton physician who had prescribed the dinner pill was telephoned for and the situation explained to him and he replied that it would be of no use for him to come as the case was hopeless. The little one only lived a short time. Mr. Steeves, the father of the child is employed on the Canadian National railways section here, and much sympathy is felt for the family. The directions on the box of tablets which was put up for Mr. Charles Geldart read: "One before each meal for a week, then two before breakfast and tea and one before dinner."

"I saw the Compound advertised in our paper, and tried it. It has restored my health so I can do all my work and I am so grateful that I am recommending it to my friends."—Mrs. D. M. ALTERS, R. R. 4, Oregon, Ill.
