Mummy! Are you sure YOUR SOAP IS GOOD FOR MY BABY SKIN?

Yes, mommy, because my soap is Palmolive, the very same soap my mummy used for bathing me. You see, Palmolive just can't irritate your tender skin, or miss either, because it's made to give a smooth, soft lather that guards your skin and keeps it healthy as you grow. And that, mommy, is why Palmolive will always be your special soap...and mine, too.

KEEP THAT LOVELY SCHOOLGIRL COMPLEXION

In secret locations in Atlantic Command there are Anti-aircraft Operations Rooms which are the nerve centre of the defences against air attack. In case of an enemy raid, the fire thrown into the sky would be directed from these rooms. C.V.A.C. play an important part in this work. Here is a scene in an Atlantic Command Operations Room with Gen. Mildred Round, left, Toronto, and Gen. Marjorie Robertson, right, Springhill, N. S., plotting position and movement of aircraft.

ALBEMARLE PRODUCT OF SHADOW PLANTS

LONDON, Feb. 23.—(CP)—The glider-towing Albemarle, details of which have just been released after three years on the secret list, is the Cinderella of Britain's aircraft industry.

This twin-engine, mid-wing monoplane with triplex undercarriage—the first of that type to be made in Britain, is the product of the first experiment in "shadow manufacture" in 1940, when, organ builders, dental manufacturers and even tombstone makers were among the sub-contractors producing its components.

The Albemarle is the only machine made of wood and steel to be used on operations. It was designed during the "blitz" for bombing and reconnaissance. The machines have since been used to carry mail to Gibraltar, as transports in Russia and as bombers.

The first aircraft to land troops in Sicily last July was an Albemarle. Now, after three years of varied service, its ideal job has been found in towing gliders. The triplex undercarriage is a distinct advantage in glider work.

The maximum speed is more than 250 miles an hour at 10,500 feet and its range is greater than 1,300 miles. It carries a crew of five in a specially armored fuselage and is identified by its twin fins and rudders. It has a four-sum Boulton Paul turret, a span of 77 feet, length of 60 feet and height (to propeller tip) of 16 feet seven inches. As a glider tug it weighs 22,800 pounds. Built at a time light alloys were in such short supply that even aluminum kettles were conscripted for fighters, the machine was in mass production long before even one prototype was in the air.

You CAN have brighter teeth!

Impartial laboratories made hundreds of tests. Scientists checked their findings with photo-electric measuring devices and authorize this statement: Peppodent Powder produces a lustre on teeth twice as bright as the average of all other leading brands. Brighter than any of them—bar none! These results have been double-checked by identical twins who made practical in-home tests... by technicians in dental clinics... by dentists in their own offices. The result is always the same: Peppodent Powder makes teeth far brighter. Get Peppodent Powder to make your teeth brighter... today!

Problems of labor and supply were so acute when a company in the Hawker Siddeley group began producing the Albemarle that the firm took the bold step of recruiting sub-contractors with no previous experience whatever of aircraft construction.

They had almost literally to go into the highway and buy raw materials before the war had produced work quieter and better than many old-established aircraft companies.

first parts of this austerity aircraft were produced. The fuselage still is made in sections by car manufacturers. These three firms and two other London firms which before the war made cheap furniture are said to have produced work quieter and better than many old-established aircraft companies.
