Mr. Harry Callaghan, who spent a few weeks with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Callaghan, has returned to Rumford, Me.

Mr. Peter Kelly, who has been ailing for the past few months is somewhat improved in health. His many friends earnestly hope for his complete recovery.

A passing motorist, running short of gasoline called and was kindly offered some that was in a car owned by his son Patrick. While drawing the gasoline from the tank, one gentleman lit a match to see if the car was near full—it was—in a second it was nothing but a mass of flames. A telephone call gathered the neighbors in a very short time. Luckily the car was parked some distance from the buildings and the night was calm, otherwise a very bad fire would have been the result.

The East River Dairying Co., purchased the cheese press from the Lake Verde Dairying Co., and was transferred to that factory a few days ago.

WOMEN TAKE PART IN FEDERAL ELECTION

TORONTO, Ont., June 24—(By The Canadian Press)—Bessie Gowan Ferguson sums up the Canadian political situation, as far as women are concerned, in this wise: "One decade ago the women of Canada were accorded the franchise, and now, in the third election since that eventful event in the progress of the Dominion, it looks as though the battle of the ballots in Ontario would be fought and won by the women electors. Women have been accused of lack of interest in politics. They have also been credited with being the best workers and referred to as the elector who, like the privates in the army, bore the brunt of the battle. The women who have been sitting at the foot of the gods, who have been studying learning and "feeling their way," seem at last to have arrived with all the accoutrements of political warriors and promise to carry the battle into the hustings in so vigorous a way that the political meeting without the guiding hand or convincing tongue of a woman will be the exception. With Miss Agnes Macphail and Mrs. F. S. Greenwood in the field as candidates and other prominent women politicians, including two well-known Toronto ladies, as likely candidates, the women have taken courage. The Ontario Liberal women have set up an organization office alongside that of the Liberal Association (men) in the Rodford building.

Not to be outdone by their Liberal sisters, the Conservative women are pooling their organization resources with the men and already 50 women have volunteered for speaking and organization work in Ontario. In communities where there are women's Conservative association and clubs they are joining with the riding organization to work the constituency, win electors to the side of the party led by Hon. R. B. Bennett and on election day to give the vote.

W. G. Clysdale, Ontario organizer, states that in every part of old Ontario and in many parts of new Ontario women are simply flocking to the constituency officials volunteering help. They are more keenly interested than in any previous election and he predicted that there would, before election day, be almost as many women as men doing active political campaigning. Liberals are pointing to the 20th Century clubs and to the fact that the Ontario Women's Liberal Association have set up an establishment of their own as ample evidence that women in the Liberal camp are not leaving all the electioneering to their "older brothers."

NEWSPAPER NOTORIETY

TORONTO, Ont., June 24—(By The Canadian Press)—Too much publicity has been the cause of a good deal of worry to Mrs. Wm. Jowett of this city, whose husband captured an enormous and wonderfully-colored moth. This was shown to a reporter, Mr. Jowett offering it to anyone desirous of having it. Then began an almost interminable procession up the Jewett front steps of the curious, the greedy, the really interested, and a few, very few, of those genuinely desirous of establishing the species of the moth and, if possible, of adding it to their collections. Mr. Jowett went to work early by 9 a. m. Mrs. Jowett was quite worn out from constantly running to the door and trying to answer the flood of questions. By 9.30 a. m. the procession assuming alarming proportions, Mrs. Jowett in desperation handed the rare specimen to a caller, who happened to be a woman, and did not trouble to ask for her address.

In England most of the public schools including Eton and Harrow have branches of the union and an endeavor is being made to lift up the public schools here in the same way. Such well known public schools as Appleby, St. Andrew, and Upper Canada College having affiliated. A meeting is to be held in St. Paul's Parish Hall at four o'clock this afternoon in connection with the movement.

A Scotch Night In California

A Scotch Night At The Pasadena Presbyterian Church, Unusual Service Attract Many, Scotch Delicacies Prove Inviting, Dr. Freeman Talks Hearts In The Highlands. A Bit Of Scotland On The Pacific Coast.

By JOHN P. MACPHEE

A Sunday evening service given up entirely to the Scots in Pasadena proved very attractive and interesting, and since many of your readers have Scotch blood surging through their veins and the Scotch brogue on the tip of their tongues, a short account of the service may be of interest. This is the second annual Scotch service held in the church, it originated with Rev. Robert Freeman, D. D., the pastor of the church, himself a native of Edinburgh. His assistant Rev. Dr. Jas. Leishman, also hails from the same city, and they make a fine team.

The church was built when Rev. Dr. Malcolm J. MacLeod was pastor. He was a very popular Prince Edward Island preacher. Since then religious education and recreation buildings have been added making it modern and up to date. A fair estimation of the value of the whole plant is about a million dollars. The membership roll is over 3300, making it one of the largest of the denominations in the United States.

Dr. Freeman has been pastor of the church for eighteen years, succeeding Dr. MacLeod. He came to America when a young man without money or influence; got his college and seminary training here and by sheer grit worked his way up to his present commanding position. The story of this Scotch lad's success should encourage any young man who may be fighting a similar battle for an education. It shows what grit and hard work can do.

Some days before an invitation in the form of a Braid-Scots letter was issued by the pastor, and sent to the various Scotch organizations in the city, which turned out in full force. The letter is unmistakably Scotch, all wool—a yard wide. Here is a sample of some of it to remind you of the days of auld lang syne. If you can't read it, get your minister or your editor to read it for you. It begins:

"My Friends.—Ye min' the gatherin' o' the Presbyterian Kirk a year ago, when we saw kent faces, sang the Psalms of David, and heered our mither tongue, ay, and after had a cup o' tea wi' some of Logan's bannocks. Weel, I have been wantin' since tae hae another; and there's nae time in all the year like auld Queen Vic's birthday. Man, do ye min' the queen's birthday how we cud hardly gang by. The sights and sounds of the guide auld land we forget, unless somethin' happens, like the burr of a tongue, that takes us bak to the hills of blessed memory. Maistly, the thing that happens is an Aberdeen story. I have juist heerd tell of a lad who went to study Latin, a dead language, because his father needed help in the undertakin' business. Aweel, Sabbath night, May 25th, at seven, Jimmie Shearer, the organist, dude from Glasca University will be blaw' on his kist of whistles, and I'll warrant ye never heerd the like. Half-an-oor after the beadle will carry in the bible and the psalm buik, and the meenister will be lookin' for his text and rummlin' on it. I'll warrant you will be glad you came.

After the sermon we will have a crack, and we all together will drink the cup that cheers but doesna make daft. Aweel, "imphm," there will be three prizes. What for? Come and see. I will be countin' on seein' you." Brawly yours, ROBERT FREEMAN

The word "imphym," above is a mystery and a puzzle. It is never spelled the same way and it has no vowels to pronounce it. Only a Scotchman can explain it or pronounce it. Dr. Leishman tells me it is a pawky Scotch way of saying "yes," breathed out in a sort of a sigh or a grunt.

Jas. Shearer, a native of Aberdeen and director of music for the church prepared the musical program which was mostly by Scotch composers. He opened with an organ recital of old Scottish Psalm tunes. The decorations were in as nearly the colors of the Scottish flag as could be, with a background of Scotch thistles standing like a regiment of soldiers on the field of Bannockburn.

The singing of the anthems by the choir and congregation gave the old time inspirational touch that must have been theirs when sung in the land of the fragrant heather and lordly thistle. Dr. Freeman took his text from the 121st Psalm, "I to the hills will lift mine eyes." He said in part: The psalms are full of meaning and memory to the Scotch people. They sang them in Covenanting days and in times of persecution. O'er moor and crag and glen they sang the 121st Psalm. The book of psalms is a biography of the human soul. They were born out of the actual experience of men. When we look at the hills they suggest God, they interpret God, they glorify God. They call upon us to look up and life up. The reason why the world is so much in the dumps today is because of its downward look. Men walk the streets and see nothing but the stones and the bricks. Women go into their kitchens and see nothing but pots and pans. The 121st Psalm is calling us to look up to the hills where there is peace and plenty, to the place where there is sunshine and strength.

Advertisement for Rosebud Cut Plug Cigarettes. Features an image of a cigarette pack and a woman. Text: "The minute you light up a pipeful of Rosebud Cut Plug, you'll realize where it found its name—the fragrance that comes only from mellow, choice tobacco cannot be imitated. Rosebud is the 'real thing' in cut plug smoking tobacco—mild, sweet and fragrant as its namesake—valuable 'poker hands' in every package." Includes a small image of a cigarette pack labeled "ROSEBUD CUT PLUG SMOKING TOBACCO".

There's a lot of music in the psalms. Those dear sweet psalms of old. With visions bright of lands of light. And shining streets of gold.

I hear them singing still, In memory soft and clear, 'Such a pity as a father hath Unto his children dear.'

After the service, escorted by the bands, the audience went to the chapel where tables were set for tea and cake and scones with other Scotch delicacies. During the hour Dr. Freeman gave three prizes; copies of a book of poems he has written. One prize went to the oldest Scot present; the second to the youngest; the third to the most recent arrival from Scotland. Over seven hundred and fifty drank the cup that cheers, and laughed and visited together. It was a memorable hour. Just a bit of old Scotland in this new Western world. Old days were recalled, old memories revived, old friendships repaired, and hearts and lives cheered and brightened. All went away saying and singing, "Will ye na' come bak again." 577 East Claremont St. Pasadena, Calif.

EXHIBITION SEED

Interest in the exhibition of cereal and field crops at the various fairs and exhibitions held throughout Canada is rapidly growing. There are no particular difficulties in participating in these exhibits and in the exercise of a little care and good judgement in the preparation of the exhibit one may win valuable prizes. For the convenience of farmers experts of the Dominion Department of Agriculture have prepared the following suggestions:

A good exhibitor will begin his plans before planting time. The exhibit, whether it be a sheaf or a sample of threshed grain, should represent as nearly as possible his ideal. The best material can be secured only from good vigorous crops, free from diseases and weeds. Because of its superiority registered seed can be recommended to all exhibitors. Not only is it an advantage in preparing exhibits but also in securing high yield and quality in their crops.

The aim in showing sheaves is to display a few of the plants to the best advantage. Select only straight uniform plants which possess well-developed heads or panicles, and clean bright straw. These should preferably be cut close to the ground with a sickle and cured where they will not be exposed to rain or dew. Slight bleaching by exposure to the sun while drying improves the appearance. Store sheaves by hanging the heads down to preserve the shape and compactness of the head.

Plasting size and neat proportions set off the quality most effectively. The ideal sheaf has a well-rounded head obtained by allowing the stems in the centre to stand a little higher than those towards the margin. The diameter should not be less than eight inches. All leaves should be stripped off before the stems become brittle and the sheaf should be neatly squared at the butt. Shattering may be avoided by making up the sheaves in damp weather. Exhibits of threshed grain are usually judged for their fitness for seed purposes. The object is to secure a sample of plump grain of good color, uniform in size and shape, and free from impurities. Rain and weathering after harvest discolor seeds of all kinds if left in the open. Cure under cover, sufficient amounts of the various crops for the samples. Close threshing to remove chaff, beards, etc., should not be overdone. Excellent samples of oats and barley frequently are discounted in judging on account of the rubbing off the tips so that the meat of the kernels is exposed.

Exhibits are usually shipped by express. Each sheaf sample should be wrapped well in paper and packed snugly in a box and labelled. Threshed samples should be shipped in small sacks with one bag inside and one outside of each sack, giving name and address of exhibitor, and kind of exhibit. Several samples may be shipped together in a large sack. Plenty of labelling saves confusion and mistakes.
