HANGING THE PICTURES.—Decorative Value is Increased by Correct Background.

The indiscriminate hanging of pictures which has been so long the vogue, is much to be deplored. A picture that is intrinsically good, and bears relationship to other things of interest, can always be used, but there are many pictures used to fill up space, or because they have beautiful frames, and not because the subject is appropriate or the picture itself is good. If one has no pictures to start with, good photographs of old masters or colored prints are interesting.

The decorative quality of a picture is enhanced by the right background, the height at which it is hung, and its juxtaposition to other pictures. A modern picture is usually out of place on an antique background, and an antique picture has not a good setting in a strictly modern room. It is, indeed, a special talent to know just how much a decorative object really decorates. To crowd the walls, even with very beautiful things, is to fall far short in artistic taste. Unless it is an exhibit where all things of a certain type or class are to be kept together, proper space should be allowed for each object, so that it may have its full decorative value. The heightening or lowering of ceilings can be accomplished effectively by the use of picture-molding. In a low-ceilinged room the picture-molding should be placed within two inches of the top; in a high-ceilinged room 18 inches to three feet is a good height.—Mrs. Van Rensselaer Schuyler in Good House-keeping.

MILLIONS FOR THE SOLDIER NOTHING FOR THE SAILOR

The Golden Showers Have Practically All Fallen on the Army—How About the Men of the Sea?

"Everything is done for the soldiers," said a young Canadian Navy recruit, not without a tinge of bitterness in his voice. "Smokes for soldiers, comforts for soldiers. Did you ever hear of smokes for Sailors?" There has been a marked absence in Canada of movements for the betterment of the men of the Navy and Mercantile Marine, but with the spread of the Navy League this is being remedied. His Excellency the Duke of Devonshire, who is Vice-President of the Navy League of Great Britain, is taking a very active part in furthering the interests of the League, and recently a large number of new branches were formed. The men of the Navy and Mercantile Marine are the poorest paid class in the world, facing the horrible perils of the deep for a mere pittance, leaving their families in many cases destitute. Meanwhile, while the public are generously and patriotically giving millions for the relief of the Army, the men of the Navy are almost forgotten.

A year ago the Navy League gathered a considerable sum in the Dominion for relief work, but this largely went to the British Sailors' Relief Fund. This money, however, that might have raised the money that the League, a proportion going to the benefit of the Canadian sailors and their dependents. A Sailors' Day will be held all over Canada on December 8th, for this purpose, and it is hoped to raise a substantial sum to be devoted to the pressing and imperative needs of a class of men and their families who are in sore straits because of their devotion to the Empire's cause. 1589.

TELLS OF PLOTS AGAINST INDIA

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6.—"The English are good and the Germans are bad," was the password whispered by the Indian revolutionists when they sought to identify each other during their activities against British rule in India. The answer to this was, "The English are bad and the Germans are good." These mystic signals and other facts relating to the proposed revolution were revealed in Federal Court here today during the trial of thirty-four prominent men on charges of conspiracy tooment the uprising.

It was revealed that the rebels had a "treasurer" at Washington who collected and distributed funds for "the great revolution." These disclosures were made during the testimony of Sukumar Chatterji, Hindu witness for the government, when he told of carrying a message from San Francisco to Manila. He told of activities extending from Washington to Bangkok, Siam. In revealing the password, Chatterji said it was not necessary for revolutionists, on meeting each other to speak it in the Hindu tongue. Both the password and answer could be spoken in any language.

Chatterji, who, the government alleges, acted as messenger for the revolutionists, told of carrying several letters from San Francisco to a German naval officer named Boyheim, stationed at Manila, who later took them to the German consul there. "I met there a man named Swaser, who I was told, was the vice-consul," witness said. "He gave me a letter marked with the revolutionary signs, which I was to carry to Siam." Chatterji then drew on a sheet of paper the mystic sign of the rebels. It was a quarter square with a dot in the centre. "Boyheim told me he had cabled a man named Jacobson in Chicago and Jacobson re-telegraphed to Washington, where the treasurer of the revolutionary fund was located. We could not start until the money arrived. When it came we went to Amoy, China, and delivered several letters and tried to get Indian recruits. During his examination Chatterji declared he had eaten two letters during his travels so as to prevent their going into the hands of the British police at Bangkok.

"I had been given two letters from Gopal Singh to German agents in Bangkok," he said. "I went to Bangkok and was there arrested by British police. Before they could search me I ate both letters. It was at Bangkok that I was told Indian troops were ready to revolt."

Theodore Roche, cross-examining the witness, wrung an admission from him that he had written an article for the Hindustan Gadar, a revolutionary newspaper here, stated that Germany's only purpose in this war was to free India, although he knew those statements were untrue. He also admitted that he had posed as an Indian prince.

"Then," said Roche, "you admit that you are not only a deceiver, but a liar." At this point a diary of the trip, written by Chatterji, was introduced by the government's attorney, which the witness said was written for the purpose of letting Indian messengers following know of the experience of their predecessors.
