British Press Comments on Canada's Premier

Canadian Gazette, London.

"In the Anglo-American-Japanese approach to conference Mr. Meighen has played his part and we have great hopes of practical results from Mr. Hughes' persuasive pench in the matter if inter-empire communications.

"Mr. Meighen has, of course, exactly interpreted Canadian wishes, heartily welcoming the forthcoming conference on armaments, and especially armaments as affecting the Pacific."

Daily Despatch, Manchester. "Meighen is fluent to a degree, and his speeches possess a certain eloquence, but cold reason and extreme earnestness are invariably the chief marks of his public pronouncements. Not long ago one of his intimates described him as a mathematician in politics.

"His ability to subject the argument of an opponent to a logical dissection, restrained in its expression but pitiless in its thoroughness, has been one of the main factors which has brought him to his present place in the politics of his own country."

"We need not expect either sentiments of flamboyant Imperialism or of nationalism in Mr. Meighen's utterances during his stay in London. He is as little as possible in public, and whole bearing during this visit will be one of inquiry."

Freeman's Journal, Dublin. "I had the advantage of a brief talk yesterday with Mr. Meighen, the Prime Minister of Canada. He was most hopeful of fruitful and lasting results accruing from the present efforts to settle the Irish question. He declared that up where in the world would the advent of permanent peace and an honorable settlement in Ireland be regarded with greater favor than in Canada. He assured me he was prepared to do everything in his power—and he was sure so would every Premier from the Dominion—and the free States of the Empire—to assist in bringing to an end the present intolerable situation in Ireland.

"Mr. Meighen discussed the question of the disarmament proposals and the situation arising out of the British-Japanese Alliance, and declared the action taken by President Harding was one of the greatest acts of statesmanship that has taken place in history. He was convinced that far-reaching results affecting the future peace of the world would be the result of a peace conference forced upon the Great Powers, and expressed his strong conviction that if this problem and that of Ireland were permanently and satisfactorily adjusted, a new era of civilization based on world peace conditions would indubitably be ushered in."

Daily Mail, London. "Mr. Arthur Meighen, Prime Minister of Canada will be much in the public eye during the next month. He holds strong views and is not afraid to express them. He has enthusiasm, eloquence, virility and vivacity. He will be the youngest member of the Imperial Conference—he is just forty-seven—but he is experienced in the art of moulding men to his way of thinking.

"He may prove a difficult element in the Imperial Conference. He is an Imperialist, but he is a Canadian first. He realizes the importance of doing nothing that will stir up ill will in America, and his vote on some issues concerning the Pacific will be guided largely by that consideration."

Athenaeum, London. "Despite some lukewarm observations by Mr. Massey and a few characteristic fluttings by Hughes the weight of the Imperial Conference has been thrown definitely on the side of the League. Mr. Meighen, though he says less than General Smuts, is just as convinced of its value and the possibilities as the South African Premier and both of them are in a strong position when they reply to a request for increased contributions for naval defence by asking why the League is not being used to reduce armaments."

Sunday Pictorial, London. "Mr. Meighen makes no secret of his pleasure at the announcement of the Washington Conference and is confident that the world dangers in the Pacific will soon be overcome. The Canadian Premier's friends, however, are much concerned over his health. He looks pale and fragile, and nothing but his indomitable spirit keeps him going through all his tremendous tasks.

"If half of the reports are to be believed, there have been one or two stormy scenes in the Imperial Conference this week. Mr. Meighen has been holding his ground courageously but very firmly. General Smuts' qualities as an Imperial Statesman are showing up better and better."

Evening News, London. "What of the influence of the Overseas Prime Ministers, with

"I didn't have much faith in Tanlac when I began taking it, but I'm convinced now its the best medicine in the world," said Mrs. D. A. McDonald, of Reserve, Cape Breton, N. S.

"I had lost faith in medicines, as I hadn't been able to get relief from any I had tried but was steadily growing worse all the time. I had stomach trouble of the worst kind and couldn't eat a thing without suffering—distress afterwards. I believe I suffered more at night than at any other time, and often would get up out of bed and walk the floor for hours before I got any relief. I used to have violent headaches too, which kept me in bed for days at a time and drove me almost frantic with pain. My nerves got so bad that the least little thing upset me and I could start me trembling like a leaf. I felt so miserable and worried I was about ready to give up. I never dreamed of a medicine could help me like Tanlac has done. I now eat anything I want and am never troubled with gas or indigestion of any kind. My headaches are a thing of the past. My nerves have quieted down and I sleep as sound as a child every night. I get up in the morning feeling refreshed and strong and enjoy my housework with a happy heart, as it is no trouble for me at all. Tanlac is certainly wonderful and I am glad of the chance to recommend it."

"Tanlac is sold in Charlottetown by Reddin Bros and by leading druggists every where.

Their fresh vision and statesmanship? "General Smuts has been a power for good. It is now an open secret that but for Mr. Meighen's courageous stand on Canada's behalf, after a heated discussion concerning the renewal of the Japanese Treaty, the Washington Conference might never have been called under such propitious stars as now. Mr. Meighen's wisdom has been warmly praised on the other side of the Atlantic."

Daily Mirror, London. "Mr. Lloyd George often says that in his experience of the House of Commons the late Mr. Joseph Chamberlain and Sir Edward (now Lord) Carson were the two men who could most swiftly and surely fasten on the weakness in an argument. I am told that Mr. Meighen, Canada's Prime Minister has the same gift."

Leeds Mercury. "How near came Mr. Meighen the Canadian Premier and General Smuts, the South African, hammering out Empire problems, to being battlefield enemies, has just been told. It seems that Mr. Meighen volunteered for service in the Boer War, but was rejected."

The Aberdeen Journal. "The respective outlooks of the Dominions were faithfully and characteristically reflected by their Prime Ministers. Mr. Meighen for Canada was judicious and non-committal; Mr. Hughes was vigorously outspoken; General Smuts idealistic and pacific; Mr. Massey full of a strong Imperialism, Mr. Meighen was all for publicity. He had no suspicions of designs on the autonomy of the Dominions, conspiracies to bring about revolutionary changes in our Constitutional relations."

Pall Mall and Globe, London. "Though the Canadian Prime Minister spoke but a few words, he made a great impression on his colleagues. Those who have come into personal contact with Mr. Meighen assure me that he has a great career before him, not only in Canadian but also in Imperial politics. A man of clear thinking and businesslike habits, he goes directly to the heart of the subject he tackles. His words ring true and he inspires confidence."

The Evening Mail and Post, Dundee. "Mr. Lloyd George has been captivated by the cultured personality of Mr. Arthur Meighen, the Prime Minister of Canada.

"Reserved and reticent, noting pleasing him more than a quiet retreat where books are to be found, Mr. Meighen yet addresses himself to public questions with something of an Imperial mind. His speeches in the conference of the Empire's Prime Ministers have been notable for their grasp of the main issues and their broad outlook. He has a thorough knowledge of British Parliamentary history, and one of his early addresses when he was making his debut in the public life of Canada was an analysis of the life and character of the younger Pitt."

Canadian Gazette, London. "Some who were present at the Hall of Gray's Inn on Monday evening, when Mr. Meighen was the guest of the Benchers, tell us that nothing pleased those high legal luminaries more than the authoritative echo from a Britain overseas of the principles which make this Empire what it is."

Yorkshire Evening News, Leeds. "It is known that Canada because of its nearness to America and its own considerable Irish settlement has ardently desired for the good of the British Empire that peace and concord should take the place of anger and armed bitterness in Ireland. Mr. Meighen, the Prime Minister of Canada, has been at one yesterday to achieve an honorable settlement in Erin's Isle.

THE OUTLAW The Story of a Girl Who Didn't Want to Marry

By ETHEL LLOYD PATT.

CHAPTER LXV.

After mother had been home a few days she felt much stronger and we had a chance to talk together one evening.

"Really, mother," I told her, "there is nothing much to worry about any more. I think we can be sure of my week. Of course, we can't have many luxuries on that. But anyhow, dearie, it will pay the rent, keep the children in school and feed us, if we are careful."

"Mother looked at me from her pillows. "You are an awfully good girl, Nellie," she said. "I can't get over hating to take your money from you, child." The tears came into her eyes. "I wish your father had turned out different," she whispered half to herself.

I smiled at her to reassure her. "It's all right, mother," I told her. "Of course I wish he were different, too, though not so much because of the money. But I hate him for swagging you as he does. Sometimes when I see how coarse and common he is getting I hate to think that his blood is in me, that I'm his child!"

"My mother put out her hand and clasped mine. "Try not to feel that way, dearie," she said. "It only makes you bitter. Bitterness in your heart is like a rotten spot on fruit; it spreads and it spoils the others around it. I want to tell you something, dear, that ought to make you proud."

I looked at mother inquiringly. "It is not so much that your father or is getting coarser and commoner," she went on, "as it is that you are getting finer. I don't know what it is, dearie, but I like to feel you are something out of the world to live in. But you know, Nellie, you are much prettier than you ever were before."

"It is just because you love me, mother," I said. "And of course, if you are interested in any artistic work, you begin to learn of beautiful things. I'm just beginning to understand why some lines are lovely and some are not. You see, I even do my hair differently."

"It's not so much that," Nellie said mother, "though I love the way you dress so plain and like a heart, too, girly. I don't know how to express myself, but it's like getting thoughts out of you as you might say."

"I was touched, I leaned over and kissed mother. "You are such a wonder," I told her. "If I ever do amount to anything, it will be because of your good sense and understanding."

"But my mother was a very human sort of woman. Evidently she had something on her mind. Now she must have told herself, was the time to broach it to me. So as I leaned over her, she wouldn't let me rise.

"You are a good girl, Nellie," she whispered, "and I'm only hoping to live to see you with your own husband and children."

I blushed painfully and struggled to draw myself from mother. I told her I was "never going to marry."

"But you are getting such good sense, dearie, on every other subject," she said slowly.

"And that's good sense too," I told mother. "And then, with an outburst of my one-time feeling: "Mother," I cried, "how can you forget that you had not had so many of us? Suppose I had not had the good luck to make a decent salary in my work! Where would we be? Dependent on father! A lot of good he is!" I added bitterly, "I don't want to be mean or to worry you, but you know perfectly well the money he brings in now scarcely feeds him, let alone helping us out."

"Maybe that was only my bad judgement girly," said mother. "Maybe I just didn't have your chance for education and to know what you do. I can't say your father has brought me much but bitterness there has been last few years. But, as I have often said to you, look at all the fine men who have married good-for-nothing women. It's give and take, Nellie, dear, don't you forget it. You might just as well say you were never going to live in a house again because you saw your neighbor's house burnt to the ground."

"But, mother, if I protested 'isn't all the misery in all the world brought here because men and women marry?'"

"My mother smiled at me through her tears. "Perhaps dear," she said, "but then all the happiness in all the world is brought here for the same reason. And forgetting that Hugh's name had never been mentioned between us in this connection, she went on innocently: "So don't you be refusing that nice young man because of your silly nonsense, child. You'll be turning away the best of your life if you do."

I drew myself up with what dignity I could.

AT THIS SEASON LOSS OF APPETITE

Is very common. In many cases it is due to impure blood, which cannot give the digestive organs the stimulus necessary for their proper performance of their functions.

Thousands know by experience that Hood's Sarsaparilla restores appetite and would advise you to give it a trial this season. It originated in the successful prescription of a famous physician. Get it today.

Take Hood's Pills if you happen to need a laxative—they don't gripe.

FOREST PROTECTION ADVICE FROM THE CLOUDS

Even odd woodsmen who might be supposed to be prejudiced in the opposite direction, testify that the printed notice, the fire warning bill or poster, is the most important weapon with which to fight forest fires. Keeping in close touch with every part of its vast field the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior now prints a completely different set of posters each season, so as to keep the warnings as attractive and striking as possible. This season two new forms of notice have been added, the first is composed of stickers to be placed on the wind-shields of automobiles entering Dominion forests and the other of slips or "fly hand bills" to be dropped by the men of the forestry air patrol as they fly over camps and picnic parties. One of these latter bears the word "Citizens! Help the Forest Service to protect your property by being careful with fire in the woods. Co-operative Aerial Patrol—Forestry Branch-Air Board"
