But the heads must be filled with useful knowledge and the hands must be skilled to do, in the best manner, the work that the world wants done.

It is not your fault that you came into the world with an empty head, but it will be your fault if you fail to fill it with success-winning knowledge.

It is the province of this institution to send out into the world young men and women with educated heads and skilled hands. No better guaranty of its facilities in this respect can be given than by reference to the many who are now occupying lucrative positions as a result of the training received at this school.

F. H. CLERGUE, THE CANADIAN MORGAN.

HIS ROMANTIC CAREER.

Mr. Clergue is the son of J. H. Clergue, who came to America from France many years ago and settled in Bangor, where for a long period he was a dealer in wigs and artificial hair. The family lived comfortably, although modestly, and the children were all well educated. Francis was graduated from the Bangor High School in the seventies and took up the study of law. He was admitted to the bar in Penobscot county, and soon afterwards formed a partnership with John R. Mason and the late Major Frederick M. Laughton. Mr. Clergue early developed a genius for the promotion of great industrial and financial schemes, and soon quit practice of the law, devoting his time to the forwarding of enterprises, all of which gave great promise at the outset, but none of which has ever proved profitable—at least in its original form.

FIRST PROMOTION SCHEME.

He was the originator of the project to build the Bangor street railway, the first electric line in Maine, and for the construction of the road he formed what is yet known as the Public Works Company. A great electric power plant was built at Veazie, four miles above Bangor, at the cost of $550,000.

Mr. Clergue also originated the plan to build a railway up the side of Green Mountain, on Mount Desert Island, near Bar Harbor, and for a few months, while the trip was a novelty, the road seemed likely to be a success, but after a few seasons of slaking money the road was torn up and its rails and equipments sold to another mountain railway.

INTERESTS SENATOR HALE.

About 1885, when the railroad from Bangor to Bar Harbor was built, Mr. Clergue formed a syndicate in which Senator Hale and others were interested to build a summer hotel at Mount Desert Ferry. The house was built at great expense and for one or two seasons did a fair business, but since then it has been sold and resold, until finally a few years ago it was taken by the mortgagees. It has been a losing venture.

Another of Mr. Clergue's ventures, at about the same time was the establishment of a steamer line from the terminus of the railroad at Mount Desert Ferry to Annapolis (N. S.) it being his idea to thus provide a short and picturesque route from Boston and the west to Halifax, the boat connecting at Annapolis with the Windsor and Annapolis Railway across Nova Scotia to Halifax. The steamer Frances was leased from her owners and ran one season. The scheme was a disastrous failure, and fell through at the end of the first season.

The loss business on the Penobscot had claimed part of Mr. Clergue's attention, but it does not appear that he ever made any money out of it, while those whom he interested complain that it was not a profitable investment.

A few years after the collapse of these schemes the Eastern Trust & Banking Company, in Bangor, but his personal interest in this was slight and short lived. The institution is today on a sound basis and in the hands of men who are financially strong.

CLERGUE INTERESTED MR. BLAINE.

The scheme which made the name of Clergue famous on two continents was his attempt to obtain from the Shah of Persia a concession for a railway in that country or a contract to build a railway for the Persian government. A syndicate was formed in this country to back Clergue and it is said that a fund of $35,000 was raised to pay his expenses on a trip to Persia to conclude the contract or to obtain the concession. It is said that James G. Blaine, Arthur Sewall and many other men prominent in Maine and Washington contributed to this fund, and it is known that a very large sum was raised. Clergue accompanied by various members of his family went to Europe and made an extensive tour. In a year they returned, but without having made any impression upon the Shah of Persia, or getting any concession or contract for railway building at Teheran.

A prominent Bangor man says of Mr. Clergue: He is an active, clever, man, with a brain capable of conceiving great things but not of carrying them through to a profitable conclusion. He is fatally optimistic. One thing I have always noticed about him, and that is he never knows when to let go and get out of his schemes with anything for himself. He always overstates the safe time limit. He is a royal entertainer and a great spender—a right good fellow, in fact—and we are all sorry that his schemes have failed; especially sorry that they have always failed to make any money for him—any that he can keep when all is over.

Those who have come in personal contact with the great promoter say that his enthusiasm is such that it is contagious. So impressive are his statements that old men who have been fifty years in Wall street and have passed through the various stages of panic and prosperity were greatly impressed with his schemes. In one case I was informed that a member of the old school of finance, now fast dying out in Wall street, the Sloan-Taylor-Terry-Sage party, who are regarded as the most conservative element still in the street, once met Mr. Clergue. The old man listened to his story of the prospects of Consolidated Lake Superior. He conferred again. Thousands of schemes had been presented to him in the course of his existence and thousands of them had been turned down. But in the Clergue instance it was an exception. So convinced was he by the force of the man's magnetism that he immediately became enthusiastic and invested in the enterprise.

"MARITIME MEN A SPLENDID LOT."

Lord Dundonald's Opinion About Our Militia

The General Says a Considerable Influx of His Countrymen Are Coming to the Lower Provinces—He is Much Pleased.

OTTAWA, Oct. 9.—Lord Dundonald has just returned from inspecting the military camps of instruction in the maritime provinces. He is pleased with the announcement of the policy made in the house by the minister of militia.

Being interviewed his lordship said: "Although the camps did extremely good work of a practical nature, it was evident to me that it is impossible to teach the instructor and the men whom he has to instruct at the same time. In the short period of twelve days, therefore, a central camp of instruction where officers and non-commissioned officers can gain experience of the conditions of modern warfare, is a necessity. The provision of this camp by the minister will work an important step onward in the military efficiency of the Canadian militia."

"In this connection I may say that I have recommended an entirely new system of instruction and examinations for promotions, which I hope will assist officers and non-commissioned officers to render themselves efficient. The provision of the company armory, serving as a meeting place for the company during the winter months with the clothing and equipment ready to turn out when the alarm sounds, and its walls ornamented with placards of its regulations on military subjects, will be another great factor in promoting efficiency of the militia."

"What do you think of the military spirit of the country?"

"It is, on the whole, very good, but varies with the locality, and especially with the interest taken in the militia by the wealthier classes. Where the leading citizens of a locality take an interest in the militia, it is generally in a most efficient state. Where they neglect their duty to their country, and I may add, to their own interests, it is not in such an efficient state. I was delighted to see the sons of leading citizens serving in the ranks in many places."

"What is your opinion of the militia of the maritime provinces?"

"I thought them a splendid lot of men, both as regards physique and intelligence."

"What do you think of the maritime provinces?"

"I think a great deal of the maritime provinces, and I am very glad to know that there will be considerable emigration to those provinces from Great Britain next year."

Lord Dundonald will inspect the corps in Toronto after Col. Otter returns from England. Before the close of the year he will make an inspection of the regiments in Manitoba, the Northwest Territories and British Columbia.
