"Ride Him Cowboy" An Exciting Western Picture

Seldom is there so well knit a plot and meritorious a story in a Western action picture as underlies "Ride Him Cowboy" now the feature attraction at the Capitol. The author has brought out the true life of the west at the same time filling his story with fast action, thrilling and hair-raising episodes.

There is also a glowing romance with touches of humor which lend a welcome relief to the intensity of action. The battle of the vigilantes with the hard-riding, fierce fighting gang of bandits adds breathless suspense to the picture that holds one in the grip of its swift, changing action.

The picture is set in a gorgeous background of the western country. It is a picture that will thrill every youngster and older who loves plenty of thrills. Don't miss it.

Predicts Wane of "Hot-Cha" Music

NEW YORK, May 4. — (C.P.)—Musicians generally anticipate a decline in the hot-cha school of musical expression and a return to the more sentimental type of song as a result of the beer influence, according to Joseph M. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians.

"The time seems ripe," said Weber, "for some change in the popular music vogue and, since song writers and musicians expect it, beer comes opportunely to suggest a new type of song. Many orchestra leaders are reviving old favorites in the belief that these will enjoy temporary popularity.

"A further element of influence is the likelihood that beer drinkers will want to sing as they always have in the past. Current songs are tricky and difficult for the amateur singer. Hence the expectation that ballads will return.

"I honestly believe beer will bring a better music," said Gene Buck, president of the American Society of Composers. "Beer is always conducive to decent music and by decent music I mean the classical. The music of the old beer garden orchestra was always fundamentally fine. Popular music was only interspersed.

"There are hundreds of fine composers who have been unable to express themselves in this cockeyed jazz era," he said, "and now it is to be hoped they can turn their efforts to good music. Beer will not wipe out the jazz school though, and there will always be a place for modern music."

Allan Cup At Amherst Motor Show

(Special to The Guardian)

MONCTON, N. B., May 4.—The Allan Cup, emblematic of the senior amateur hockey championship of the Dominion, was taken for a ride yesterday. The ride, however, was quite without incident as the cup was given into the keeping of the Canadian National Express for carriage to Amherst, N. B., where it will be put on display at the Amherst Motor Show. The cup was accompanied to Amherst by Ambrose Wheeler, manager of the Moncton Hawks, who won it after a spectacular series of wins across Canada.

TO PROTECT WILD FLOWERS

MANCHESTER, England, May 4.—(C.P.)—How to protect the wild flowers of the United Kingdom is a problem being considered by the Wild Plant Conservation Board in connection with the Council for the Preservation of Rural England. Alarm is expressed at the rapid rate at which many of even the commonest of Britain's wild flowers are definitely disappearing in many parts of the country.

The board feels that it is by education rather than by drastic legislation that a solution is to be reached. Nevertheless legislation was necessary in cases of wilful depredation, and they are of opinion that it would help considerably if the existing county by-law for the protection of wild flowers and plants could be so extended as to be applicable to private property as well as to property to which the public has access. While not more than four or five native species of flowers had actually become extinct in Britain during the last two centuries, there was trustworthy evidence that nearly 300 different kinds had disappeared from some localities or had become extinct throughout one or more of the counties of England.

Leper Missionary Contracts Disease

HONOLULU, May 4. — (C.P.) — Father Peter d'Orgeval, French war chaplain who for eight years has been working as missionary among the lepers who find refuge on Molokai of the Hawaiian Islands is contracting himself a little house apart from the mission buildings in which he hitherto lived.

Like the famed Father Damien he has contracted the disease from those he left home to help. He will make the island his permanent home and carry on his work of ministering to the stricken. Father d'Orgeval was chaplain with the French army during the war and was decorated six times. He was a popular Parisian preacher until shortly after the armistice a threat of throat disease, caused by a gas attack, impaired his speaking ability and prompted him to volunteer his services to the leper colony.

HELEN MCCREA TAKES PROSPECTOR'S COURSE

TORONTO, May 4.—The Department of Mines buzzed with comment today as the word filtered into the legislative building that Miss Helen McCrea, popular young daughter of Hon. Charles McCrea, Minister of Mines for Ontario, had turned her mind to prospecting.

Miss McCrea began her week's course at the economics building today with 335 others, largest enrollment in the history of the class for prospectors. "Chip of the old block," "Like father, like daughter," and "Charlie will keep talking gold," were some of the remarks of the mines department staff.

Miss McCrea denied she was going prospecting. "I am not going prospecting," she said, "but I am greatly interested in this work."

THE NAMELESS THEATRE

LONDON, May 4.—(C.P.)—An unusual venture in theatrical anonymity is to be undertaken very shortly by the inconspicuous Little Ballet Club Theatre in Bayswater. The theatre is to be known as the Nameless Theatre, and plays presented here, together with their authors, producers and casts, will remain nameless until a week after the first performance. The directors of this effort, who are also remaining nameless, are at no loss for works submitted to them for presentation under these conditions. All plays produced, however, will first be submitted to the Censor of such plays.

THE IDEAL TREE TO PLANT

In selecting a tree for planting the ideal tree is one that has a straight whip-stock or fishing pole trunk and leader, and ranger from 1 1/2 to 2 inches at the butt. If the trees are to be obtained from wooded lands, those growing in open places rather than those in the interior of woods should be selected. Such trees are not only more symmetrical in crown but, having grown more or less in the open, are better able to withstand the exposure they must endure when set out as shade or ornamental trees. The trunks of young trees which have been much shaded are frequently subject to sun-scald when planted in the open.

While it is advisable to select trees with well-formed crowns, says the Dominion Department of Agriculture, it is even more important to secure those with well-developed and compact root systems. The more small fibrous roots the tree has, the greater will be its chance of surviving the shock of transplanting and the more readily will it establish itself in the new site. Trees procured from a commercial nursery are often more desirable for this reason than those dug up from woodlands. Nursery trees as a rule have been taken up and transplanted several times and as a result have a better and more compact root system than those grown naturally.

In taking up a tree, do not partially dig it out and then drag it free of the soil, thereby sacrificing many of the feeding roots.

WOULD GIVE ARMS TO ALL CITIZENS

CHICAGO, May 1.—(C.P.)—Lt.-Col. Calvin Goddard's idea of fighting crime is to arm every law abiding citizen with a pistol he knows how to use. Fingerprints of all weapon carriers would help bar pistol sales to criminals.

Arms and munitions expert, professor of political science at Northwestern University, director of the school's scientific crime detection laboratory and a crack marksman, Col. Goddard bases his theory on the assumption:

"Every hoodlum and gunman is afraid of running into the wrong end of a pistol. Arm the reputable citizen and you disarm the criminal. He still has his weapon, but he'll think twice about pulling the trigger."

One of the framers of a bill pending in the Illinois general assembly designed to give respectable citizens licenses to carry pistols for protective purposes and at the same time making it difficult for known criminals to own them, Col. Goddard is actively supporting passage of the measure.

So many firearm laws in force throughout the United States, he declared, are based on the promise that every citizen who carries a revolver is a potential criminal, just as every motorist might be a reckless driver.

It is not the instrument, but the person who is dangerous, he said. Col. Goddard expressed his view that the bill would be a model for other states.

Chief feature of the bill is the rigid qualifications all applicants for weapon privileges must furnish. All will be required to submit to fingerprinting, copies of which shall be sent to the Illinois State Bureau of Criminal Identification and the U. S. Bureau of Investigation.

Reputable citizens won't object to this, Col. Goddard said, but hoodlums will. Another provision of the bill excludes possession of pistols from persons who have been convicted for crimes of violence.
