JOHN McQUILLAN.

There passed peacefully away at his home in New Haven, on Thursday, February 22nd, Mr. John McQuillan, in the 74th year of his age. The deceased had been ailing only a few weeks and as death was approaching, it was the ending of a well spent life, he being attended in his last hours by his pastor, Rev. Father Curran, who administered to him the last sacraments of his holy church. The late Mr. McQuillan, possessed a beautiful character, was a good citizen, a charitable man and a faithful Catholic. His funeral took place on Sunday afternoon, to St. Ann's Church, lot 65, and was largely attended, upwards of sixty sleighs following the remains.

He leaves to mourn a sorrowing widow, five sons and six daughters, viz.—Mrs. Peter G. Trainor, Charlottetown, Margaret Loretta, Mary Patrick and James, of Boston, who came home to see their father before he died; Mr. Owen, of Lot 65; John, Joseph, Annie and Bertha, at home. WASTAGE OF AIR CRAFT NORMAL

LONDON, Saturday, March 4.—The wastage of aircraft on the western front last month is described as normal as mist and fog greatly hampered bombing raids, battery spotting and fruitful occasions for air fights. According to the daily official reports from British general headquarters and the French Ministry of War, 89 aeroplanes were accounted for in February while in January the losses were officially recorded as 89, and in December 72. Of the 89 machines 60 belonged to the German flying service, British airmen claimed 41 of these, and the French 19. The following particulars of those which fell are officially given: Eight were destroyed, 27 driven down damaged, 3 came down in our lines, and one was brought down in air fights. Our successes were largely in excess of our losses. Last month 23 British machines were reported missing or brought down. The number of allied machines officially claimed by German headquarters, partly in air fights and partly from anti-aircraft fire, is 29. An interesting feature of the German communiques last month was that for the first time since Boelcke's death in October an airman was singled out for mention. The name of this man is Lieut. Von Richthofen, who is said on February 15th to have achieved his 20th and 21st victims. None of Richthofen's previous successes were officially mentioned. During the month the French airman, Guynemer, received well deserved promotion to the rank of captain. He has 30 German victims to his credit. Though he did not improve his position in February he is still ahead on the list of French airmen.

CONQUERING PNEUMONIA.

Detailed investigation has shown that there are four distinct types of organisms which, injected into the human body, will produce the disease known as pneumonia. Under the microscope these organisms all look alike; only delicate laboratory tests disclose that they are really different species. The workers at Rockefeller Hospital prosaically describe them as Type I, Type II, Type III, and Type IV; years of investigation have made the experimenters so expert that, a few hours after isolating a culture from the human throat, they

Farm for Sale

I offer by private sale the two valuable farms of the Late Thomas Glover as I find it necessary to dispose of these farms at once in order to pay all my attention to the mercantile business at O'Leary in which I am interested and where I intend to move at once.

These properties consist of 90 acres all under the very best of cultivation, with the exception of about two acres of swamp with shore frontage (Bedouque Bay) and all suitable outer buildings in good repair with one of the best Farm Houses in the province, fitted with bath and sewerage.

Also have the advantage of town schools, churches, stores and Post Office as it is only a few minutes walk to the centre of the town and yet clear of town taxes, and situated in the right spot to catch the early and one of the best markets in the Province.

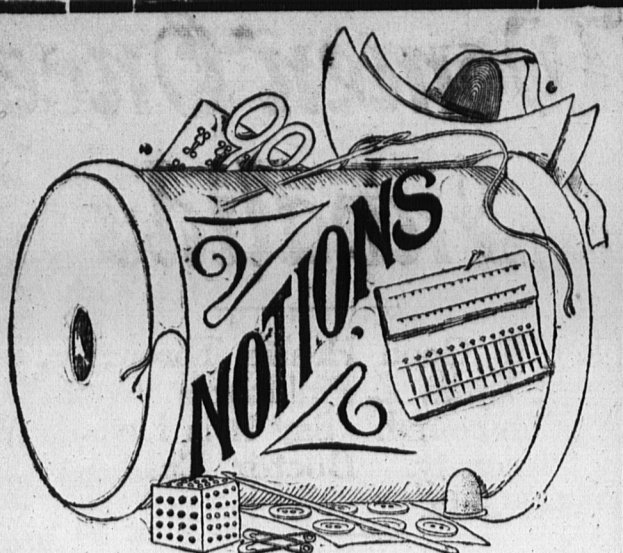

If these farms are not sold by private sale before the 24th of March, they will be put up at Public auction on the 26th, at the hour of 12 o'clock noon sharp.

For further particulars apply on the premises or write.

can definitely determine to which type it belongs. For the first time the scientific world understands the disease. Pneumonia is no longer a bacterial out-law; it obeys the usual rules peculiarly as do diphtheria and tetanus. The great point is that pneumonia is not one disease—it is four diseases. The physician can notice no essential differences in their bedside manifestations, differ greatly in their virulence. It is true, as pasteur and Sternberg discovered, that about sixty per cent of normal human beings constantly carry the pneumonia germ in their mouths and throats. But the Rockefeller workers have discovered that it is only one species of pneumococci—Type IV—that we have always with us. The reason that we can go about so encumbered and yet seldom have the disease is that this type is the least virulent of all four. Its disease-producing power is so slight that most of us easily resist it; if, owing to a weakened condition, it actually starts the infection, it usually runs a mild course. Nearly all of us have become familiar with pneumonia in this attenuated form, and these are usually cases of Type II, the self-inflicted type. But the other three kinds—the most severe forms of the disease—are not perpetually lodged in the fauces of the average citizen. If we are afflicted with one of these organisms, it is not a case of autoinoculation; the infection comes from without just as much as if it were smallpox or the bubonic plague. —Burton J. Kendrick, in Harper's Magazine for February.

ANTIPATHIES OF GREAT MEN

It is a natural human trait to desire kinship with great minds and partly for this reason the world loves to hear of the little weaknesses, inconsistencies and illogical prejudices of its intellectual giants. The following, then, a carefully compiled and, as far as the writer knows, absolutely authentic list of the antipathies of certain pastmasters may prove of general interest. Shakespeare, it seems, disliked a forced abstinence from victuals. Lord Chesterfield hated to have the chair upon which he was just sitting down withdrawn from under him. The Iron Duke (and it may be remarked in passing that Lord Roberts of our own day has a similar aversion) would grow quite uneasy if shut up in the same room with a mad dog. Dr. Abernethy, a man proverbially intolerant of mere fads and crotchets, had yet a strong personal objection to sleeping in damp sheets. Schiller would never, if he could avoid it, write with a broken nib. Carlyle never liked being alluded to as a "blithering idiot." Keats would go out of his way to avoid a lunatic with a knife. Faraday, the great chemist, disliked the sensation of nitric acid on his hands. Macready had a great disrelish for either the flavor of perfume of bad eggs. Mendessohn did not like the sound of a fingernail being drawn across a slate. A thumb-nail caused him similar disquiet.
