MONTANA COWBOY MOVED TO CHIVALRY ENLISTS WITH THE ALLIES

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—In the training camp in England where Canadian troops are being whipped into fighting trim a bewildered and happy Montana cowboy, who is in this war because of a fine chivalry, is probably smoking himself a dull brown warmly wrapped in knitted mufflers and "cholera belts." By this time he should have received the bulky parcel containing these things, for it left New York on board the St. Louis, of the American line, before Christmas.

The cowboy is Frang McCullom, who with five hundred of his companions from the section of Montana where they still ride, herd and have semi-annual round-ups, rode over into Canada and enlisted, because, as he explained: "I didn't like the way the Germans were treating the women. So, with some more of the fellows, I went over and enlisted."

Split up into Sections

When the Montana contingent arrived in Valcartier, Canada, they were split up into sections and distributed about, much to the disgust of all concerned. They had imagined they would be able to ride their horses into the fight, but the horses were not wanted and the cowboys became foot soldiers. McCullom was wondering lonesomely about Valcartier in October, when he met a party of men and women from New York. One of the women, who was born in England, told him to write her when he felt lonesome and to let her know when he came back home, promising that she and her husband would treat him to the best dinner in New York. He promised: "I sure will," answered McCullom fervently. And true to his word, in December he wrote the following letter, which explains the mufflers, cigarettes and bands:—

A Letter to the "Folks"

"Dear Folks—I suppose you will be thinking I have forgotten you since we left Valcartier. Well I have not, only I lost your address, and I was looking through my kitbag today and I ran across it. So I wrote this right away. I thought of that dinner you promised me and I wish I was there, as a good dinner would do good now. Well, the Germans are getting all they want now. I think we will soon have the Germans against the wall. Well I can't think of any more to say so I will close for this time, hoping this letter finds you well as it leaves me and hoping to hear from you soon." "The folks" after reading the letter sent off the box of cigarettes, mufflers, cigars, and knitted bands. In the letter which accompanied this box McCullom was instructed to present the surplus mufflers and bands to the fortunate friends. The promise of the dinner on his return was renewed.

"SMASH KIEL FLEET"

LONDON, Jan. 19.—H. G. Wells, writing in the London Daily Chronicle on the organization of foresight in Britain, says:—

"There are three things as plain as daylight about the present situation, that we will have to go into the Kiel Canal with floating batteries and either wreck the canal or force the fleet into action; that we will have to produce huge land guns, carried on pedrails or some such device, and smash our way through Metz to the Rhine and Westphalia and that we will have to fight the Germans out of the air."

"All these things are obvious common sense necessities of the present situation. If we do not do these things there will be no decision, no conclusion of this war. But as no foreign power has yet given these obvious steps the prestige of its approval we are probably preparing for nothing of the sort."

"We are just piling up armies and training them for trench warfare. That is, we understand, the correct thing. We are turning skilled artisans and engineers into common infantrymen, bright minded Cockneys and Irishmen into mechanical soldiers."

"We are probably going to fight our way back, unfortunately, at enormous cost of life and wealth, while Westphalia, intact and unthreatened, carries on business as usual and prepares great stocks of goods against the boom in German wares that will follow the war."

"We are not even considering the inevitability of the dumping of accumulated German stocks in aniline dyes, in motor wheels, electrical goods and a hundred such things when peace is declared. We are not, indeed, considering anything at all."

"We are just piling up armies and training them for trench warfare. That is, we understand, the correct thing. We are turning skilled artisans and engineers into common infantrymen, bright minded Cockneys and Irishmen into mechanical soldiers."

OFFERS TO MAKE A MAN OF EVERY SING SING CONVICT

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Henry Ford, of Detroit, millionaire manufacturer of automobiles, will guarantee to take every convict out of Sing Sing Prison and make a man out of him. He so stated today when he appeared to testify before the United States Commission of Industrial Relations, which is investigating the great philanthropic foundations of the country, and the cause of industrial unrest.

"The philanthropic foundations may do some good," said Mr. Ford, "but they are not adequate. I have little use for philanthropies as such. My idea is to aid men to help themselves. Nearly all are willing to work for adequate reward. We have all kinds of cripples in our employ and they are making good. We have many who have been in prison, who are outcasts from society. Every one of them is making a good showing and is gaining in self-respect and strength of character. We will guarantee to take every convict out of Sing Sing and make a man out of him."

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, was a witness. He read a telegram from the Commercial Telegraphers Union urging him to ask the Commission to summon before it officials of the large telegraph companies to testify regarding alleged blacklisting operations.

"I can assure your commission that if you will follow this suggestion you will receive some startling information," he said.

RAW FUR MARKET.

The catch up to date has fallen below that of previous years owing to the reluctance of dealers to issue their price lists as early in the season as usual, owing to the uncertainty of market conditions and to persistent reports that there would not be a market for raw furs during the present season, the trapper delayed in setting out his traps, resulting in a smaller catch of unprime furs. Owing to the cold weather that has prevailed this season the stocks of the retailer have been reduced, making a demand for furs from manufacturers, which, taken in connection with the short catch, has caused an unexpected demand for raw furs with an advance in price.

Great Conflagration Raging

"Fire broke out at an early hour this morning in the store of Peter Warren on South Street. A strong wind was blowing at the time and the fire spread rapidly to the adjoining buildings and was soon beyond control of the Fire Department. Five business blocks have already been destroyed and the fire is still spreading. The loss will be over Two Million Dollars."

"The barns of William Walker were destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon. Practically none of the contents were saved. Mr. Walker's loss is a very heavy one as he carried no insurance."

Such news items as the above are appearing in our papers every day and we pay little attention to them thinking that nothing like this can ever happen to us; and then without a moment's warning the very same thing has happened, and we are viewing a pile of ashes where our beautiful buildings stood a few hours before.

Have you examined your fire insurance policies carefully? How do they compare with the value of your property? There is no reason why you should sustain a heavy loss if visited by fire.

Insurance rates in this Province are very low compared to what they are in other places, and practically all the Companies operating here are reliable. We represent nine Companies that are among the strongest in the world. Look into your insurance today and if you find that you are underinsured SEE US AT ONCE and we will remedy the situation
