In Memoriam

NEIL D. MORRISON

A feeling of deepest sorrow passed over Launching and surrounding districts when it was learned that the angel of death again had visited Launching and claimed the soul of Neil D. Morrison on January 31st, 1946. The oldest and most respected resident of the district, Niel Dan as he was familiarly known was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Morrison of Launching. He was in his 82nd year and spent all his long life in the home where he was born. He was only ill a couple of days with a heart ailment and his many friends were shocked and grieved to hear of his death. Always a strong robust man, he never needed medical attention during his life, until a couple of days before his death when he took a heart turn. His family rushed medical aid to him, and for two days it seemed as if he would recover. But very suddenly the call came. But he was well prepared after receiving the last sacraments of the Holy Catholic Church of which he was a devout member. His soul at peace with God he went forward to meet his maker. He was a carpenter of outstanding merit and everyday was busy in his shop, repairing and making implements for his many customers, who came from far and near to get their repairing done, for they were always sure of a good job well done. For over thirty years he acted as local undertaker and always performed his duties well when the call of duty came. He was a great lover of home and by his untiring efforts and thrift he built up for his family one of the best homesteads in the district.

He will be greatly missed in the community, but it is in the home where his loss will be most felt. Ever of a jovial disposition he was always ready to welcome friend and stranger and his light heart kept him young in spirit and he could enjoy the company of the young as well as the old. His wife (nee Christene McDonald) of Georgetown Royalty predeceased him eighteen years ago. There are left to mourn his passing, two daughters, (Elizabeth) Mrs. Joseph A. Morrison and Florence, his son-in-law Joseph A. Morrison, three grandsons, Freddy, Reggie and Norbert, one grand-daughter Christene one sister Mrs. Annie Campbell, Pictou, N. S., a number of nieces and nephews, also a large host of relatives and friends who mourn his loss.

His funeral the largest seen here for some time took place at St. George's Church, St. Georges, on February 2nd. Requiem High Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Murphy, S. J., of Charlottetown, after which his mortal remains were conveyed to the adjoining cemetery.

The pall bearers were: Roderick Morrison, W. A. McKinnon, Angus D. Walker, Stephen McDonald, Hugh McPhee and Louis Fitzpatrick. Hearse driver, Alfred Walker.

Card Of Thanks

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Morrison and family wish to thank their friends for the many acts of kindness during their recent sad bereavement. Also those who sent Mass Cards, Letters and Cards of Sympathy.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of
STANLEY CROCKETT
who departed this life
March 29, 1945.

We cannot think of him as dead
Who walk with us no more
Along the path of life we tread
He has but gone before.

Lovingly Remembered and Sadly Missed by His Mother, Brothers and Sisters.

MRS. MARY PROUDE

The death occurred on March 1, 1946, at her home 223 Fitzroy Street, of Mrs. Mary Proude, widow of the late George F. Proude of Loyalist. Mrs. Proude had celebrated her birthday on Feb. 20 and was 91 years of age, having been born in 1855 at Kingston, P.E.I.

Funeral services were conducted on Sunday afternoon, March 3 by her pastor, the Rev. T. E. McLennan of Trinity United Church, assisted by the Rev. I. J. Levy of the Baptist Church, at the McLean Funeral Home, and at the graveside at Princetown Road. The hymns sung were favorites of Mrs. Proude: "The Lord is My Shepherd" and "O Safe to the Rock." The pall bearers were Messrs. Peter Small, Herb Dollar, Fred and Lorne Coles, Lyle Robson and Harry Younker.

There are left to mourn a gentle Christian mother: two daughters, Mrs. Emerson Kent and Mrs. Charles Proude of New Wiltshire, and two sons, Percy and Owen Proude of Charlottetown. There are also left to cherish her memory a number of grandchildren and an exceptionally large circle of friends both in Charlottetown and in her former homes at Loyalist and Kingston. A daughter, Mrs. Squires predeceased her last September, and a son Dale was killed in action during the First World War.

For many years a faithful member of Trinity Church, Charlottetown, she will be greatly missed, especially in the house where she lived and made of it a home. "Strength and honour are her clothing; and she shall rejoice in time to come. Give her of the fruit of her hands; and let her own works praise her in the gates."

GIFTS OF THE SPIRIT

The gifts of God's spirit are given not to suppress human personality but to set it free; not to limit but to enhance its creative possibilities. After Pentecost the disciples were not less themselves but more; their own individual qualities were raised to the highest level. The tendency of the modern world is to standardize not only machines but human beings, a tendency which, carried to its utmost limit, would make men but parts of a universal mechanism. This process, indeed, is worked out to its logical conclusion in the Nazi philosophy, though the whole trend of modern civilization sometimes appears to be moving in the same direction. The ever-increasing control over men's activities which total war made necessary was bound to hinder the free development of personal qualities.

Even in religion the same tendency can be observed. To insist upon too great a rigidity in matters of belief; to over-standardize worship; to apply a rule of thumb test of Christian character—as though a Christian were a kind of finished manufactured article—is to hinder the free operation of God's spirit. The spirit of God is the spirit of life, and life can never be standardized. For a time it may seem possible to force men, and even religion, into one particular mould, but sooner or later life will burst its bonds and flow into new creative channels of expression.

The individual Christian must aim at being himself. To try to reproduce the experience of the saints, or even to copy the life of our Lord, is to misunderstand the nature of the spirit's activities in human life. The rich fullness of religious experience is realized only when the experience of different individuals is brought together and is understood rather as an orchestral symphony than as music produced by so many single instruments. If spiritual gifts are so understood the Christian will avoid the cardinal mistake of under-valuing the importance of the contribution which, as the channel of God's spirit, he can make to the creative powers of the Christian Fellowship as a whole. He will also realize that as the perfection of the whole depends upon him so he utterly depends upon "the same God, who worketh all in all."

LONG RIVER W. I.

The March meeting of the Long River Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Ralph Johnstone, with an attendance of seventeen members and eight visitors. Meeting opened by singing the Ode followed by Creed in unison. Minutes of last meeting were read and approved. The members were glad to welcome two former members.

Mrs. Murdock MacLeod reported that 13 children's vests, 2 pairs men's socks and 2 pairs gloves had been handed in for Red Cross. The members were asked to knit up Red Cross yarn on hand as soon as possible. The School Committee reported that a bill of $8.05 for play books had been handed in by Teachers, it was moved and seconded that this bill be paid. Also that a bill of 45 cents for sending away Blue Cross subscriptions be paid.

Sick Committee reported that four calls had been made. New committees appointed were: School —Mrs Eustace Paynter and Mrs. Ralph Johnstone. Sick—Mrs. W. E. Johnstone, Mrs. Joseph Dunning and Mrs. William Doughart. Lunch —Mrs. Fitzsimmons, Mrs. Arthur Johnstone, Mrs. W. E. Johnstone. Programme — Mrs. Arthur Johnstone and Mrs. Edward Campbell.

Next meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. Ernest Dunning, role call to be answered by a housecleaning hint. Discussion on play followed but it was decided to wait until Play books were available. The programme consisted of an Auction Sale, with Mr. Elmer Paynter very capably acting as auctioneer, two contests and a sing-song led by Mrs. Murdock MacLeod. Proceeds of auction sale amounted to $20.45. Lunch $2.70. Collection $1.40 and 25 cents membership fees. Meeting closed by singing the National Anthem. A very bountiful lunch was served.

HAMILTON W. I.

The regular monthly meeting of the Hamilton W. I. was held at the home of Mrs. George Crozier, March 15th. The meeting opened in the usual manner with the President, Mrs. James Craig presiding. The committees gave their reports. School Committee reported school is to be scrubbed every month till end of school term. Sick Committee reported sending one box of fruit. The secretary read a letter regarding the Prince County Hospital Campaign for Funds.

After the business part of the meeting was over our postponed auction sale was held. Mr. George Crozier capably auctioned off the different articles and a nice sum was realised which goes towards our Institute work. The meeting closed by singing National Anthem.

To be strictly correct, a dessert fork is served with the dessert and is not included in the place setting. If there are two forks of equal size at your place, however, use the one outside first.

Card of Thanks

I wish to thank the members of the Legislature, the officers of the House as well as the press, for the acts of kindness received by me while ill in Charlottetown.

W. H. Dennis.

In Memory of Louise Bennet MacCready On Her Birthday

Now of the immortals, when on earth
She walked in gracious majesty.
Of friends she had no dearth
Who loved her for her wisdom and her mirth.
A rare intelligence and understanding she possessed,
Excelling in good deeds; And now at rest.
Her spirit while attuned to higher things
Still lingers with us, and its presence brings
Sweet memories of kind and lovely things.

CHAPTER VI

The weeks were passing and it was real summer. Lydia fretted occasionally about the heat and the lack of funds which prevented them from going off to some desirable spot, but Susan was blissfully happy.

"Now," she thought, "at last my life is taking shape in the way I had planned." She could read interest and admiration in Martin Graham's eyes and the gradual growth of their relationship intoxicated her.

She had been delighted in the first place to find that, after all, he had not forgotten her. His apologies for the long gap in their acquaintance had been disarming and quite convincing. He had not forgotten her, but had only been waiting for an opportunity . . .

Later on, on an occasion when she had met Pansy Mackay, and Pansy had looked surprised at this item of information, and had said that she was sure Martin had been at the War Office all the spring, and that she herself had seen him off and on, Susan was only faintly troubled. For why, after all, should Martin go out of his way to tell her something that was not true?

The thought of going back to Broadhurst now was becoming distasteful to Susan. She had not forgotten Terence Blackburne, but he had faded into the background of her thoughts and no longer seemed quite real.

Her whole life was centred around London and Martin Graham. She was even neglecting her practising, forgetting about her music.

She became restless and, somewhat to her consternation, disturbingly emotional. Meetings and telephone calls became of such shattering importance that, at the smallest delay, the smallest hitch, she felt that the word was coming to an end. She felt quite incapable of keeping calm, of seeing things in their right proportions.

In spite of her agitation, however, her self-control was strong enough to hide her feelings from Martin. When he did not always ring up, or come at the moment that she had expected him, she never let him see that her whole world had been rocking. The surface veneer of the coquette overlaid successfully her more deep-seated emotionalism. She led him on, intrigued his attention, forged the bonds with which she hoped later to bind him to her.

Lydia watched the development of their romance with interest and approval.

"Such a charming young man," Lydia said; "so handsome and distinguished-looking. Good family, too. Are you in love with him, darling?"

"I'm not sure," she smiled. "It's rather soon yet to make up one's mind."

Lydia got up from the sofa. She glanced with some concern at the clock on the mantelpiece. "Is that clock right by any chance, darling? I promised I'd meet Mildred Mackay at a tea shop at four. What are you doing with yourself this afternoon, by the way?"

"Probably meeting Martin later. He's going to ring up." She studied the clock on the mantelpiece and compared it with her own wrist-watch. "I think that clock must be fast."

"I'll go and change, anyway." Lydia went out through the door. "Have a good time, darling."

After she had gone Susan flung herself down on the sofa. Martin had promised to ring up before three o'clock She hoped that the clock on the mantelpiece, the hands of which pointed to twenty-five minutes to four, was really fast, but she was not sure.

When eventually the telephone bell rang her heart suddenly began to beat at twice its normal rate and she upbraided herself irritably for her own lack of balance.

Martin's voice calmed her, and the relief of knowing that it was really he at the other end of the wire.

"Susie, I'm sorry I'm so late ringing you. The fact is things aren't going too well at the office here. I've got a devil of a lot to do, mountains of work. I'm afraid our meeting will have to be off for today."

"Oh." She choked down her disappointment. "All right, Martin. What a bore for you."

"Yes, isn't it?" The tone of his voice became more intimate. "How are you?"

She smiled into the telephone. "Bearing up."

"Thought of me at all—since we last met?"

"Well, perhaps — just occasionally."

"I'm sick at not seeing you. We must go out together again soon. I'll give you another ring."

"Yes, do, Martin."

He hummed a tune into the telephone. She recognized the tune from a show they had seen lately and the words of the refrain which had been above love.

"Yes." She laughed. "I remember."

"Well," he said, "I suppose I must bet back to work. Good-bye, for now."

She hung up the receiver and stood for a few seconds beside the telephone without moving. Then, throwing off her preoccupation with an effort, she went through to her bedroom. The flat was empty and it was too nice a day to stay at home for tea by herself. She put on her outdoor things and went out.

NORTH WILTSHIRE W. M. S.

The March meeting of the North Wiltshire Auxiliary of the Women's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. Bruce Noy. The worship period was the theme—"Builders together with God" was led by Mrs. Clarke and opened with Hymn —"Father of all in whom are one. This was followed by meditation. A solo was sung by Mrs. Bowman and this part of the worship closed with the taking of the offering and dedication.

The President Mrs. MacRae presided over the business period which followed. In the absence of the Secretary Mrs. Hatherley was appointed to act. Roll call was answered by seven members. There were four visitors present. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Mrs. Hatherley read a letter from the Presbyterial Christian Stewardship Secretary, and our allocation was accepted. An invitation was received from the Hampshire W. M. S. to join with them in the World Day of Prayer service.

A Lenter offering of $10.00 was given by a member to be used for a special object—"A girl in a school in Africa. We were pleased to receive one new member. Mrs. Bowman took number of Community Friendship visits. Easter envelopes were given to members and associate members The members are to remember sunny days with pennies. Mrs. Noy read a receipt for $6. for Baby Band.

The study period was on the Africa program—What of tomorrow. This included a summing up of the contributions of the founder of the Mission, Dr. Walter Currie and presented the present day call to advance in three new sections of Angola and also appealed for new recruits as missionaries. The closing worship was then held and the next meeting closed with Mina Logas benediction.

How to get children liking Vegetables

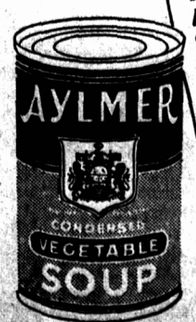
They'll really enjoy vegetables —9 of Canada's finest—when you serve Aylmer Vegetable Soup

How easy to enjoy the benefits of 9 nourishing vegetables . . . when all youngsters love Aylmer Vegetable Soup! And right now, when fresh vegetables are scarce, there's no thriftier way of making sure they get the vitamins and minerals that vegetables supply.

So serve Aylmer Vegetable Soup often! Its peas, corn, carrots, celery, potatoes, cabbage, turnip, tomatoes and onion . . . plus rice, barley, macaroni, butter and good beef stock . . . are just the delicious nourishment that growing children need!

What has SOIL NUTRITION to do with family meals?

The more fertile the soil—the better the vegetables grow! So Aylmer Field Men advise farmers on soil nutrition—and Aylmer vegetables grow large and flavorful, with higher nutritive value. Picked at perfect maturity, they reach the Aylmer canneries while still field-fresh—crisp and full of flavor. No wonder Aylmer Vegetable Soup tastes extra good!



Try . . . AYLMER Supper Pot
- 2 cups short-length macaroni
- 1 can Aylmer Vegetable Soup
- 1 can of water
- 1 cup grated, nippy cheese

Cook macaroni in boiling salted water until tender (allowing 1 teaspoon of salt to each quart of water); drain, rinse and drain. Add the Aylmer Vegetable Soup and the can of water. Heat thoroughly in a double boiler, then stir in the cheese.
