THE LETTER

Chapter I
The day that brought the first letter from her son, announcing his arrival in a week, was the beginning of a great change for Amy Talbot. But she did not know that.

She did not even know the letter was on its way. If she had, she would have been in a great flutter of excitement, and would probably have put on her sunbonnet and walked up the road to meet the postman, instead of staying in the kitchen beating up biscuits for the mid-day dinner. Letters were a huge event in her life.

Letters from her absent son and her daughter were, indeed, her only pleasure. But Amy Talbot had the one and only blessing that goes with a life that has little pleasure—she had so much to do she never had time to think about the absence of it!

The thick white dough was ready. She lifted out a big spoonful of it at a time, dropping it on a flour covered board and frowning as she watched it. Amy Talbot never rolled out her biscuits, she claimed it made them heavy—she was famous for miles because of the lightness of her baking. She rolled the dough in flour, shaping each bit deftly as she handled it, and scarcely seeming to touch it for every touch, once the beating was over, tended to make the biscuits less light and airy! Two big panfuls were ready for the oven.

TO RELIEVE PAIN AND BACKACHE

Women May Depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Minneapolis, Minn.—"I had heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that when I realized I needed to take something to relieve my pains and backache, and to help build me up, I began to take that. I had been so sick off and on for years and barely weighed a hundred pounds, but now I have had such good results that I can recommend the Vegetable Compound to every one."—Mrs. J. J. BEBER, 3939 18th Ave. South, Minneapolis, Minn.

chen, for the voice was fresh and sweet, pure in tone, and only an expert would know that it was shallow. But Mrs. Talbot frowned more deeply as she listened. "If you love me— As I love you."

The voice soared to the "me" and dropped to the "you." Mrs. Talbot shut the oven door almost with a snap, in spite of her biscuits, and went to the foot of the stairs. "Amy," she called. "Amy!" "Yes, mother."

facing the garden back of the house. The sun shone down on her hair, lighting it up, the June breeze came laden with fragrance from the fields and orchards. Amy wanted to sing, simply from joy of being 17 and gorgeously healthy. But the sight of a figure in the garden restrained her.

Then a gleam of mischief lit up her brown eyes. She began to sing a well known church hymn, using the correct words, the correct in flections—but in some subtle fashion she changed the time a little, a very little. A song writer would say she "ragged it." She made the hymn a jolly, rollicking, and wondrously secular tune.

The girl jumped from the door with an excited cry. "Mother, here's the postman, and a letter." Mrs. Talbot almost ran to get it—it would be from Luther, she thought. A letter was an event—even Mr. Talbot left off weeding and came across to the kitchen door. Even the postman stopped, to see if it was from the person he decided had written it!

By far the greater number of fish are more or less wedge-shaped, like a herring or mackerel. This is to enable them to cleave the water easily as they move rapidly from place to place. It is the shape best adapted for moving in the water, and the human being, when diving, tries to imitate the shape as far as possible. All the swift swimmers among the fish are this shape. The flat fish, like skates and flounders, in the majority of cases live down at the bottom of the water.

"You c'd do worse than sing hymns," she remarked. "Some hymns are right pretty. Your father says love songs are wicked." "Mother—they're beautiful! There's Tosti's 'Goodbye'—do you think that's wicked?" With a damp cloth she began cleaning the mirror in the "halltrack," lifting her voice far beyond its true range. "Good-bye, for-ever, good-bye, for-ever, Good-bye—"
