It is with sincere regret the Guardian records the death at the age of fifty-six of Mr. Charles J. Gallagher, manager of the Prince Edward and Capitol Theatres of F. J. Spencer, Ltd. The death occurred rather unexpectedly about eleven o'clock yesterday forenoon in the Prince Edward Island Hospital. Mr. Gallagher had not been well for some months, but it was anticipated that a "rest cure" in the hospital would restore him to his usual good health. He entered the hospital a week ago after experiencing a heart attack on his way from his home to the theatre, and at the hospital he was advised that treatment would be necessary for four or five weeks. He was in remarkably good spirits on Sunday and yesterday morning, but a repetition of the heart attack previously experienced, proved fatal.

The only one on deck at the time, he was washing his face and is supposed to have stumbled on the deckload of lumber and thus fallen overboard.

The deceased was a nephew of Mrs. D. J. Riley, Charlottetown. Mr. S. R. Burke, who is a native of Charlottetown, was formerly Mayor of Alberton and Mrs. Burke was formerly a Miss Reid of that town.
