FOR SALE

Owing to the fact that I will not be in a position to campaign horses very much during the season of 1926, I would like to reduce my stable, and offer for sale any one or more of the following horses.

THE YANK, 2.20 1/2, time record 2:14 1/2, eligible to 2.25 Trots, World's Champion trotter on ice, record 2:15 1/2.

BRITISH GINGER, heat record 2:19 1/4, eligible to any class. This trotter has been in 2:18 and is a good prospect for slow classes.

DAN PATCHEN, pacer record 2:15 1/4, eligible to 2.20 class. Should be a very valuable horse this year.

MACK TODD, 2.24 1/2, eligible to 2.30 trot. Matinee record 2:15 1/4, ice record half mile 1:01 1/4. This horse was never in as good shape as he is now and should win in his class.

COLONEL WALTZ, 2:16 1/4, eligible to 2.22 pace, is in grand shape and will win some money this year.

MARGARET GRATAN, has been lame but looks as though she might go sound this year. If so should pace in 2:10.

Particulars regarding the prices of the above horses can be obtained at my office next to the MacKinnon Drug Company, during the hours of 2 p. m. to 5 p. m. They can be seen at my stables.

The Mystery of The Singing Walls

The physician paused and for a time lay back against the sofa, his sharply chiseled, aristocratic face pale, his eyes closed. Obviously the strain of the narrative was telling on him.

"Would you mind another cigarette?" he asked finally. "I want to finish this business now."

After John had lit his light the thin, paper cylinder, he took a few puffs and gazed thoughtfully through the haze of blue smoke hanging over his head.

"The fog had settled down," he resumed, "and it was as dark as night, so that I had to light the lights on my car. As I stooped to press the switch, I noticed with a start that it was three-thirty. Automatically, without exactly sensing what I was doing, I turned toward the East Side. Ahead, in the round disk of the headlight, dancing on the white sheet of the fog, was a black spot and, in the middle, those same words were written, 'his time is red. Kill him! Kill him! No one will know.'"

"I couldn't tell how I got there, but, before I knew it, I was swinging over Twenty-Eighth street and drawing up at the curb in the hospital yard. Gripping my little black bag, I crossed the street and started to walk up and down that long stretch in between the warehouse and the hospital. The fog was as thick as milk and it felt refreshing. In the semi-darkness, I pulled out a bottle of chloroform and emptied half of it on a wad of absorbent cotton. Then, with a reaction, I started to throw it in the gutter. Then I clapped it in a tin box in my bag. I was struggling hard fighting with it, my night, but I kept ringing in my ears, through a screeching roar like an imperfectly adjusted radio, 'Kill him! He took her from you. Kill him!'"

"A rhabout stopped beside me, leaning slightly toward the curb, where the wheels sunk into a ditch recently filled in. For a flash I glanced up and down the deserted street.

"In the shadowy interior, I could see dimly Mr. Warburton's face. There was something grim about it, something unrelenting, menacing, and like a flash, I had decided. He must have read it in my eyes for, as I opened the door and slipped in beside him, he started to push me. I began to apologize, at the same time opening up the tin box in my bag. As he caught the whiff of the drug, he turned and tried to force his way over me to the door. But he was a child in my hands, and I clapped the come over his nose and mouth and held him tight against me. Gradually I could feel him weaken and relax as the fumes filled his lungs. It was almost dark, because of the fog, and as I saw him lying there asleep, I knew that the first part of my scheme was almost fulfilled and that it was only necessary to give him an injection and get my revenge.

"Going in my office, I washed away the blood and sat waiting for the call from this house that I thought would come. You know the rest."

"Go on," Graham urged. "There are many points that are not clear to me."

"Go on," Busby growled. "Spill the whole works." "I answered the summons, expecting to find Mr. Warburton dead," the physician continued. "When I entered the room and saw he was coming to, I realized that there was only one thing to be done, and that was to shoot a hypodermic of some powerful drug into him to silence him forever. Consequently, I ran across the hall to fill my syringe, ostensibly to give him the permanganate antidote.

"As I was returning down the corridor, I heard him talking and I thought it was too late to stop his confession, and I started to escape. At the end of the hall, I hesitated, realizing that, perhaps, he was only mumbling in his semi-consciousness.

"Passing out on the arcade I stood in the dark, before those window-doors.

Supremacy in Fine Steel

In the percentage of Costly Chrome Vanadium Steel used, Dodge Brothers Motor Car outranks any other automobile in the World, regardless of cost.

It is everywhere conceded that Chrome Vanadium Steel is the toughest and most enduring metal ever created for use in the vital parts of a motor car.

It may not be so well known, however, that Dodge Brothers Motor Car ranks first in the world in the use of this costly and fatigue-proof material.

Dodge Brothers power assembly is almost entirely Chrome Vanadium—motor, connecting rods, crankshaft, transmission, universal joint, drive shaft, differential and rear axle.

Even the front axle is Chrome Vanadium—the entire steering unit—and every leaf of the springs.

In fact, wherever any manufacturer uses alloy steels, Dodge Brothers use costly Chrome Vanadium. And in numerous instances Dodge Brothers employ it where plain carbon steel, even in the costliest cars, is commonly thought sufficient.

This has been true from the day Dodge Brothers built their first motor car.

This explains why the words Long Life, Safety and Dependability are habitually associated with the name Dodge Brothers wherever motor cars are serving mankind.
