TO NEWFOUNDLAND—Mr. John Horne shipped by the S. S. Canadian Miner yesterday to Thomas Curran at St. John's, Nfld., the fast trotting mare Lady Be Sure. This mare raced here exhibition week and was greatly admired. Mr. Horne also shipped another speedy mare, sired by Captain Aubrey.

VALUABLE PURE BRED STOCK—The S. S. Canadian Miner took here yesterday some very valuable pure bred animals for the St. John's, Newfoundland government. These included 1 Clydesdale stallion, 1 Ayrshire bull, one Holstein cow, 7 Horned Dorset Sheep, 3 Tamworth pigs, all for breeding purposes.

WHARF NEEDS REPAIRS.—McEwen's wharf, West river, is in very bad condition and has been in that state for some time. The wharf and all who have occasion to use the wharf are complaining bitterly about the negligence of the government in letting this important wharf fall into such a disgraceful condition. As it stands at present it is hardly fit for shipping purposes and it is doubtful if the Harland will be able to continue the service there.

Wheat and corn declined three to six cents more a bushel to new low levels on the Chicago market. Oats, barley and rye also declined, but to no great extent. Coincident with the wheat reductions came announcement from Minneapolis of further reductions in the price of flour, new quotations being $10.90 to $11 a barrel, in carload lots. Corn declines carried down the price of hogs—"finished corn"—and the top was $15.85, with the average nearer $15. December delivery of wheat closed today at $1.89 1/2, compared with yesterday's $1.95, and December corn ended the day at 84 1/2 compared with 86 cents yesterday, and $1.22 1/2 a year ago. Corn for October delivery closed at 89 1/2 a cent and a ha' under yesterday, and far below the $1.40 quoted a year ago.

Fox-Breeding Now on Sound Business Basis

(From the Toronto Globe) More than a million dollars' worth of silver fox pelts were exported from Prince Edward Island during the past season. Half a million dollars' worth of breeding stock was shipped to various parts of the world at the same period. The two figures combined represent more value than that obtained from the fishing industry of this Province, surrounded by salt water. The increased importance of the pelt shipments, which is becoming more pronounced each year, offers convincing proof that the breeding of the silver fox is a sound business proposition and not mere speculation.

A few years immediately prior to the war gambling in fox ranches and fox shares began to occupy the attention of the "islanders." Values realized for breeding stock commanded such public interest that persons, irrespective of sex, occupation or experience, clamored to put their money into these producers of fur. Prices up to $35,000 were paid for adult "silver" foxes. The only high-class fur market of the world, London, was cut off. Buyers formerly arriving from Paris, Petrograd, Berlin and New York could find no outlet for their commodities. The breeders here became discouraged. Prices fell. Instead of five figures being asked animals could be purchased for a few hundred dollars. The courts of Europe, thought to be the chief "consumers," were economising or thinking of something else, and few considered other sources of demand.

Some Lose Faith. After the burst of the "bubble," however, men who had faith in the production of fox fur turned toward other markets. The world was being upheaved of all varieties of fur, they figured, and any industry which conserved a fast-disappearing natural resource was economically sound.

For Newfoundland.—The S. S. Canadian Miner sailed from here yesterday at noon for St. John's, Nfld., direct. She took from here a large quantity of oats, potatoes, turnips, butter, cheese eggs, etc. under deck, and 35 head of cattle, 100 sheep, three horses, 17 pigs, 1 automobile and sundry other cargo on deck. The Canadian Miner has carried a large quantity of produce from here since she started on this route last spring, besides over 1000 head cattle, 250 horses over 2000 pigs and a great number of sheep and lambs.

Boothe-Mckenna The following is taken from the "Daily Colonist," Victoria B. C.: The marriage of Miss Helena Teresa McKenna, second daughter of the late Dr. J. A. J. and Mrs. McKenna, of this city, to Mr. Reginald Le Roy Boothe, of Quesnel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peniston, took place quietly Saturday at Our Lady of Lourdes, "The Willows," only members of the family being present. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. Vincent McKenna, M. C., her two eldest brothers not being located here, looked charming in a tailored suit of heavy colored velvets, with toque of brown plush and satin and burnt orange overspreys. Mr. J. J. Donnelly, also of Quesnel, supported the groom. Both distinguished themselves in active service in the late war. Mr. Boothe having received the M. H. with honor. It was intended not to hold any reception, but the most intimate young friends of the bride planned a surprise by assembling at the house in their absence and greeting the wedding party on its return from the church. A very pleasant time was spent, music and light refreshments being enjoyed till the departure of the happy young couple for their future home in Quesnel. Many very beautiful presents testified to their popularity. (Miss McKenna, above referred to was for a number of years a pupil of Notre Dame Academy, and has hosts of friends in Charlottetown who will join in wishing her many years of happiness.)

When the postponement of the auctions at Montreal, New York and London was mentioned the breeders only smiled. It will cause little delay in selling; most of ours is done privately anyway. The banks, of course, are closing down on all lines of credit, and this is natural. The fur business should be affected, the slump in the lower grades of furs last year was the chief cause of this curtailment of credit.

Getting down to actual conditions, affairs here are very satisfactory. During my three-day stay at Charlottetown I visited several ranches, interviewed a number of fox men and saw hundreds of animals. There was, of course, much fox talk, but more of a variety respecting better breeding, feeding, management and pelts than there was of prices and dividends. Despite a rather unfavorable winter, the young pups were, with few exceptions, in remarkably good condition. All were growingly and in excellent health.

Poor food, principally deceased horse meat, had raised considerable mortality a few months ago, but since Government inspection of this and all other meats has been called in no complaints have been heard of. One or two cases of ricketts were noticed, but even this ailment has not been found to seriously impair the breeding qualities.

Capital Not Increased. In 1913 this concern, owning but five and a half pairs of animals, was capitalized at $135,000 or nearly $13,000 per fox. After the outbreak of the present no new foxes were added, and will not be until this winter. Now, however, the company owns 50 pairs of foxes, with the same capitalization, or less than $1,500 invested for every animal housed on the ranch. Better foxes are the result than there were in 1913.

Only the poorer quality were sold as pelts, the money from which was sufficient to carry the firm along and gradually change a speculative gamble into a sound, profitable business.

Nor is the unsettled state of the fur market at the present time likely to interfere with the prosperity of the "island" breeders. W. K. Rogers of Charlottetown, who owns or controls over 800 silvers, and who is by far the largest breeder of foxes in the world, was optimistic when I visited his ranch today. "The slump in the raw fur market will at most be but temporary," he said "and is not in the least likely to affect the price of good silver fox pelts."

Silver Fox Popular. "Silver foxes are a commercial commodity; there is a steady demand, not confined to the super rich, for reasonably-priced high-class fur. Natural resources of this kind have almost become exhausted, while the quality we turn out, raised by carefully-bred animals killed at the right time in a humane manner, is vastly superior to that produced by foxes captured in all seasons by indifferent trappers.

"Then, too," continued Mr. Rogers, "silver pelts did not advance in the same proportion with varieties of furs. Muskrafs, which a few years ago sold for ten cents, went as high as seven dollars in Montreal last year. I have seen musk sold at six dollars, while last season pelts of the same quality brought ten times that amount.

"Silvers," on the other hand, are selling for much less to-day than before the war. Prices then ranged around $2,000. To-day the average is about $800. We can't see any prospect of a recovery in the near future."

Old Orioles Had Some Great Leaders

When the old Baltimore Orioles under Ned Hanlon in the National League were winning pennants, they were hailed as the smartest collection of ballplayers ever gotten together. That honor still remains theirs, and some of the members in later years have shown why the team was so brilliant a one through the success they have achieved as managers of teams. The Brooklyns, winners of last season's pennant in the National League, was piloted by one of the greatest of the famous Orioles, Wilbert Robinson. In 1916 Robinson also led the Brooklyns to a pennant, and on both occasions he accomplished the feat with material that in the main was mediocre. Last year Robbie had a great pitching staff, due entirely to his own wonderful ability to get from a pitcher the best he has. But outside of the box Robinson had about two, or at most, three players of championship calibre, and the best of these was Jimmy Johnston.

Baseball was at a low ebb in New York when McGraw took hold there in 1902. Since that time he has given New York six pennants and a world's championship. In other years, except one, he has always had the Giants well up in the race. To Detroit Jennings brought three pennants, and lack of pitchers has kept him from winning more. The success of Kid Gleason with the White Sox is too recent to need repeating here. Jennings, McGraw, Gleason and Robinson were all prominent members of the great Baltimore of the '90's, for whom it was claimed that they were pennants, not by greater mechanical skill than that possessed by the opposition, but because they could pull the unexpected and outguess the other fellows and were always on the alert to take advantage of every opportunity.

Indoor Championships. The maritime indoor athletic championships will be held this year in Amherst under the auspices of the Ramblers A. A. and will take place on Thanksgiving Day, Oct. 18. A good list of entries has been prepared and the contests are expected to result in close competition. The championship events will be 220, 440 and 880 yards runs, one mile run and a five mile run, high jump, broad jump and shot-put. There will also be two open events, a fifty-yard dash and a pole vault. Entries will close with F. S. Cormier, 50 Station street, Amherst (N. S.) on Thursday, Oct. 14.

Mortality Low. In connection with mortality it is surprising how few losses occur when one considers that the bulk of the foxes to-day, although in captivity for high forty years, are as wild as if taken from the forest but a few months back. A few in climbing up the wire of their pens fall down (they will never retrace their steps in this case) and may break their backs or necks. Some losses occur among the young at birth, when the female for some reason or other will carry the pups outside the pen; a few will fight during the mating season with fatal results. In the last example mentioned, however, the pelts will be of almost full value as the breeding season comes in, notwithstanding the hazards described and due to the failure of usually average an increase of "a pair per pair" each season.

When the postponement of the auctions at Montreal, New York and London was mentioned the breeders only smiled. It will cause little delay in selling; most of ours is done privately anyway. The banks, of course, are closing down on all lines of credit, and this is natural. The fur business should be affected, the slump in the lower grades of furs last year was the chief cause of this curtailment of credit.
