THE FUGITIVE HAS POWERFUL TOPIC
Devotion to duty is the theme of Argosy Pictures' drama, "The Fugitive," starring Henry Fonda, Dolores del Rio and Pedro Armendariz which is now at the Prince Edward Theatre.
One of the first American pictures to be filmed in Latin-America, the story has as its hero a courageous priest. Defying a government ban against all religious activity, the Father quietly goes about his duties in the little jungle villages while a squad of police eagerly seeks his capture.
How a beautiful native girl helps him escape to the safety of another country, and how the call of duty brings him back again into the clutches of his enemies, forms the stirring climax.
Fonda portrays the priest and Miss del Rio the village girl, with Armendariz, a top favorite of the Spanish-speaking screen, in the role of the implacable police lieutenant. J. Carroll Nash, Ward Bond, Leo Carrillo, Robert Armstrong and John Qualen are featured in the picture, which was directed by John Ford for RKO Radio release.

The first year, new cloak rooms were built in the school and the entrance was changed to the building. In 1948 the district took over and remodelled the lighting arrangements according to specifications laid down by the Department of Education.
