CHARACTERISTICS TOLD BY EYEBROWS.

Straight and level eyebrows denote mentality—mechanics often have these. Brows that meet over the nose usually prove the love of authority and mark a capable person. Beautifully arched brows usually adorn a rather empty forehead, and indicate an opposite degree of intelligence to that shown by the long straight brow.

Brows arched in an acute angle over the centre of the brow have a perpetually surprised look. When the arch is but slight the forehead may be strong, full of intellectuality and with a fine central spread. When like this, however, there is usually a lack either of time or locality.

Very fine, distinctly outlined brows indicate an artistic nature. The thick brow is supposed to denote a gross personality. Usually a heavy lower face goes with it, and is a sign of material nature. If the thick brow is caused by the prominence of the eye, the business is merely an effort of the hairs to do protective duty, and then they show great powers of speech, for the gift of language has its seat behind the eyes.

Much elevated eyebrows show artistic perception of color and shape, good taste, organization and mathematical powers.

People with good spaces between eyes and eyebrows for size and weight can judge distances well and can estimate to a nicety the probable weight of given objects.

Sleazy eyebrows shows carelessness, vulgarity and want of personal dignity.

The Eden Musee of New York City is a favorite source of amusement and instruction to tourists and others. Last week a Guardian representative visited the Musee and found there many life-like, amusing and interesting figures. For instance Dr Crippen was there, so life-like that one would almost expect him to speak. On entering the vestibule is to be seen one of the most interesting features of city life, a German Band, and nearby a fine looking soldier is watching the ticket office whom residents readily recognize as Sergeant Kane, for many years stationed at Broadway and Twenty-third street. The entrance hall comes next and there groups may be seen of the Wright Bros., William J. Gaynor, Thos A. Edison, Count Zepelin, prominent people of the past and present. In the Central Hall brilliant and life-like groups of Royal personages are to be seen gorgeously arrayed besides many others of military distinction. ON COLLEGE HILL.

(By E. B. Eddy Bessey, Rothesay, '06, of New York City.)

D'you know, old pal, it seems some queer ... To keep a-go-in', year by year, Along this dangled pike of life, Cuttin' the rough spots like a knife; Learnin' what all of us must learn; Meetin' Miss Fortune, (heartless dame) An' sendin' her by the way she came—

An' yet, to have 'em linger still— Those good old days on College Hill.

It's a fact, old pal, that you can't deny, When you watch the glow in the evening sky; When you seem to hear the wild-birds' tune, An' smell the roses that breathe of June;

Those memories drift from far-away, An' break on the dew-kissed air like spray, An' the pulse gives a bound, an' it throbs with glee, They always give us a funny thrill— Those good old days on College Hill!

Look! Look! Old pal! Can't you see the rosy A-stretch' along to the "Saints" abode? The road, an' the bend, an' the sudden slope That leads to the school-boy's home of hope The old South House, an' the shaded green;

The class-rooms' walls, with their lofty mien; An' the Seniors' haunt, where the midnight oil Has never as yet been known to spoil? (Tho' the echo of "study" was never shrill In those good old days on College Hill!)

Remember, old pal, the college field, Where the real school heroes refused to yield? An' the autumn woods, an' the winter snow, An' the Sunday-night march to church You know!

An' the trips to 'Ren's.' and the Glee Club's songs? An' the "ghost" perambles that ended wrong? An' the magazine, an' the free debates? An' the string of victories won on skates?

An' say! One fellow you can't forget! That genial, jovial Joe Doucette! An' that "hay-foot, straw-foot" sort of drill Of those good old days on College Hill!

I tell you, old pal, the more we climb Up the rugged heights with gray-beard Time, The more we long for the scenes of yore. Long just to live them thro' once more. But each new year, as the June stars gleam, We can only think of the past, an' dream; Yet there's one thing' pal, that you must confess— The dreams are true to old R. C. S. So we drink a toast; come, the glass fill: "To those good old days on College Hill."
