At least a month ago a side of bacon found its way to Georgetown, for delivery to the Captain of a dredge which was at work dredging the Lower Montague docks of the Georgetown-Lower Montague Ferry. After repairs in local frigidaires, it was finally returned to whence it came. The reason—no dredge made an appearance and no dredge has as yet made an appearance in our harbour. This dock is in desperate need of dredging, as it is now only made a few trips a day due to the fact that at any time dock now our Ferry Boat is in Picton, on the slip, and now is the tide work should be done but the power that be is not seem to think so. No doubt, some time after our Ferry returns, the dredge will arrive and then work will again be prevented from crossing while the work of dredging is carried on.—Geo.
