Some Difficult Tables.

Some of the excavations at Nippur show that the Babylonians had multiplication tables five times as long as those commonly used in schools. Most little men and women, for instance, do not have to go further than twelve times twelve, but the little Babylonian children, says Dr. Herman V. Hilprecht, who superintended the late excavations, had to go as far as sixty times sixty.

Numbered fragments of tablets bearing these "multiplication tables" have been found, some few of which go as far as 1,300 times 1,300. But these were evidently only for astronomical purposes. Those old astronomers seem to have felt hard pressed for time, and when they were calculating the distances of the new stars they found, and their size, they did not want to take the time to multiply, and so just referred to these tables in stone.

The Judge Was Right.

Prosecuting Witness—Yes, sir.

Judge—Tell me the circumstances under which he struck you.

Prosecuting Witness—This man met me as I was coming along Calvert street whistling "Hiawatha," and—

Judge—That'll do. The prisoner is dismissed.—Baltimore American.

A Friendly Suggestion.

"What is your latest suggestion?" was the patient inquiry.

Gone.

Edyth—When I refused Charlie night before last he threatened to blow his brains out.

Can't Lose Her.

"The doctor," said Mr. Henpeck, "has ordered me away for a good, long rest."

"Good!" exclaimed Mrs. Henpeck. "I will go with you."

"In that case the doctor has ordered me to stay at home and save my money for the funeral."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Johnny's Knowledge.

Teacher—Why, Johnny, I thought you knew your alphabet?

Johnny—I don't know the names of the letters nor the way they come, but when I see the alphabet all together I know it fast enough.—Boston Transcript.

TO THE POLE IN A BALLOON.

English Aeronaut May Follow Dr. Fiala's Example.

The principal rival of M. Santos-Dumont in England is Mr. Percival Spencer, who belongs to a family of professional aeronauts, owning the principal balloon factory in England.

Months before the Brazilian had succeeded in flying any considerable distance or had escaped from the persistent ill-luck which attended his experiments, Mr. Spencer navigated his airship successfully right across London.

Mr. Spencer made his first balloon ascent with his father in 1872, when he was only eight years old. Since then he has navigated the upper air in all parts of the world, and has crossed the English Channel in a balloon four times.

Undaunted by the melancholy fate of Andre, Mr. Spencer seriously considers the possibility of reaching the North Pole by balloon. His idea is not the whole journey should be attempted by balloon, but that the latter should be attached to an expedition which would push on as fast toward the pole as possible, establish headquarters at the most northern point for the winter and then set off with the first wind blowing from the south in the following spring or summer.

Such a balloon, in Mr. Spencer's judgment, should be of sufficient size to carry the weight of a complete sledging expedition of two men, with the necessary sledges, ammunition, food and victuals.

With this load the balloon could set forth and the pole would be reached, according to Mr. Spencer, in about thirty-five hours. The aeronauts would then descend to the earth or ice and abandon their balloon, making the return journey on the sledges taken with them.
