

YOUR CHILDREN WILL EAT WITHOUT COOKING!

Aylmer Catsup

...makes foods tastier

A pure catsup, like Aylmer, is wholesome eating for the children, say nutritionists. For Aylmer makes it "home-style" from Canada's finest, red-ripe tomatoes. Children love its "true tomato flavor" and need Vitamin C.

bid view of marriage would be to bring her in contact with some happily married people. Certainly human happiness reaches its highest peak in the union of a man and woman who love each other truly and faithfully and unselfishly; who find their greatest pleasure in each other's companionship, and who have the never-ending interest and joy of seeing their children grow up about them.

There are plenty of such loving and contented husbands and wives, and for a woman to disbelieve this is as foolish as if she thought all apples rotten because she found a single decayed one in a barrel. Moreover, this girl should be brought to see that marriage, and even husbands, is pretty much what the wives make it, and because these people who tell her that a girl had better be dead than married have failed, simply shows that they have turned out a bad job. It is no sign that she would fail.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am short, only five feet tall, and it has given me a terrific inferiority complex. I have tried to reason with myself to convince myself that I am fortunate that I am healthy in body and mind when there are sick people and stupid people all about me. Then all I need is to go to a party where, as usual, I am the shrimp, and this awful sense of inferiority comes over me to spoil everything. Is there any way I can overcome this feeling of inferiority?

ANSWER: The only way is to fight it continually and thank God that you are short in inches instead of brains. Study hard and work hard and make yourself so important that people will only think of your mind instead of your body. Make them look up to your achievements instead of down on your stature. History has a lot of comfort for you. There are thousands of human shrimps, as you call them, who have made whales of success.

DOROTHY DIX cannot reply personally to readers, but will answer problems of general interest through her column.

mais, the line of blue caressing the tree-crowned hills, a glint of flame amidst the spruces by the mill or the wind of Autumn wandering along the pond-water.

Between two showers, "we walked a mile with pleasure" as far as the corner-store today, our excuse, ends of shopping, but in the main to have a spell in the open. It would be a matter of regret, to allow a last Summer day to slip away unmarked. Tawny shades are coming now to the broken along the roadside; the goldenrod is exchanging its bright glory for a hoary crown; home-steads are settling down-for Winter among meadows decked in a strange green, and fields drab now or red-brown with new furrows.

The folks at the corner-store continue their busy round, growing a bit older with each year's passing but keeping ever young at heart. Bearing kindly and as graciously as always their important role in the life of ours and more distant communities. Buttercup, for the time content to rest on the laurels gained as an idol of the footlights, has added many scars of battle to himself since the palmy days, but is still bland and handsome, and shows no signs of nursing any aching heart. — And Tabby, cat of our own? "Scat!" James says stamping a stockinged foot by stove-side, a sign in truth, of rest to come.

Until tomorrow — — — Diary — — — Good-night. — — —
