Loyalists Celebrate Arrival In 1783

(Canadian Press)

FREDERICTON, N. B., Oct. 11.—Near the old cemetery where United Empire Loyalist founders of New Brunswick's capital were interred after succumbing to hardship and sickness, a tablet was unveiled today commemorating their arrival here 150 years ago. It was the second major observation of this nature in New Brunswick within five months, Saint John having celebrated on May 18, the sesqui-centennial anniversary of the Loyalists' arrival there.

Today's ceremonies began with a religious service in Christchurch Cathedral, the congregation including military and official representatives who marched from the Cathedral to the intersection of Alexandra Street and Waterloo Row, where the unveiling ceremony was held near the spot first touched by the Loyalists.

The proceedings included an address by Major W. G. Clark; unveiling of the monument by His Honor H. H. McLean, Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick; reading of the tablet inscription; invocation by Rev. Dr. F. A. Wightman; placement of a bouquet; an address by Premier L. P. D. Tilley; feu-de-jolie and artillery salute; "God Save the King," and a parade of military units.

Brought from a hill above the site of the old Loyalist encampment and cemetery, a monumental boulder of native sandstone bore the commemorative tablet containing this inscription: "That Ye May Tell it to the Generations Following."

"To commemorate the loyalty, faith, courage, sacrifices and achievements of early settlers, who established this City of Fredericton, a grateful posterity has erected this monument.

"It was unveiled on October 8, 1933, the One Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary of the arrival in this community of a company of United Empire Loyalists, some of whom are buried in the nearby cemetery, having died from the effects of the cold and privation suffered during their first winter here."

Representing the United Empire Loyalists' Association of Canada were the Countess of Ashburnham, one of the honorary vice-presidents, and Mrs. W. Osborne, representative for New Brunswick in the Dominion association. Mrs. Ida White, of Vancouver, represented the Vancouver Loyalists' Association.

The feu-de-jolie (salute of joy) was fired by a detachment from the York Regiment, a direct lineal successor of the 1st Battalion York County Militia, established in 1787 by the members of the disbanded Loyal Provincial Corps. A detachment from the 90th Field Battery (howitzer) gave the artillery salute. Other military units represented included the New Brunswick Dragoons, University of New Brunswick Contingent Canadian Officers' Training Corps, and 7th Canadian Machine Gun Battalion. Brigadier J. L. R. Parsons, Officer Commanding Military District No. 7, was present with members of his staff.

Although October 8, 1783, is observed as the date of the Loyalists' arrival at Fredericton, then known as St. Anne's Point, some were here before that time and the great influx came in 1784. Within two years after the first arrival a town-planning survey was undertaken and Governor Thomas Carleton selected the community as the capital of the newly established Province of New Brunswick, supplanting Parrtown (later Saint John, which was deemed too exposed to attack from the sea.

Circumstances of the Loyalists' landing on October 8 and the hardships they suffered are recalled through two accounts, each based on the recollections of a woman and each compiled from memory of verbal statements made by the original Loyalists. One account is "The Grandmother's Story," written from personal recollections of Mrs. Lodewick Fisher, whose son, Peter Fisher, was New Brunswick's first historian. The other is the less widely known narrative of Hannah Ingram (or Ingraham).

The group of Loyalists arriving here October 8 largely comprised soldiers from the battalion of the New Jersey Volunteers, commanded by Colonel Van Buskirk, with their families. This unit had experienced nearly seven years of hard service. A few members of the King's American Regiment, including Sergeant Benjamin Ingram, father of Hannah Ingram, were with this party. Lodewick Fisher was one of the New Jersey Volunteers.

Loyalists had been straggling up the St. John river during the spring, summer and autumn of 1783. One large party comprised soldiers of the King's American Dragoons who in August were forced to leave the crops they were raising in the present Lancaster district of Saint John and to proceed to lands allotted them at what is now Prince William, York County. This group passed the following winter without loss of life, evidently having prepared for the rigors, but the party arriving here October 8 proved the most unfortunate of any.

Its members failed to provide shelter in time for winter, and protection for the majority was confined to tents and any added shelter afforded by trees and the banks of creeks. Many persons died from exposure that winter. Graves chopped in frozen ground near the tents were the beginning of the "Loyal Provincials' burying ground," which continued in use for some years. This ancient cemetery exists today on the property known as "Elmcroft," near the newly-unveiled monument. The site is a narrow ridge between a creek and the St. John river.

One gravestone, better preserved than others, bears the date 1785, with other indecipherable markings. Some of the dead interred there had such names as Van Horne, Vanderbeck, Ackermann, Burkstaff, Ridner, Handorf, Van Norden, and Ryerson, indicating the Dutch ancestry in New York and New Jersey, and, to a lesser degree, the German blood of Pennsylvania.

The successful man was exhorting his boy to follow his example. "When I was a boy," he said, "I went out to America. I started work in a store at two dollars a week. In four years time I owned the store." "Ah," replied the boy, "you couldn't do that now. They have cash registers."

Lee Tracy At The Capitol

Lee Tracy in the finest role of his spectacular career—that of "Private Jones," opened to a packed house at the Capitol Theatre last night. This brilliant young actor, who heretofore has been in metropolitan roles, dons the olive drab of an American doughboy and plays an entirely new type of war drama, making "Bill Jones," the rebellious soldier, live as no screen soldier has ever lived before in motion pictures.

The plot is new and well woven. The characters are human, and the acting is superb, probably because the cast is of the first order. Tracy with his dynamic personality and ready flow of crackling dialogue deserves first mention. It is easily his best yet, and that is saying something when you scan this young man's amazing screen record. Gloria Stuart, as the heroine, performs in a winning manner, and Donald Cook is perfectly cast in the sympathetic role of the young Lieutenant who tries to make something of his recalcitrant trooper. Berton Churchill, Walter Catlett, Frank McHugh, Emma Dunn, Shirley Grey, Wilhelm von Brincken and Ferdinand Schumann-Nietzsch are likewise excellently cast. The photography, and general pace of the drama, are in line with the high type of characterizations. Russell Mack, who recently gave us "The All American" and "Once in a Lifetime," is at his best in "Private Jones."

It is grand entertainment from start to finish, and it will satisfy those who cry for artistic direction and dramatic as well. Notably is it distinctive in that "Private Jones" shows us one doughboy's attitude toward the war, which doesn't follow the orthodox storybook one. "Private Jones" will entertain you and it will touch you—just as it did us! Don't miss it!

Dissatisfied With Appointment

HALIFAX, Oct. 11.—(C.P.)—Dissatisfaction with the appointment of Dr. J. E. Shields of Ottawa as Reviewing Officer under the Pensions Act was expressed tonight by Major John S. Roper, Dominion President of the Canadian Legion.

"By the appointment of this Reviewing Officer," Major Roper declared, "the Dominion Government has but completed its dereliction of the ex-service men of Canada into the bondage of the old Pensions Board."

"It is a grave responsibility," the Legion executive added.

LITTLE CHANGE IN RAILWAY SITUATION

Running Trades And Railroad Heads Fail to Reach Agreement.

MONTREAL, Oct. 11.—(C.P.)—The interest of both sides could best be served if the negotiations continued in camera and if no attempt was made by the press to gauge the tenor of the meetings, it was stated at the conclusion of today's negotiations between the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways and the Railroad Running Trades.

HOLD TO OPINIONS

As far as could be learned the position is stationary, both the men and their employers persisting in their respective opinions. The men claim an additional 10 per cent wage cut is unjustified; the companies that it is made necessary by adverse economic conditions affecting the roads.

While these negotiations were proceeding, the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks made their submission to a Board of Conciliation in rebuttal to the case submitted some time ago by the Canadian Pacific Railway.

"A new business cycle has begun, and we know by bitter experience that the return of prosperity to the railroads does not at all mean that the employees will be allowed to share in the improved situation of their employers," Frank H. Hall, John, and R. J. R. Nelson, Halifax. Credentials Committee: W. E. Payne, Vancouver, (chairman); E. A. Saunders, Halifax, and G. F. Nicholson, St. Stephen, N. B.

Vice President of the Brotherhood, told the Conciliation Board. "The past has taught us that though prices rise, though living standards of all workers rise and though railway traffic and revenues increase rapidly, the employees must wait, must struggle through long periods of negotiation and finally must expect strenuous opposition to the acceptance of any decision from any Board of Conciliation if that decision favors the employees."

Pimples Disfigured Face for Over Two Years. Cuticura Healed.

"My skin became very rough and pimples began to appear on my face. They were very large, hard and red, and were in blotches. The pimples itched and by scratching them I caused sore eruptions. They disfigured my face, and through scratching the pimples spread to my chest. The trouble lasted over two years, and I lost sleep on account of them. A friend told me about Cuticura Soap and Ointment so I purchased some and I was completely healed, after using five cakes of the Soap and three boxes of the Ointment." GARDENING

FALL PLANTING

Late fall is just as important a season for planting a good many things as the spring. Roses, shrubbery, climbers, ornamental and fruit trees as well as many of the perennials may be set out at this time. In some districts fall planting is to be favored over the other because then there is plenty of moisture in the ground and the plant gets established before the drying winds of late spring and the heat of summer come along. In this and all planting, of course, it is essential to spread out roots, cover with fine soil firmly and water well. With trees of any size it will be necessary to provide some support in the form of a stout wooden or iron stake. Newly set out plants should receive special winter protection in the form of a light mulch of leaves or straw. It is well to extend this protection to established perennials also. If the tops are not diseased they should be left to collect snow, which is nature's own winter blanket.

OCTOBER WEDDING—An interesting and happy function took place in St. Joseph's Church, Kelly's Cross, on Wednesday morning, Oct. 4th, 1933, when Mr. John T. Molyneux, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Molyneux, Inkerman, led to the nuptial altar, Miss Mary Margaret (Marita) Malone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Malone, Maplewood. The nuptial mass was celebrated by the pastor, Rev. J. C. Pire, who also performed the marriage ceremony, assisted by Rev. M. J. Smith, Kinkora, uncle of the bride. The groomsmen were Mr. Thomas McAvinn, teacher, while the bride was attended by her sister, Miss Kathleen Malone. The happy couple are both well known and popular even outside the limits of St. Joseph's parish, the bride having been one of the most successful teachers in this Province, having performed excellent service in Springfield, South Melville, Lady Fane, Montague, Hope River and in Inkerman, her future home, she made hosts of friends during three years' service in the school. The Guardian joins with Mr. and Mrs. Molyneux's hosts of friends in wishing them many years of wedded bliss.
