NARROW ESCAPE - A car

accident which might easily have ended in a tragedy happened between nine and ten o'clock Saturday morning when a Nash sedan car with two gentlemen as occupants, skidded down the hill at the approach to Midland Bridge, broke through the railing and toppled partly over, the car hanging nearly perpendicular with just the hind wheels and axle holding it on the bridge. The passengers scrambled out with no injury but a bad scare to tell them they were in an accident. The car was immediately pulled back on the bridge with little damage to either.

BAD FIRE SATURDAY - A bad

fire occurred Saturday morning at Vernon, when two barns owned by Mr. Joseph Sullivan were totally destroyed, together with almost all their contents, including a large quantity of hay and grain, and some farming implements, also a litter of ten pigs. Fortunately the horses and cattle were taken out of the burning building in time. The fire was first discovered at half past six and although the neighbors hastily rushed to the scene and rendered every assistance possible, the fire had made such headway that the buildings could not be saved. One of the barns was a large new structure about fifty feet long, and the other about thirty feet long. They were about thirty feet apart and about one hundred feet from the dwelling. As the wind was blowing in the opposite direction the latter did not catch fire. The fire's origin is unknown, evidently started in the hay loft, and the flames were bursting from the roof when it was discovered. The loss will be between three and four thousand dollars, and is partly covered with insurance. The fire occurred only three miles from the other fire at Vernon, River on Tuesday last when Mr. James Fraught also lost a barn and stable.

Card Of Thanks

The Superintendent of the Experimental Station on behalf of the Federal Department of Agriculture, wishes to thank the Charlottetown Fire Brigade, the neighbors and all others who worked so strenuously to save the other buildings when the dairy barn was burned last night. We cannot express in words our deep appreciation. (Sgd.) J. A. CLARK.

Church Services

ZION CHURCH SERVICES Yesterday morning the Minister, Rev. M. Scott, Fulton, spoke on "Rom. 12:1. All things work together for good to them that love God."

The subject naturally resolves itself into the triple division: (a) All things work; (b) All things work together; (c) All things are working toward a definite purpose. At this service the choir rendered before the King, by Nevin. Miss Gladys Farquharson took the soprano solos.

There was a fine congregation in the evening. Mr. Fulton retold the story of Joseph's Brethren visiting him in Egypt. All things are working toward a definite purpose. At this service the choir rendered before the King, by Nevin. Miss Gladys Farquharson took the soprano solos.

The Baptismal Font, presented to the Church by Mr. James Brody to the memory of his wife, will be dedicated next Sabbath morning, after which the Sacraments of Baptism and the Lord's Supper will be dispensed.

Preparatory service will be held on Friday evening at 8 o'clock when it is expected Rev. Thomas A. Rodgers, Belfast, will preach.

We regret the absence of Miss

Flo Campbell from our Choir, through the continued illness of her father.

Waste Fish

as Fertiliser PORTLAND, Me., Oct. 13.-Maine fishermen, aroused by what they see as a menace to the supply of valuable food fish as represented by the large number of skates, dogfish and other destructive varieties are urging that steps be taken to conserve the fishery. Some have suggested that if these "Waste" fish were utilized as in Nova Scotia for fertilizer and other purposes that fishermen would have an incentive to bring them ashore, instead of casting them adrift to resurface their destructiveness.

One fisherman, Captain Jim

Levit, has this to say: "It was in Nova Scotia that they first discovered what an enemy the skate is to the lobster. As a result a warning was issued to fishermen that the skate ate hundreds of young lobsters. The fishermen thereupon decided to cut them adrift, but brought them in to a fertilizer plant where they are dried in the wind and sun and ground up for fertilizer.

"If we want to save our lobster and food fish industry from their natural enemies we must soon do something. Fish fertilizer factories at frequent intervals all along the coast, leaving the fishermen free for bringing in such destroyers as dogfish and skates, would solve the problem. It seems to me the government could well afford to help out private capital in subsidizing such fertilizer plants and the demand for fish meal and live stock and fish fertilizer could be made equal to any supply."

IS WORLD'S

Wilson, University of Virginia.

Prof. Guillermo Rivera of Harvard University and Prof. Louis Mercier, also of Harvard.

Last year the Mexican candidate came first, the French second and the Canadian who was Frederick Hotson of Tavistock, Ontario, third. Fox gave a fine speech on Saturday night delivered with more fire and vigor than he showed either in the Ontario or Canadian finals. His subject was the same, "Canada's Future" and it was good propaganda for his country. He received a splendid reception from his audience and the fact that he defeated the American champion chosen from hundreds of thousands of competitors, as well as the champions of four other countries shows how good he was. His father and mother from London were here for the contest, also his teacher Brother Francis of De La Salle School, London, as well as other relatives from London and New York.

They all received sincere congratulations on Bill's achievement. Dr. James L. Hughes of Toronto was also here.

The only substantial change in the text of Fox's speech compared with its original form was the deletion of the long quotation from Sir Wilfrid Laurier at the end and the substitution of a shorter more general one by bringing in the speaker more comfortably within the time limit of ten minutes.

René Ponthieu of France,

the new world's champion, is a magnificent orator. The matter in his speech on "French Thought" and the idea of liberty was both intellectual and passionate and his presentation of it revealed a personality of all-embracing imagination and force, an unusual combination.

When he was announced as the winner, a great cry of hissing began. The Latin competitors rushed up to him and gave him on both cheeks. These Rens had been on his own account and gave the French salute to the Canadian National Chairman and to Randolph Leigh, international director of the contest.

The Argentine, who was ranked second, was of slight build and at first seemed to have a small, rather weak voice. As he went on however, it was apparent that Fox had deliberately started on a quiet key and was gradually increasing in strength and animation, a better method than that of some of the competitors who used so much energy in the beginning that they had to reserve for crescendos. Tomaso's subject was "The Confederation of the Americas."

The American champion who was ranked fourth on Saturday night gave an historical review of the development of the American constitution. He had a pleasing personality, youthful and likable but he spoke rather too fast and did not seem quite to have the power of convincing that Fox had.

The Washington auditorium where the event was held was crowded to the doors. The Mexican Ambassador to the United States gave the preliminary address. Each contestant was introduced by the displaying of his national flag and the singing of his national anthem.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE RESULTS

was made by Dr. Alejandro Herosa, Professor of Economics in a Buenos Aires University. The arrangements under Randolph Leigh's direction were admirable.

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 13.-Yesterday Fox and other competitors were received by President Coolidge at the White House, at noon, accompanied by the Hon. Charles Fox, Washington, international director of the contests and Main Johnson of the Toronto Star, national chairman for Canada. Coolidge chatted briefly with the contestants in his reception room and then went out into the garden where he was photographed with them. He was wearing a navy blue sack suit. His hair is still sandy with no hint of grayness. At luncheon yesterday Young Fox, with Mr. and Mrs. Main Johnson were entertained at luncheon in the Canadian legation by Hon. Vincent Massey and Mrs. Massey.

Many other entertainments for the contestants have been given during the week including a luncheon on Thursday by the Canadian Society and a dinner last night by the American Association of Teachers of Spanish, The French Society, the de France" has also entertained for them.
