MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES DIPHTHERIA

Mr. King says the West is becoming greatly interested in the Eastern Provinces and the remarkable development of the fox industry in Prince Edward Island formed the theme of conversation in every club he had visited from the Pacific to the Atlantic. He hoped to add to his collection of views, some of Prince Edward Island, including scenes taken coming over in the steamer, and a number of photographs of fox ranches.

Predicted By Mr. King of the Canadian Home Investment Co.

Big, bright, breezy, buoyant and bustling with business, W. J. King of Vancouver, First Vice-President and General Manager of the Canadian Home and Investment Company, has made his genial presence felt for a short time in Charlottetown. Although he did not use an aeroplane, for the aerial service is not yet in operation, between the Cities, he made but a flying visit, arriving on Saturday, and leaving on Sunday night for Georgetown, by a specially hired special train, accompanied by T. Bradley Taylor of St. John, District Manager for the Maritime Provinces.

It is to be regretted that Mr. King was obliged to contribute to the extra expense of securing such a train. It should have been run in the usual way by the Railway Department, whose duty it is to provide all reasonable, possible travelling facilities. In winter there are delays caused by nature, which man cannot overcome, but there is no excuse for making a few men "delve down deep for the dough" to engage a special train.

The Guardian reporter had an interview with Mr. King shortly after his arrival in Charlottetown. He had crossed by the Minto and come to the city by the ordinary special train, not specially hired. Mr. King is certainly broad in views as he is broad in body. He has all the optimism of the westerner. He did not signalize his arrival here with a fusillade of complaints and a volley of denunciations concerning our "disabilities." On the contrary, he found the trip enjoyable, scenic and otherwise. He experienced none of the "privations," he had been told about on the mainland, and regretted that he had been influenced by pre-conceived ideas formed by unfavorable reports, to leave his wife on the other side.

"We are coming here again, however, next summer," he said, "to spend a month or two in your beautiful Province." Mr. King was reared on a farm and saw many a farm on his way from Vancouver to Prince Edward Island and claims he knows a good farm when he sees one. It was therefore very pleasing to hear him say that he never saw farms that were better kept than those on Prince Edward Island, judging from the neatness of the buildings, the character of the fences and from the fact that he saw no agricultural implements lying out in the fields for the winter, exposed to the deteriorating influences of all kinds of weather. The ranchers of the West, who were very careless about their machinery could well take a lesson in this matter from the farmers of the Island.

He was not only struck also with the evidences of comfort and prosperity that met his eye along the railway track, but he appreciated also the hospitality and cordial treatment of the people. On board the winter boats, he received every courtesy and comfort and failed to see where the stories of privation in connection with winter crossing are to be founded on fact. He had also a good word to say concerning the efficient manner in which the mail service is conducted.

Mr. King says that the business carried on by his company on the Island has been very satisfactory up to the present. Good results are being achieved from the efforts put forth and the Island people are responding equally well per capita as those in other parts of Canada.
