8th Army Makes the rear as prisoners.

The ground was strewn with the wreckage of tanks blown up by the retreating enemy and a barrage as heavy as that which opened the offensive just over a week ago.

The great mobile tank battles which have characterized desert campaigns in this war were still absent, but the Germans had sent in some armored forces in exploratory fashion.

A battle between one such unit of 50 tanks and a rifle company which was using light British six-pounder artillery was described in front-line dispatches.

Thirty-eight tanks, including some of the Germans' best Mark IV's, were knocked out in the 36-hour battle, and "the night was burnished with burning tanks," the British commander in the action reported.

(Although the British communique told of no offensive action later than Friday night, Axis war bulletins indicated the attack was continuing Saturday. Rome said violent fighting took place in the northern sector.

(A BBC correspondent at the front broadcast, "we have at least doubled our bag of Axis prisoners," as a result of the latest advance.)

Enemy Loses

was viewed by Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt only the day before.

The Dean of Canterbury, Dr. Hewlett Johnson, described the attack as being "very lively," and expressed the opinion the Cathedral City was hit because it figured in the news as one of the places visited by Mrs. Roosevelt.

"I am quite sure the German bombers had taken notice of the places Mrs. Roosevelt had visited, and that they thought if she can call on Canterbury it had better have another dose," he said.

Rescue squads rushed from the surrounding area to help Canterbury. They worked through the night.

Six persons were killed in one street in which nearly every house was wrecked. A direct hit trapped four persons in a garage.

One witness said a formation of three raiders flew down the main street at roof-top-height, machine-gunning the Saturday crowds.

The London warning was the second heard by Mrs. Roosevelt on her visit to England. The first shriek of the sirens left her unperturbed, and she went right on with an informal speech she was making.

Saturday night's London alert was of short duration, and no enemy activity was reported in the immediate vicinity.

Hit Before

Canterbury had been hit several times before, most recently in June when the Nazis declared their attack was made in reprisal for the crushing R.A.F. raid on Cologne in which the R.A.F. used well over 1,000 planes.

The nine Nazi planes shot down comprised the biggest daylight toll taken over England since May 8, 1941 when 12 were downed in the same area.

One of the Germans was intercepted by a fighter squadron headed by a fighting French officer. The Frenchman went up and destroyed one Focke-Wulf, landed, refueled and went up a second time and was back in 15 minutes after destroying another one.

A South African pilot also destroyed two.

"Some of the 190s went down in flames," he said, "and others went straight into the sea. One of our chaps who was last seen fighting eight Huns."

French Women Oppose Germans

BERNE, Nov. 1—(AP)— French women, barricading tiny town halls against German doctors sent to examine their men for the Hitler labor draft, have won one of the first victories in the campaign in the unoccupied zone against forced work in the Reich.

A new series of strikes was reported to have broken out, especially in the Haute-Savoie Province adjoining the Swiss border, and every neutral dispatch describing the incidents said high feeling and discontent were clearly apparent.

The strikes in every case followed orders to factory owners designating the number of workers they were expected to furnish in the deal by Pierre Laval for exchange of workers for war prisoners.

New trouble, was brewing for the Nazis in Norway, too.

Death, solitary confinement and hard labor are punishments to be imposed in Norway for a great variety of acts of sabotage against the Nazi administration of the country, it was stated by a Swiss telegraphic agency dispatch from Stockholm.

New decrees which became effective Friday make the government of Norway comparable to a state of siege. Even trivial acts, such as failing to surrender propaganda material to authorities, may under some circumstances be punished by death.

A dispatch from Stockholm to the National Zeitung of Basel said the Germans are becoming increasingly impatient with Vidkun Quisling's inability to win whole-hearted co-operation of Norwegians.

Appeals To Island Farmers To Make Loan A Success

try now is a dollar in action with our men overseas to beat Hitler.

Not one citizen of this country will neglect his or her responsibility in this call, if it is realized that not only our safety, but the lives of many of these gallant young men may be guaranteed by our contribution to this Third Victory Loan. It is not a time to say, "we cannot respond to this call, we have not the money, and, in any event if we could arrange for it, it would be very small." A multitude of small contributions totals into an enormous value and power.

The Only Alternative

No person realizes more than I do the difficult period through which our farmers have passed. But financial conditions have improved, and in any event, even if hardship is experienced in arranging for a contribution, these difficulties fade into insignificance in comparison with the great need, and the really serious situation with which we are faced. It is far better to sacrifice if need be all our worldly possessions and retain our freedom, our homes, our opportunities and our faith, than to retain these possessions and then sacrifice everything under the hated oppression of a ruthless victor, as has been the experience of those unfortunate people in the conquered countries.

This truly is a time of Bonds or Bondage. But, this is not a gift, it is a loan at a good rate of interest, backed by this great country of Canada. It is a loan, a savings that you may need in the post war years far greater than you need it now. When the men come home, and the post war reconstruction is under way, the money you are able to save now to arrange for now and place in the purchase of Victory Bonds now will be available with interest to take care of your requirements then. This investment will provide the protection your country needs now, and your protection after the war is over.

I have every confidence that the full peril that faces our country will be fully appreciated and that every home in this province will be represented in this loan to carry on the desperate struggle in which we are engaged. Pray God it may not be said that we failed in this time of grave responsibility, but rather may every home in this province as far as this need is concerned have its name inscribed on the Roll of Honour by joining hands with those in the front line who are risking their all in the defeat of our common enemy.

Far-Reaching Orders Become Effective Today

OTTAWA, Nov. 1 —(CP)—Many phases of business and everyday life in Canada are affected by a series of far-reaching orders and changes, most of them concerning the Dominion's war economy, which come into effect this week.

Most of these changes were dated to go into operation today but generally speaking they will not become effective until tomorrow, the first business day of the week.

Here are the major orders and changes:

1. Canadian distilleries cease making potable spirits and concentrate on alcohol production for war purposes, from today.

2. Canadian breweries, on and after today, may not use more malt for producing beer in any quarter than the amount used in the corresponding quarter of the preceding year.

3. Business of manufacturers, wholesalers, retailers and 10 types of services is frozen to present status, preventing extension into other lines, effective tomorrow.

4. Period of the 1941-42 bacon agreement with the United Kingdom Food Ministry elapsed this weekend with Canada requiring more time to fill the 600,000,000-pound undertaking.

5. Newsprint quotas restricting production go into effect starting with November output.

6. Butter prices advance three-quarters of a cent, starting tomorrow.

7. Third and final week of Third Victory Loan campaign gets under way.

8. Dr. J.S. Thomson becomes general manager of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, Dr. Augustin Frigon remains assistant general manager, and Gladstone Murray assumes new post of director-general of broadcasting from tomorrow.

9. Salvage campaign starts this week in 40 southern Ontario rural areas.

10. Establishment of maximum wholesale and retail prices for carcasses, sides and cuts of lamb and for all classes and grades of dressed poultry throughout Canada announced by Prices Board.

The month opens with further restrictions forecast in the use of alcoholic beverages.

Boys Attend Conference At Summerside

More than sixty boys attended the older boys conference held in Summerside during the week-end. It was under the auspices of the Maritime Religious Education Council and was one of the most successful. It was directed by Rev. Allan Gibson of Saint John, Boys Work Secretary of the M.R.E.C.

On Friday evening the boys held a sing song and get acquainted games.

Officers were elected by the boys as follows: Pretor president, David Boswell, Victoria; Deputy Pretor vice president, Darrel Lidstone, Summerside; Scriptor Secretary, Donald Buntain, New London; Comptor Treasurer, Bentley MacLeod, O'Leary.

On Saturday the boys broke up into discussion groups discussing the attitude of boys to the pertinent questions of today. Group leaders were: Rev. George Tilley, Cavendish; Rev. John Jarvie, Summerside; Rev. Robert E. Shaw, New Glasgow; Rev. Ward MacLean, Tryon.

On Saturday evening a delicious banquet was held in Epworth Hall. Each group presented its yell motto and stunt. The Pretor David Boswell acted as toastmaster. A toast to the Church was proposed by Bentley MacLeod and after singing of the Church's One Foundation was responded to by Rev. Mr. Jeffreys of Summerside Christian Church. A toast to Canada proposed by Howard MacFarlane responded to by Rev. C.W. Cook. A toast to the school proposed by Eric MacPhail with the singing of School Days. It was responded to by Heath N. MacQuarrie. A toast to the ladies proposed by James MacEachern responded to by Mrs. C.W. Cook.

On Sunday the boys worshipped with their hosts and hostesses. On Sunday afternoon a service was held in the Baptist Church. In the evening after the regular church services the closing service was held in Trinity United Church, Rev. Mr. Gibson brought the message; the meeting closed with the fellowship circle. —S.

Miners Told Britain Faces Coal Shortage

By E. C. DANIEL
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Nov. 1—(CP)—Pit-toughened miners met with Britain's mine owners Saturday to hear from Prime Minister Winston Churchill "hard talk" on the job they must do if a coal shortage is not to slow war work and chill Britain's people this winter.

Faced with an 11,000,000-ton shortage, the Prime Minister called 2,500 men representing all of Britain's 1,300 mines to this unusual meeting of Production and Government.

Exactly what he told his audience in a London hall was a war secret but after it was over Will Lawther, President of the Mineworkers' Federation, declared "I've never seen our fellows so affected. That is all we wanted—to be told the hard truth."

"I'm sure our men will tell their mates they must exert every effort to give the country the coal it needs," another miner leader said.

This dramatic summoning to the capital of the men who bring the coal from the earth was a second front in the battle of fuel which thus far has gone so poorly that coal-rich Britain has been brought to the verge of fuel rationing.

The first offensive launched some time ago and still under way is on the consumption front where newspapers, billboards and radio are urging the people to fuel economy.

New machinery and methods have been introduced in some mines to boost production but manpower remains the vital need and the government has declined to release more miners from the armed forces because of the need for soldiers in the coming offensives.

Bennett Takes

not be amended at Ottawa. Provincial powers could be taken away only at Westminster. The test of the propriety of intruding on provincial power was at what point this became necessary in order to maintain and further the war effort. The right of judicial review should be in the minds of the people constantly.

Viscount Bennett said "people are asking questions as to why the Canadian army is idle."

"I can't answer. I don't know why some Canadians will have to spend their fourth Christmas in England without firing a shot. They say that's not what they came for. Nor can I say why a second corps was formed on the basis of a single division."

The speaker said he had found among Canadians "a deep-rooted resentment against a recent speech by Wendell Willkie, because he proposed to sabotage the British Empire."

"A Great Mistake"

He continued: "I think it is a great mistake for any man to say he proposes to destroy the British Empire. The greatest tribute to British greatness is the government of India. The aim and object of the Pax Britannica has always been self-government. India had been told she must make her own constitution, as Canada, Australia, South Africa and New Zealand made theirs. Britain is still waiting for India to make her constitution. Does the voice of a dozen people represent 400,000,000?"

(In his address last Monday night Willkie referred to the Indian problem and said "people of the east who would like to count on us (the United States) are doubtful. They cannot understand from our government's wishy-washy attitude toward the problem of India what we are likely to feel at the end of the war about all the other hundreds of millions of eastern peoples." He said also that "in Africa, in the Middle East throughout the Arab world, as well as in China and the whole far east, freedom means the orderly but scheduled abolition of the colonial system.")

At the outset Lord Bennett remarked that many completely misunderstood the whole fabric of Empire. "Some have even said they would not have us as companions if we are fighting to maintain the integrity of this Empire. Well, we are. And please God we will win."

Viscount Bennett said the spirit of the British people assures that "the day of victory is not far off." It was absolutely assured if the people of the Anglo-Saxon world and their Allies fight with all their might. "The price is effort, continuous effort. And after all, it is the fate of christian civilization that is at stake."

Burial Of Island Soldier Lost In Caribou Disaster

The following touching letter has been received by Mrs. May Francis, informing her of the burial of her son, Corp. Everett S. Francis, who was lost in the S.S. Caribou disaster.

The Manse Grand Falls, Nfld.
October 20th, 1942.

Mrs. Francis
Albany, P.E.I.

Dear Mrs. Francis:-

It is with deepest sympathy in your tragic bereavement I write you, and pray the God of all compassion to comfort your hearts as you sit in your sorrow. During the short time your boy had been in this country, he had greatly endeared himself to all that knew him, and his loss is keenly felt here. As a Soldier his fidelity to duty, and earnest desire to rise in the ranks enlisted the commendation of his officers, Col. Thompson, O.C. of his regiment thought much of him and said, if Everett had been spared he might have gone far in the ranks, and while your boy was not permitted to strike a blow in self-defence against his treacherous enemy, yet he gave his all for King and Empire, and the security and peace of freedom loving people everywhere, and having joined the ranks of the Immortals, his name liveth forever.

My acquaintance with Everett began when I united him in Holy Matrimony with Janie Mercer, who is a lovely girl, of whom you can be proud to call daughter. Their marriage though short, and amidst the trials of war-time conditions was a happy one, and was crowned with the advent of a baby daughter, a beautiful healthy child. We had made arrangements to christen your granddaughter last Sunday morning in the little Church where your dear boy and his bride had plighted their troth. Everett was on his way to see his child, and looked forward to dedicating the child of his union to the Lord who gave it in the Sacrament of Baptism, but while man proposes, the Eternal God disposes. Instead of this joyous event taking place at the time appointed, I conducted a memorial service for your son. In the evening our service took the form of a Memorial Service for all who had perished in the S.S. Caribou disaster.

Yesterday afternoon we tenderly took the mortal remains of your boy into the church where I conducted his funeral Service. The coffin rested in the same place he had stood when I united him in Matrimony.

He was buried with full Military Honors, Col. Thompson was attended by his Officers, and the Chaplains from the Military Post. A Pipe Band and also a Brass Band played the Lament and Funeral March, and the flag-covered coffin was borne from the Church to the Cemetery.

The Senior Chaplain of the forces in Newfoundland, Major Parker assisted with the service in the Church and at the grave and the last Post was sounded.

Your boy rests in St. Matthews Presbyterian Cemetery, Grand Falls, in a peaceful wooded section, and all that loving hands could do has been done to lay the Mortal remains reverently away, until the dawning of that Glorious Ressurection Day, when all who are in their graves shall come forth into newness of Ressurection life, and we shall again be united with our loved ones at the feet of Him who loved us and gave His life a ranson that we might inherit Eternal Life, and it is to that same God, Father, Son and Holy Spirit, we commend you and all that mourn, that you may find in Him, a refuge and strength, and very present help in your time of need.

Anything further I can do to help relieve your burden, I shall only be too pleased, and may the God of all Grace, bless, comfort, and keep you is the sincere prayer of,

Your Servant in Christ,
Herbert J. Scott.
