Association called to meet here next Monday. The Association is expected to enter a protest against a movement to increase the newspaper price at Canadian Mills, which in keeping with the manufacturers policy of "one price to all" the publishers pointed out would force American paper producers to follow suit. The Canadian increase is backed by the provincial governments of Ontario and Quebec. Newsprint production for the first 10 months of 1929 totalled 3,594,394 tons, according to figures at the A. N. P. A. headquarters here of which 3,137,324 tons were consumed by United States publishers. Canadian mills produced 2,245,795 tons of the first 10 months production. United States, 1,160,757 tons, Newfoundland 107,678 tons, and 80,164 tons were imported from overseas. Norway, Sweden, Finland and Germany supply most of the newsprint brought in from countries other than Canada. American publishers in 1928 used 3,592,329 tons of newsprint, and Canadian publishers used 169,032 tons. There are nearly 450 daily papers members on the A. N. P. A. The publishers said a 5 per cent increase in newsprint prices as advocated would mean an added expenditure of $20,000,000 for United States publishers next year based upon an increased usage of paper. The present price is 55¢ a ton. Such an increase officials of the A. N. P. A. have pointed out would have to be met by the publishers, as no advance in advertising rates can be made at this time. F. I. Ker announced last night that Premier Taschereau will hear protest of Canadian Daily Newspaper Association on Wednesday.

Imperial Unity IS CONSERVATIVE POLICY
 IN GREAT BRITAIN

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The Conservative party has launched out on a bold policy of imperial co-operation and empire unity. A resolution upholding the imperial preference system after being passed unanimously by the Conservative party's annual conference was normally accepted by Right Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Conservative leader, at a mass meeting in Albert Hall.

The resolution called for establishment of the empire economic affairs on the basis of imperial preference, as soon as the party returns to power in consultation with the governments of the dominions.

Colonies are Markets

Declaring that Great Britain must look to the empire for expanding markets, the former prime minister declared progress depended on Britain's capacity to envisage the empire as one eternal and indivisible unity.

Mr. Baldwin thought Lord Beaverbrook was entitled to gratitude for bringing before the country the idea of a united empire. "There," continued Mr. Baldwin, "lies our problem. It is the task of the generation to solve. It rests the question of employment of our people and continuance of the beneficent existence of our empire itself. To that task we must lay our hands and to that task must our policy be framed."

"We cannot dictate a policy to the empire," the Conservative leader declared. Much consultation will be necessary to help the improvement of our people; to rationalize not only our own but imperial industry. Framing of such a policy as will effect these ends is the task of your leaders, to which they will forthwith devote themselves.

"I believe that close co-operation throughout our empire is possible and that such co-operation will be of great benefit to all parts of the empire. I believe that as we slowly recover from the exhaustion of war the old spirit of adventure and sturdy reliance will again animate our people and I believe the growth and well being of our race is and will be the greatest influence making for peace and progress in this world."

"Does Not Aid Cause of Peace"

This led to disarmament on which Mr. Baldwin said, "We are all in favor of disarmament, but disarmament on our part irrespective of what foreign nations may do, does not truly serve the cause of peace. We must be able to guarantee peace with our empire. Our empire, free from a spirit of aggression, able to keep peace within its boundaries, is the principal pillar of peace in the world. But if she is not able to guarantee peace within her borders she is a source of peril to our world and our influence in the world is gone if we once betray the principle of peace with security."

Mr. Baldwin then sharply accused the Labor Government of broken promises. Mr. Baldwin said for a time the government had found it roses all the way, but now it was learning the truth "we unto you when all men speak well of you." The glamor was wearing off, the government's stock was declining. Business was falling off. "Is anything rising," he concluded, "yes, unemployment."

Weldon L. Crosman
 And Prohibition

(By Richard E. Delaney in the Oakland, California Maple Leaf.)

On page 295 of The Maple Leaf for October Weldon L. Crosman, who writes entertainingly of his travels in his native province, has the following quotation from Scripture to show that prohibition is backed up by Holy Writ:

"In Habakkuk 2, 15 we read: 'Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth the bottle to him and makes his drunken also.'"

"St. Paul in Romans 14, 13, advises that no man put a stumbling block or an occasion to fall in his brother's way."

I will now place the following quotation from Scripture side by side with Mr. Crosman's quotation:

"Give strong drinks to him who is ready to perish, give wine to the bitter soul, make him forget his poverty and remember his misery no more."

Here is another one: "It is good for man to eat and drink and make his soul enjoy the good of his labor."

Look up book of Ecclesiastes and book of Proverbs for the above quotations.

I will not quote St. Paul to Timothy: "Drink no longer water but use a little wine for thy stomach's sake and often in infirmities."

Again: "The son of Man came in eating and drinking, and they (the Pharisees) said: Behold the glutton and wine bibber, the friend of sinners and the publican."

Why is it Mr. Crosman forgot to use these four quotations from Scripture? Are you aware that it is as old as civilization and Christianity that you cannot force morals on the public? Are you aware that prohibition is a million miles from being temperance?

Temperance is when you exercise your own free will. That was Christ's teaching.

Prohibition is when you have a policeman, perhaps with club, watching over you.

Temperance is a teaching of Christ. Prohibition is a teaching of politics.

Temperance in 1900 years old. Prohibition began with the puritans in the State of Maine, and is not yet one hundred years old.

Are you aware that when we try to force morals on the public we practice paganism? Are you aware that that was not the teaching of Christ?

In speaking of the pleasant evening you spent in Charlottetown, at a reception in your honor, I am proud to read that you speak of the Sons of Temperance. You were looking for a chance to deliver a few speeches on prohibition. As you are a zealous expounder of Scripture, did you ever read in Holy Writ that Christ in His Own day ever asked the Roman Empire to back up His teaching in regard to temperance or anything else?

Thanks to my humble parents at Friars' Head, Cape Breton, now passed away, who brought me up, I practice temperance.

I gather from your statements that you believe in prohibition. You believe, therefore, in forcing morals on the public. If you claim that the United States consumes less liquor today than it did before prohibition, then you make out that prohibition is a matter of economics, and not temperance. The teaching of temperance, which is the teaching of Christ, you must admit, is purely a moral question, and not economics.

Because I do not agree with your plans of forcing morals on the public, Mr. Crosman, do you think I am unfair? There cannot be two truths and two names to the subject of prohibition. One is a moral question the other is politics.

You remember the Spanish Inquisition. It was an attempt, on the part of the fanatic Catholics of Spain to force people to their own belief, was it not? Did it work? No! Is it in existence today? No!

The prohibition of today is an attempt to force morals on the public, is it not? Is it backed up by the teaching of Christ? No! If Christ is not backing up prohibition will it last beyond the age of "noble experiment?"

No one abhors drunkenness more than I do, but prohibition is not the remedy. If words, word and more words could cure drunkenness there would not be a drunkard left. With due respect for some people who have the best of intention in these campaigns, prohibition nowadays has become the only religion of the major party.

MRS. SUSAN MURRAY

After suffering for the past eight years from heart disease, Mrs. Susan Murray, 73 years passed suddenly away on Nov. 12th, at the home of her son Randolph in Pleasant Grove, to which she had been removed two weeks before her death. Will Try To Prove An Alibi

(Canadian Press)

PENTICTON, N. B., Dec. 3.—Counsel for Charles Oliver, who is charged with forcible seizure in connection with the tarring and feathering of Dr. W. E. Latimer on November 25, announced today they would reserve their defense for the higher court, thus anticipating the commitment of Oliver for trial when the preliminary hearing on his case resumes this afternoon. The prosecution concluded their case yesterday afternoon. His counsel have arranged temporary bail for Oliver on two bonds of $1,000 each. It is intimated that the defence will base their case on an alibi when the trial in higher court takes place.

CITY OF

TROOPS MUTINY

NANKING, Dec. 3.—A detachment of Nationalist troops belonging to the 24th division mutinied today at Pukow across the Yangtze river from Nanking. All communication with Pukow was severed. It is understood however, that the mutineers looted a considerable portion of the business district of Pukow before loyal forces succeeded in driving them from the city. The 24th division which participated in the recent fighting in Honan Province against the rebellious Kuominchun or "people's army," was under orders to proceed to Canton to help defend that city against a rebel advance. It was awaiting transports at Pukow, when the mutiny broke out. The cause of the disorder was not stated. It was widely reported however, that the Government's failure to pay the troops coupled with their displeasure at being ordered to Canton, precipitated the trouble. Rifle firing was plainly audible on the Nanking side of the Yangtze. Nanking, however, remains quiet. It is expected that Government forces will have the situation under control shortly.

Do It

(C. E. MacKenzie)

Not long ago the writer read an article on "Application of Knowledge" which would be well worth anyone's while to read, mark, learn and inwardly digest.

If I may be permitted, I will endeavor to re-produce the facts as they appeared to me.

The initial sentence read somewhat like this, "There is enough good information floating about unused to place the industry on the very pinnacle of success."

With all the experiments in plant food, plant growth, feeds best suited to different kinds of live stock, care and maintenance and many others one might mention being tried out at all of our many experimental stations and published in their yearly reports, it seems strange indeed, that the general farming public fail to grasp even a tithe of this knowledge gained for their benefit. I our public venture to say that if our public school teachers were to receive an agricultural training and have the reports of our experimental farms placed on the school book list, that ere many years, agriculture would come into its own.

This writer went on to say that research work should continue as our more progressive farmers are ready and asking for the latest information along their line, and they are surely entitled to the most accurate data concerning, not only production, but also to the marketing end of the business.

What a boost the farming industry would get if we would all farm as well as we know how! What rapid progress we would make if all our farmers would use only class "A" seed, if we would study crop rotation best adapted to our particular line of farming, and if we each and all would apply proper remedies for insects and fungous pests. What rapid strides would be made if we each would breed only the best live stock and fed them according to the best known standards and methods.

Possibly the greatest service rendered by any government to its farming population is that emanating from the experimental stations. These are for our guidance today, and results of research will guide us for the future. Without this knowledge gained, farming would soon go backward rather than progress.

It is our leading farmers and breeders who use this information and spread the example that we all should follow as it is only after these scientific facts and information are grown into actual crops and better live stock, they become practical to the every day farmer and after a time applied by everyone.

Farming carried on in any old way does not even pay interest on investment, therefore would it not be well to apply all our knowledge just to decreased cost of production by doing our best by producing larger yields of certain laws, therefore has become the fashion as late as today. If a woman is seen smoking, a loaf of protest, and therefore of prohibition goes up on the part of this same breed or race of people. In spite of the fact that the "Good Book" is one authority on morals, there is nothing in it to indicate the prohibition of smoking. The howl of people in certain things is not in the evil but in the look of things, according to their cult.

When people will practice true Christianity and love of neighbor the fashion and race habit of prohibiting will disappear, and so will prohibition. Let us go back to temperance and forget the idea of forcing morals.

—PRETTY WEDDING—A quiet but pretty wedding took place at St. Mary's Church, Summerside, on Saturday, November 30th, when Miss Annie Pearl MacLeod, daughter of the late Capt. George B. McLeod and Mrs. McLeod of Springbrook, became the bride of Mr. John Weeks Murphy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Murphy, of Sea View. The ceremony was performed by Ven. Archdeacon White in the presence of some of the intimate friends of the contracting parties. Both bride and groom are very popular and their many friends will be pleased to extend heartfelt congratulations and best wishes for a long and happy wedded future. The happy couple will reside in Sea View. A reception was held at the home of the groom's parents that same evening to which the immediate relatives and friends were invited.—S.

per acre of land under cultivation. For instance, cost of production is much less when one grows, say two hundred and fifty bushels marketable potatoes, than when one hundred and fifty are produced. Increased production makes itself felt all through it enables greater live stock production at a smaller overhead cost, and in a short time, larger live stock returns.

There is enough known to give agriculture an enormous boost today if we will only do as we know how to do. So let us plan that for the future, we will apply all we know about farming and its many branches, then we will have marked progress, "do it."
