Financial Readjustments

After nine months' negotiation, it is announced that agreements have been completed between the Dominion and the provincial governments, based on Finance Minister Lisle's budget proposal last April that the provinces vacate personal income and corporation tax fields during wartime.

The provinces had the option of accepting payment on the basis of the tax sources to be abandoned, or on the basis of the net debt service actually paid in 1940, less the revenue obtained from succession duties, British Columbia, Alberta, Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec accepted the former alternative, Saskatchewan, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island the latter.

The annual payment to this province, it is stated, will be $701,943, including a "fiscal need" subsidy of $437,174, which will mean, however, suspension of the $275,000 subsidies now enjoyed as a result of the recommendations of the Duncan and White Commissions, and of the $40,000 received annually in lieu of railway taxation.

Without fuller study of the relative figures it would be idle to comment on the effect of the agreements. It is emphasized that they are regarded as necessary to the Dominion's war financing, that they are binding only for the duration of the war and one year after, and that the provinces "shall not be deemed to have surrendered, transferred or impaired" their rights under the B.N.A. Act. These assurances may be accepted so far as the general principles are concerned. It is in the details, however, that the provinces are interested, and these will naturally be subjected to the closest scrutiny.

Dead Cabinet Timber

No Prime Minister in British history has commanded greater public confidence than Mr. Churchill. He stands as the very symbol of victorious democracy. This government is composed of able men drawn from all political parties. Yet even the Churchill Government is subject to criticism at home, and, according to a recent London despatch, informed sources are forecasting drastic cabinet changes as a result of this criticism, and with a view to strengthening Britain's war effort. That, in the Old Country, is all that matters. Personalities don't count; neither do politics. It is predicted that there will be "many sweeping changes, involving political heads for the war office and departments concerned with the military and civil administration in Malaya and other British possessions in the Pacific." It is also regarded as likely that Mr. Churchill will form a war cabinet with ministers unencumbered by departmental duties—a proposal he has turned down in the past.

A housecleaning of this kind is what is badly needed at Ottawa. The King Government, being a one-party administration, carries much more dead timber than Britain's national war government under Churchill. Yet we seem fated to struggle along with this handicap, with now and then a re-shuffling of offices when criticism centres too strongly upon any one department. When new appointments have to be made, it never occurs to Mr. King to look outside the circle of his political friends.

It Premier Churchill cannot get along without making "drastic cabinet changes", and subordinating his own preferences from time to time, how can Mr. King expect to do so? This is a subject about which he may expect to hear a good deal when Parliament reopens.

Monday Night's Blackout

Full publicity has been given to the preparations for Prince Edward Island's first trial blackout on Monday night. Not only Charlottetown and Summerside, but practically all our towns and villages will be included, and it is important that there be the fullest cooperation with the authorities in every community. If we needed a reminder of this fact, it was provided this week in the news reports of enemy submarines operating alarmingly close to our Atlantic seaboard. An enemy air-raid might be more difficult to stage, but it is by no means impossible, or even improbable. Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia are included officially in the areas of danger from air attack, and this means precisely what it says. Blackouts, to be effective against such danger, must be complete. Citizens who neglect their responsibility by ignoring the instructions given with regard to signals, lights and traffic, should be penalized. They may, in time of real danger, prove a menace to themselves and the community.

Soldiers know how difficult it is to put the same vim and conscientiousness into army manoeuvres as would be required in actual combat, yet experience has shown this to be the only way by which they can attain to the efficiency of a fighting force. The same applies to civilian training in air raid precautions.

It was the trial blackouts which proved London's salvation. There were many who ridiculed the preparations which had been made prior to the attacks of the enemy raiders. The time came, however, when the public fully realized the benefits of the practices and other provisions with which they had been made familiar. One consequence was that there was no panic. Everyone knew just what he or she was required to do, and turned to the job in hand.

The instructions which have been appearing daily in the press should be sufficient to insure the success of Monday night's test.

Householders should note, however that window blinds are not sufficient to black out an illuminated interior. During the half-hour test, from 9.30 to 10 p. m., they are advised to retire to one or two rooms, first covering all windows and other openings (including skylights) visible from the exterior with some heavy dark material, leaving the rest of the house in complete darkness. Motorists should stop and remain properly parked during the whole period, without lights. They must be careful not to park in front of fire hydrants, hospital entrances or street intersections, or block traffic in any other way which would interfere with the operation of fire engines, police cars, ambulances or other emergency vehicles. They should on no account attempt to drive with lights out.

It would be a fine example to the rest of Canada if we could score 100 per cent efficiency in Monday night's blackout. Having set the pace in enlistments and in the Victory Loan campaign, why shouldn't we?

EDITORIAL NOTES

Just a month till Lent.

Don't forget to "Black-out" Monday.

Provincial Income Tax has gone by the boards.

Seven flight heroes, Hitler victims, have been laid to rest here; may their memories ever be kept green.

Ceiling adjustments have started with beds and furniture, appropriately enough, for these are the beginnings of house-keeping and family life.

The Provincial Government is to be compensated for the loss of gas tax, but who is going to compensate the oil stations for the loss of business on which the tax is paid?

And up the bumps! The following appeared in the personals column of a San Diego, (Cal.) newspaper. "Gentleman would like to meet attractive young lady with four good tires."

The Spectator is responsible for this gem: "A distinguished authority went down to the provinces to talk to the troops on Russia. He thought a film would enliven things, and ordered one entitled, 'The Red Army,' but, unwisely, neglected to give it a trial trip. When the machine started running the audience found itself treated to an illustration of the life-cycle of the domestic bed-bug. Enlivening in its way, no doubt, by association."

Mr. Floyd S. Chalmers, Editor of The Financial Post, recently returned from England told a Toronto audience that the most significant feature of the British system of war service is that there is no distinction between the needs of the fighting forces and the needs of war industries. The government is calling up persons in both fields and sending them where they are needed. "And, of course, there is no such pathetic nonsense as trying to distinguish between service at home and service abroad. Britain does not divide a world war into two segments. Great Britain knows that her front line and the front line of democracy extends around the world."

Canada is gaining markets down south. Exports to Bermuda in the first 10 months of 1941 almost doubled in value from the 1939 figures, according to a report before the legislature on the operations of the Bermuda Food Control Board. Imports from Canada in the period were valued at $1,000,000. In the months covered by the report, the U. S. led in exports to Bermuda, sending $3,900,000 worth. The United Kingdom was third with $1,700,000. Canada monopolized the foodstuffs trade, sending more than $1,000,000 worth, against $846,000 for the U. S. and $425,000 for the United Kingdom. But the Dominion lagged far behind the others in dry goods, shipping only $50,000 worth.

Major General L. R. LaFleche, D. S. O., speaking before the Canadian Railway Club at Montreal, paid tribute to Canadians who died in Hong Kong, and said he hoped that there "never would be the slightest doubt" that the country would provide "other Canadians to take the place of those who will fall on the field of battle." He said Canadian boys overseas "have the first call upon everything we have; our lives as well as our wealth. They defend us; we must back them to the end. Let there be no talk of seeing our overseas forces going short of supplies or reinforcements. That would be treachery to our sons."

Benjamin Franklin, American statesman, born this date 1706; began life as a printer; established in Philadelphia one of the earliest circulating libraries; served as Clerk of the General Assembly; appointed postmaster of Philadelphia, when he organized the first police force, and first fire brigade in the colonies; organized first public academy of learning, which opened in 1751, was chartered in 1753, and eventually became the University of Pennsylvania; served as a member of the General Assembly; made his famous experiment proving the identity of lightning and electricity in 1752; represented the colonies in London, and on return became a resurrectional leader; was sent to Europe to negotiate trade treaties; his last public act was to address a petition to Congress for the abolition of slavery under the Stars and Stripes; his many sided genius was eminently practical, and in science and politics he was an altruist.

NOTES BY THE WAY

"Is she a pretty child?" asked Mr. Lloyd George (after the birth of Churchill's first daughter). Her father beamed. The pretty child ever seen. "Is she her mother?" inquired Lloyd George, politely. "No," answered Winston Churchill, solemnly. "She's exactly like me."

Dominion government geologists engaged during the past season a geophysical survey of a 300 square-mile section of Quebec, lying east of James Bay, report the presence of a large band of volcanic and sedimentary rocks, which they believe as being worthy of intensive prospecting for gold and other metals, announced the Department of Mines. The favor-able rocks within the Eastmain River for 140 miles and are fifteen miles in width. The region is one of three within the Canadian shield in which the Geological Survey made exploratory and reconnaissance surveys during the present year. — Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph.

There are some who see in a forlorn hope no more than a useless gesture, and who count sacrifice as waste. They are others who go so far as to repeat the unoriginal and vile cynicism that a live coward is better than a dead hero. We disagree with the material and spiritual sense. Britain was harshly criticized for the unsuccessful aid to Greece and the heavy losses sustained in the hopeless defence of Crete, yet it is today that if these sacrifices had not been made the swastika would in all probability be flying over Moscow today, and a Russian would be under the heel of the Hunmaster instead of being on top of him and driving him to despairation. There may or there may not be an analogy in the Hong Kong resistance. It may serve to upset the time-table of the Japanese war lords just as the Grecian and Cretan enterprise put Hitler out of time and out of tune. We must leave these matters to the decision of the authorities and the judgment of posterity. But, while we can only doff our hats to the defenders of our Empire's outpost in the Far East, God forbid that it shall devolve upon us to perform a similar task, but not beyond the bounds of possibility. We shall not fail. — Royal Gazette (Hamilton Bermuda.)

It is said that no one ever learns from history. But the Germans do, although they mould their history to fit their learning. Like other nations, they make history by their deeds. But unlike other nations, they do not learn from their own history. It is said that there has been a German professor who has been a disciple of Treitschke's — wrote that if Germany were to be defeated, history would have lost its meaning. He is right, but he is also wrong. History is not a mere record of events, it is a living thing, it is a part of our lives. It is the only way we can learn from the mistakes of others. It is the only way we can avoid repeating them. It is the only way we can build a better future for ourselves. It is the only way we can understand the world we live in.
