The Logical Cure for Sick Headache.

It is a mistake to endure a headache as a necessary affliction. It is equally a mistake to doctor it as simply a headache, for though you may relieve, you cannot cure it that way.

Only in rare cases is a headache caused by anything wrong with the head itself. The trouble lies in some impurity of the blood that irritates the delicate network of nerves and causes the ache. That is why every pulsation pouring in more blood, is so plainly felt.

Lessening the flow of blood to the head by means of a tight compress, an ice-bag, or some drug that acts on the heart and reduces the pulsations, sometimes gives temporary relief. But these measures have absolutely no effect on the blood impurity which was the cause of the whole trouble.

In practically every case this blood impurity would be removed from the system by the bowels, kidneys, skin or lungs, if these were all working right. It is the inactivity of one or more of them that allows the poisons to accumulate in the blood, and the headache is simply a symptom or warning that things are not right.

The way to put them right—to cure the root of the whole matter—is to take Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. They act directly on the bowels, regulating them —on the kidneys, strengthening and stimulating them —on the skin, opening up the pores—and on the lungs, clearing the delicate membrane of any mucus which may have collected.

When these four great eliminating organs get working properly again all impurities are quickly taken out of the blood, and the unpleasant symptoms, of which the headache is one, disappear—not simply relieved, but cured.

You can take Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills with confidence, for they have a record of over half a century of remarkable cures.

Rev. A. L. Bowers, of Bristol, Tenn., tells how they cured him :

"I want you to know how much good your Indian Root Pills have done for me. I was troubled with terrible headaches and biliousness. I tried several doctors but they did me no good, and for fourteen years I suffered. The use of your pills has made a cure in my case."

THE POST OFFICE.

If Claudius at Rome wanted to write to his sweetheart, who chanced to dwell in the surburbs, he would have to delegate one of his servants to carry the message, and then if robbers did not take hold of the faithful domestic and kill him, Claudius might expect to receive a reply some time during the same month. It was a pretty tedious way of corresponding in those days, and so it continued up to the thirteenth century. Of course the government had a regular system for sending messages to other governments, but this organization was only for the use of kings.

The word "post" comes from a Latin word meaning to place, and its use in connection with the postal service is derived from the fact that horses and men were placed at different stations or posts afong the roads carrying such messages as the Roman senate chose to communicate to the government of some distance province.

The first instance of the post being used for private communications,—which in fact was the beginning of the post office of today,—was at the University of Paris in the thirteenth century. It appears that the students then, as now, would frequently find it necessary to write home for additional funds, and therefore students were in greater need of such a system than anybody else. Accordingly, they worked out some sort of a scheme for the carrying of mail to and from various cities of France. The popularity of the idea as opposed to the older method of sending a private servant with each letter soon spread through France.

It was nearly two centuries later, however, that the government took hold of the system and made it a national business. On June 19th, 1464, King Louis XI, issued a royal edict which resulted in the establishment of post stations along all the principal roads.

The post office was instituted in other countries, but the rate of postage was extremely high. It was not until the nineteenth century that the penny post was brought about, and it was shortly after its introduction that the first postage stamp came into use. The postage stamp is probably the commonest thing in existence today, and the first one was designed by Mulready, and was first used on May 6th, 1840.

CORRECT CARRIAGE COUNTS IN BEAUTY

A distinguished bearing is the greatest asset a woman can have. It counts more than beauty, for what is beauty without it ? It counts more than fine clothes, for fine clothes worn by a woman with a stooping, uncertain carriage, lose all their effect.

There was a time when a woman was taught to carry herself well. She was taught to walk just as she was taught the other feminine arts and graces; it was part of her education.

She practiced before a long mirror, with a book on her head, to acquire the proper poise. Up and down, up and down, until by force of habit she had attained a graceful bearing.

The French woman is taught to show the top of her collar; in other words, to hold her head high. That is the secret of their "chic." One clever woman in New York makes a specialty of teaching women to see themselves as others see them.

She is a paid critic who tells a pupil all her faults with the frankness of a member of the family, for which she charges a good round fee.

When she has finished, the pupil walks well and has a charming carriage; if her voice was loud and grating, it is soft and sweet, if her manner was nervous and uncertain, it is composed and easy.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited. ...

Dear Sirs,—While in the country last summer I was badly bitten by mosquitoes, so bad that I thought I would be disfigured for a couple of weeks. I was advised to try your Liniment to allay the irritation, and did so. The effect was more than I expected, a few applications completely curing the irritation, and preventing the bites from becoming sore. MINARD'S LINIMENT is also a good article to keep off the mosquitoes.

Yours truly,
W. A.V.R.

A DEFECT IN GOLF.

Writing in the Fortnightly for August on "The Soul of Golf," P. P. Vaile has courage enough to point to what may be regarded as almost approaching a fault in golf.

"Much has been made of the assumption that golf is the greatest possible test of a man's temperament. This has to a great extent, I am afraid, been exaggerated. It is one of those things in connection with the game that has been handed down to us and which we have been afraid to interfere with. I cannot see why this claim should be quietly granted. In golf a man is treated with tragic solemnity, while he is making his stroke. A caddie may not sigh, but if a cricket chirped he would be considered a bounder. How would our golfer feel if he had to play his driver with another fellow waving his club at him twenty or thirty feet away, and standing ready to spoil his shot ?—yet that is what the lawn tennis player has to put up with.

"There is a good deal of exaggeration about this aspect of golf, even as there is a good deal of nonsense about the interference of onlookers. What can be done by one when one is accustomed to a crowd may be seen when one of the great golfers is playing out of a great 'V' formed by the gallery, and, needless to say, playing from the narrow end of it. Golf is a good test of a man's disposition without doubt, but as a game it lacks one important feature, which is characteristic of every other field sport, I think except golf. In these the medium of conflict is the same ball, and the skill of the opposing side has much to do with the chances of the other player or players. In golf each man plays his own game with his own ball, and the only effect of his opponent's play on his moral, or the luck of a stymie. Many people consider this a defect, but golf is a game unto itself, and we must take it as it is.

"He won't stand without hitchin," is the opinion J. J. Hill, railroader, has a well-known Canadian financier who worsted him in an important deal.
