FURTHER PARTICULARS OF MULLEN MURDER CASE

BOSTON, April 6—Dionisios Spiropoulos, alias James Manter, a Greek, but 20 years of age, who was lured from Manchester, N. H., to be arrested in Boston yesterday, is the man who the police claim ended the life of the Cambridge domestic in Squire's Field, Arlington, one year ago last Sunday night.

At midnight the police asserted that he was trembling on the verge of a complete confession.

The latter is also held as an accessory by the Cambridge police, as he states that he witnessed the killing of the unfortunate girl and helped to drag her into the field after Manter had knocked her down. Manter is a barber by trade and was employed at 45 Spruce street in Manchester. Delory is a butcher by occupation, but has been employed at the Central Market on Blackstone street, Boston.

SILENCED BY OATH.

They were friends, and it was due to this friendship and the alleged fact that a solemn oath was adminstered to him by Manter on the night of the murder that, Delory states, silenced his tongue through all the months that the investigation into the case went on and on.

Delory, in fact, deserves no credit for what has already been learned by the authorities.

Briefly stated, this is what transpired on the fatal night as Delory's lips last night related it. Both men at the time of the murder were employed as farm hands at Billerica, near Lowell. They were friends and went about together considerably. On the night of the crime they came to the city of Cambridge by electric car to have a "jolly time."

Annie Mullins was out for a walk that night. The girl whom Professor von Jaggeman and his wife and Mrs. Tubbs and all her other friends had asserted was afraid of her own shadow, met Manter and Delory on the street at Porter Station in Cambridge.

They "picked her up."

Then they walked out to Arlington Centre. They turned and started back and dragged the girl into the deserted Squire field. Here Delorey says that the murder took place. He alleges that Manter and himself carried the young woman to the edge of the declivity, where her body was afterwards found.

Suddenly he was startled by the scream of the girl. He saw a form topple over. He started to rush to join his companion. Manter approached him on the run, his hands dripping with some sort of fluid, whose character his companion was soon to learn.

"I've cut her throat. Let's get out of here quick," was the sentence that he says he heard. They left the field, and passed out to Billerica on a late car All the way out, Manter kept his hands in his pockets so that no one might observe that blood marks stained his fingers.

Before they parted for the night, Delory made a solemn oath at Manter's dictation that he would never reveal anything that transpired.

CONFRONTED FORMER FRIEND.

This was what the witness declared to the police of Cambridge last night.

The Greek was made to listen to the end. He denied everything. He said that Delory lied.

"The Mullins case has been solved," said Chief Urquhart of Arlington to the Post representative today. "Thank God for it. Oh, but this is good."

Suspicion was occasioned by the fact that at 6.15 o'clock on the morning of March 29 last year, before Annie Mullins' mutilated body had been found in Squire's field, before even the knowledge of the murder had become known, one or the other of the men now under arrest told a person in Billerica that a girl had been murered the night previously in a field at Arlington.

EARLY TRIP SUSPICIOUS.

At 8:15 o'clock that same morning, a boy at play in the field stumbled upon the body and called the caretaker of St. Paul's cemetery, nearby, to the spot. Thus suspicion had been aroused in the mind of this individual in Billerica.

FRIENDS PARTED.

Delory and Manter separated. They went their respective ways, the barber to find work finally at Manchester and the one-time farm hand, Delory, became a butler.

The months passed and the interest in the case began to wane. State police, even the astute Deputy Neal of that body, branded Annie Mullins as a suicide.

Then the man in Billerica finally acted. He gave his information to Lieutenant Gordon, who is in charge of a station in North Cambridge. The latter went to work on the case.

LURED BY LETTER.

Then a carefully worded decoy letter was sent to the man. The police wantedto get him to come within the limits of the State so that there would be no need of legal formalities afterwards. Manter nipped at the bait. It is intimated that the letter was made to look as though some young woman of his acquaintance desired to see him in [illegible].

He arrived at [illegible] North Station. The meeting place with the young woman was to be in the North End. When he was passing Lieutenant Gordon and Sergeant Canney came up to his side and secured him.

They hurried him into a carriage and with him went a dress suit case that he had carried. The man protested. It availed nothing.

Then he lost his courage entirely and sank back in the vehicle, saying hardly a word until the station was reached.

When the dress suit case was afterwards examined it was found to contain a portion of a set of false teeth, a number of razors and other articles.

FATAL RAZOR MISSING.

Delory showed consistency in his story, and the police say that not a link is missing in the chain of evidence, except as regards the securing of the razor with which the deed was done.

They arrested Manter even before they secured the witness in the case. Though Delory had been under surveillance, the knowledge that the police wanted at some time to interview him in the case never occurred to him up to 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Delory thought that all he had to do was to walk in, see Lieutenant Gordon, get some of his Somerville friends to tell the officers that they were mistaken in such an outlandish charge against him and that he would speedily be released.

A door to an inner room was pushed open. He was given a thrust into the apartment. The man's eyeballs fairly stuck out of his head. There was the pallid-faced Manter, the last man in the world whom he had expected to see in the police station, seated in a chair before him.

Manter was equally thunderstruck. He took one look at the new-comer, sprang to his feet, clenched his gands and fell in a heap on the floor.

Delory was given a chair, or rather half carried to one. Manter was given a restorative. All the buoyancy had gone out of the spirit of the latecomer.

He broke down. He gave the story of the murder. He even admitted that he had helped to carry the unfortunate girl into the field.

This all came out, and Manter had to sit and listen to it. Delory stated, partly between sobs, that after meeting with Annie Mullins and the walk to Arlington, they had both had both lured the girl into the field. When they reached the place, he said, they tried to drag her into a deserted spot, and the girl had screamed.

HER THROAT WAS CUT.

At this Manter, he said, tripped her up and then both bore the girl back to the edge of the declivity. Afterwards her throat was cut.

According to Delory's confession, the men carried the girl fully 150 yards, and all the while she did not make any outcry except in the first instance just before being tripped up. No one was near to hear her outcry. "Then," says Delory, "she must have swooned, for she didn't bother us further."

The actual throat cutting was done after the girl had been dropped at the edge of the embankment, far back from Massachusetts avenue, Long ago, in the first inception of the case, it was shown that she must have been lying down when the deed was committed by the way that the blood flowed, without touching certain portions of her dress.

A GRAND KIDNEY MEDICINE

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Him When Everything Else Failed.

Ulverton, Que., March 17th, 1908.

I wish to place on record, for the sake of others who may be suffering in the same way that I suffered, that no medicine I ever took did me so much real good as "Fruit-a-tives" did.

I suffered for many years with Kidney Trouble, with bad pain in the back.

I took every known kidney remedy and kidney pill, but nothing gave me any relief, and I was getting discouraged.

I was advised to try "Fruit-a-tives" and did so—and this medicine cured me when everything else failed.

I used altogether fifteen boxes of "Fruit-a-tives," and from the outset they gave me relief and I am now practically well again; no pain, no distress, and all symptoms of kidney disease have entirely left me. I am very thankful to be once more well, and I freely make this statement for the sake of others who may suffer as I did. To them, I say try "Fruit-a-tives," as they are a grand kidney medicine.

Nancy Hanks, 2.04 dam of Admiral Dewey 2.04 3-4 sire of Commodore Ledyard 34.709

The Commodore enjoys the rare distinction of having the fastest combined speed inheritance of any stallion yet foaled. He inherits the blood of the KINGS and QUEENS of the trotting turf, having by his sire and dam eight crosses of Hambletonian 10. He has developed into a horse of commanding size with great bone and substance and will weigh today 1075 lbs. His grandsire Bingen 2.06 1-4 is the leading and most popular sire in America. Eleven (11) colts were the result of his first year in the stud here, six of which started in the futurity race as two year olds. Arena Belle, bred by Duncan Robertson, North River, won in straight heats. They were equally successful in the show ring, winning 1st, 2nd and 3rd prize in their respective classes. At the Provincial Exhibition in Halifax last fall five (5) of these colts as 3 year olds started, 3 in the pacing and 2 in the trotting class winning a FIRST, TWO SECONDS, a THIRD and FOURTH also first in the showing. This record has never been equalled by any stallion ever imported into Canada. The above record proves beyond a doubt his ability to transmit speed. There is no better bred stallion in Canada today than COMMODORE LEDYARD. He will make the season of 1909 at the PARK STABLES, Queen and Euston Sts. For terms and particulars apply to the owner

MICHAEL A. O'BRIEN.

Young Barrister Registered in Canadian Stud Book.

This well known draft stallion will make the season of 1909 at the PARK STABLES Corner of Queen and Euston Sts. Charlottetown. YOUNG BARRISTER was sired by that king of draft horses OLD BARRISTER. Rand his dam was the imported pure bred Clydesdale mare M[illegible]SOTIS by the world renowned McGREGOR of SCOTLAND. As a getter of draft stock he stands unequalled in this Province today, having to his credit nine (9) stallions sired by him, now in the stud. Last year twelve (12) large magnificent young draft mares got by him sold at high figures for breeding purposes to parties in Nova Scotia where Young Barrister stood for two seasons. Combining as he does the blood of the most illustrious sires of draft stock the Old Country has produced, breeders of heavy stock here should avail themselves of the opportunity to secure his services.
