She wiped it on her apron and laid it on the center table; then wiped her hand and started to pull down her sleeves.

"That's a curious bit of tatting on your arm," the doctor commented. "How did you come by it?" "I don't know," she replied indifferently. "It's always been there, I fancy; ever since I was too small to remember anyway. I hope your knife won't get rusty, sir. And I hope you don't mind my laughin' at that bit of song you sang."

"Not a bit," said the doctor. "I don't wonder the language struck you as queer. Yet it was common enough down in the quarter of the world where I was born."

"And where might that be, sir?" she asked.

"Oh, I meant the South Pacific generally. Where I lived was in New Zealand."

"Fancy now!" she said obviously pleased. "That's where I come from myself—Wellington, New Zealand, but I never heard that language."

"You're rather near-sighted, aren't you, Perkins?" he said.

"Oh, no, sir; quite to the contrary. In fact, I can see farther than most people."

"Did you ever have your eyes tested?"

"Measured for glasses, do you mean, sir?" she asked. "No, sir. I shan't never come to them."

"Sit down in that chair a minute," said the doctor, with an easy assumption of authority. "No, not that one; this big chair here. I want to see if your eyes are as good as you think they are."

The chair he indicated, and in which she rather reluctantly seated herself was deep and soft and heavily upholstered. Neither the doctor nor I enjoyed sitting in it, however, because the curve at the back thrust one's head forward an unnatural angle.

"Lean back," commented the doctor "all the way—so."

When she was seated to his satisfaction, he wheeled the chair around with its back to the table, and then adjusted the powerful electric reading lamp so that it shed a beam horizontally above the girl's head.

She surveyed these preparations a little uneasily. "It's like having a tooth pulled," she said.

"Not a bit," said the doctor cheerfully. "It's not going to hurt. I only want you to look into this little mirror and tell me what you see."

He held it up before her eyes as he spoke. It was circular, slightly concave and was adjusted upon a long ivory handle. He held it above her head so that she had to strain her eyes upward to see it at all, and at "I Don't See Anything but a Spot of Yellow Light."

such an angle that it reflected the light of the reading lamp straight into her eyes.

"I don't see anything at all but a spot of yellow light."

"You only see one?" questioned the doctor.

He pulled out his watch and glanced at it. "Don't mind what I'm doing," he admonished her. "Look steadily at the little mirror. Let me know now long it is before you begin to see two of those spots."

He stood perfectly still before her, except that the hand which held the mirror permitted it to swing very slowly, pendulum-wise, before her, though always at an angle that sent the beam straight into her eyes.

From my corner of the room I watched him breathlessly. Of course it was perfectly obvious to see what he was doing. The examination of her eyes had been a mere pretext. His real object in inducing the girl to strain her eyes upward was to throw her into a hypnotic sleep. The method he had taken was an old-fashioned one, and one he rarely used. At the laboratory the hypnotized people almost daily by the simple and almost instantaneous process of having them lie down and telling them that they were going to sleep. But that method was absolutely dependent upon a condition which could not exist here. The patient must expect to be hypnotized and be in a state of willing submission. We had no reason to suppose that Jane Perkins would submit herself to any such test as that in the hands of strangers. And even with his mirror he would not be able to hypnotize her if she should suspect that this was what he was trying to do, and should resist. But his confident, friendly manner, his easy assumption of authority, the fact that he came from the same part of the world as herself—all this speedily disarmed suspicion.

At the end of three or four minutes of silence the doctor turned away and laid his little mirror upon the table.

"It's five minutes past eight," he said, with a second glance at his watch. "We haven't any time to lose. Close all the windows; that's the first thing to do—and lock them. And then we'll bolt both doors—it won't do to take any chances—and, in general, try to be ready for anything she may do. I think you'd better stand behind her chair, over yonder, where she won't see you at first. Now—are you ready?"

He stationed himself where he had stood before just a pace or two away from the chair where the girl lay asleep. His eyes were shining, and every line of the attitude of his big, snowy body bespoke the relaxation possible only to nervous systems of very high order, the relaxation that is ready to exert its utmost effort in any direction; that is braced against nothing because it is expecting anything.

"They diagnosed my case a pain in the stomach."

TANTALIZING TESSIE

Wife: A woman's work is never done.

Hubby: Oh, don't be as hard on the women as that, my dear.

"No," he said; "you'd have to go a matter of a thousand miles or two from Wellington to hear that; it's Maori."

Keeping Baby Lovely And Well

Some babies thrive from the hour of their birth while others make so little progress as to be the cause of much anxiety. As a rule it is the digestion that is at fault with these backward ones and they start to go ahead directly Baby's Own Tablets are made the corrective of their stomach and bowel troubles.

Baby's Own Tablets are specially designed for the use of babies and little children. They are absolutely safe and the mother can feel perfectly secure in giving them to even the most delicate child. They are a mild but thorough laxative which banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and allay the pains which accompany the cutting of teeth. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

When Your Cough Hangs On, Mix This at Home

The best cough remedy that money could buy, can easily be mixed at home. It saves money and gives you the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of stubborn coughs and chest colds, giving immediate relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a 16 oz. bottle, and fill up with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. It's no trouble at all to mix, and when you use it, you will never be without it. Keeps perfectly and tastes good—children really like it.

It is surprising how quickly this loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and soothes and heals the inflamed membranes. At the same time, part of the medicine is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes, and helps the system throw off the whole trouble. Even those severe coughs which follow cold epidemics, are promptly ended.

Illustrating the Enterprise 'Iron Duke'

WHAT! A PIANO IN THE KITCHEN?

"DON'T BE SILLY," you say. "Who would want a piano in the kitchen!"

Quite right! But what we really mean is that the new Enterprise Ranges are so colourful and so beautifully built—anyone of them would add as much to the charm and comfort of your kitchen as a piano does for the beauty of living room or parlour.

The modern mode is colour. All Enterprise Ranges reflect the trend of the times—made in cheery colours and porcelain white. No more "Kitchen Blues" when you own a colourful Enterprise Range!

The Enterprise Ranges are as efficient as they are beautiful. For nearly two generations Enterprise Ranges have given perfect satisfaction to more than 250,000 Canadian women. What an enviable record!—And justly deserved—for these worthy ranges have been designed by expert engineers and made from the best material money can buy.

The Enterprise Iron Duke (a cast iron range for coal or wood featured in the illustration) is a popular member of the illustrious Enterprise Family. In addition to many special features which make it ideal from the standpoint of cooking and baking, the full enamel porcelain sides have no holes or crevices to catch dust or grease. Simply wipe with a damp cloth and your range is ready for the next day's perfect cooking—spotlessly clean.

You can buy any Enterprise Range for cash, or on easy terms if you prefer. If the latter is more convenient, you will find the regular monthly payments of $10 easy to take care of. Or—you can pay in larger amounts in three months periods if you desire. The initial cash payment in either case is comparatively small.

There are several types of Enterprise Ranges for coal and wood burning—also gas ranges and the new Enterprise Electric Range. All are quality-built ranges backed by the iron-clad guarantee of their makers. For real cooking satisfaction nothing can equal any one of these Enterprise Ranges.

And then, softly at first but growing louder, he began to hum once more that old Maori death chant. From my situation behind the chair I could see nothing of the girl except one hand, which hung out over the arm of it. I fixed my eyes on that and as I stood there saw it change saw in the index of some mysterious incredible transformation that must be permeating every fiber of her body. It had been Jane Perkins' hand a moment ago—a chambermaid's hand, pudgy, it was different, altogether different. The fingers stretched apart a little as if they tingled with the warmth and life of a new current, intenser, more electrical. The hand opened wide, then slowly clenched itself into a fist; and last of all it sprang open again, distended to its widest reach, with galvanic quickness which Jane Perkins' nerves would never have capable of commanding.
