"WHERE OLD FRIENDS MEET"

Lay Cornerstone For New British Commons

LONDON, May 28 - (CP) - Col. Clifton Brown, Speaker of the House of Commons, today used a 100-year-old mallet to lay the foundation stone of a new chamber to replace the structure destroyed by German air raiders in 1941.

The same mallet had been used in the building of the previous House of Commons a century ago.

LONDON - (CP) - Stamps auctioned in London recently realized £180 ($732) for a Tuscan issue of 1861, with the upper half fainter than the lower. A swiss stamp, issued in 1843 and known as the "Double Geneva" because of its double width, brought £210 ($840).

First steamboat to make a regular sea voyage was the "Phoenix," which steamed from Hoboken to Philadelphia in 1809.

TIGNISH

Mr. Austin Handrahan, Norway, was a business visitor by taxi to Alberton on Friday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Arsenault and children Jean and Stewart spent the past Saturday in Summerside with relatives.

Mrs. Charles Gavin, Anglo-Tignish, is a patient in the City Hospital, Charlottetown, where she is taking medical treatment.

Miss Teresa Doucette and Miss Barbara Kinch, Tignish, went to Summerside last Saturday and spent the day with friends.

Mrs. A.J. MacDonald, Tignish, spent the past Saturday in Summerside, the guest of her daughter, Miss Kathleen MacDonald, R.N.

Miss Anna Perry, Charlottetown, spent a recent week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund F. Perry, Palmer Road North.

Mrs. M.F. Gaudet, Tignish Corner, has gone to Providence, R.I. to visit her sister (Katherine) Mrs. John I. Perry who is quite ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin McQuaid, Souris, motored to Tignish last Saturday and are spending the holiday week-end with Mrs. McQuaid's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Handrahan, Norway.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Fraser and daughter, Catherine of Bradalbane spent Sunday and Monday with Mrs. Fraser's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C.J. Morrissey, Tignish.

Mr. Walter J. McGrath, livestock promoter with Canada Packers, Ltd., Charlottetown, was the past week-end guest of his brother, Mr. John McGrath and Mrs. McGrath, Norway.

His friends are sorry to report the illness of Mr. John Shea, Anglo-Tignish, and hope for his speedy recovery. Mr. Shea is being cared for during his illness by his daughter, Mrs. Wallace Ready, Christopher's Cross.

An oldie girls who are boarders at Our Lady of the Angels Convent, Tignish, and attending classes in the Convent and Dalton School enjoyed a three day holiday from their studies over the 24th of May and spent the time at their homes.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald McHugh, Norway, brought their little son, Robert, home from the hospital recently. The little fellow had been hospitalized for a month, receiving medical treatment.

Mrs. John P. Doucette, Nail Pond, underwent a successful major operation last week in the Prince County Hospital, Summerside. Mrs. Doucette's many friends were glad to hear the good news from the operation.

Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Gallant and sons, Peter and Joseph Bernard of Halifax, N.S. and Miss Gloria Bernard, Forest Hills, Mass. were recent guests of their brothers, Messrs Walter and Omer Bernard, Tignish.

Stephen McCue, little two year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar McCue, Harper Road, was rushed to the Prince County Hospital Summerside, last week and operated on for appendicitis immediately. Although quite ill for the first few days, the little fellow finally responded to treatment and will soon be coming home much improved in health.

Mrs. Urbain Gaudet, Tignish spent the past week in Charlottetown, the guest of her daughter Miss Malvina Gaudet. Mrs. Gaudet also visited with a granddaughter, Mrs. Neil McNevin and Mr. McNevin.

The sympathy of the citizens of Tignish goes out to Master Clarence Griffin in the sudden death of his mother at 2 o'clock Thursday morning, May 20th at her home in Lot 7. Clarence has been living in Tignish for the past two years and attending classes in the Dalton School.

Mr. James Porter and Miss Susan Gaudet, employees of Eatons, Moncton, N.B. came to Tignish last Saturday night to spend the holiday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Gaudet, Tignish North, also visiting Mr. and Mrs. Gaudet over the week-end was Mrs. Gaudet's sister, Mrs. Emmanuel Doucette, Clermont.

Messrs John and Phillip Gillis have returned to their respective homes at Moncton and St. John, N.B. Their sister, Mrs. Edna Gallant and little daughter Patricia have gone to their home in Dartmouth, N.S. They had been called home to attend the funeral of their brother, Clarence and remained for a week after the funeral to be with their mother, Mrs. James W. Gillis, St. Felix.

Mr. Joseph Perry, O'Leary, called upon the Aubin Doucette's last Sunday. Mr. Perry, along with two friends had read the glowing accounts of the large trout taken from the streams near Tignish and had come to try their luck. The writer did not see the O'Leary gentlemen after the fishing expedition but hope they got good catches.

It was with deep regret the citizens of Tignish heard the sad news of the death of Mrs. Joseph Gaudet, Chelsea, Mass. Before going to Massachusetts, the Gaudet family lived on Church Street, Tignish. Mrs. Gaudet spent several weeks last summer visiting with relatives in St. Felix. To all the bereaved relatives is offered sincere sympathy.

A goodly number of Tignish persons motored to Alberton for the dance in the Parish Hall. The big attraction at this dance was the Don Messer Orchestra, and from reports received, the music would be hard to excel. Another interesting feature of the evening was a "jitterbug" dance staged by several local couples.

It is good news to hear of the return to health of Miss Dora DesRoches. Miss DesRoches is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael DesRoches, St. Felix and last week her parents received a telegram from Moncton, N.B. stating that Dora was ill with pneumonia in a Moncton hospital and her condition critical. Mrs. DesRoches left immediately to be with her daughter and later sent word that Miss DesRoches had responded to treatment and was out of danger.

Work has begun on the Tignish wharf. A group of men are busy now tearing out the old piling and find the work not too comfortable these days when the wind blows east and a slip of the foot means a dip in the water which feels as if ice-cakes were sunk at the bottom of the harbour. Seven carloads of crossties have been unloaded and hauled to the site of operation as well as a carload of equipment. Phillips and Sons, Charlottetown, are the contractors.

On Saturday morning, May 22nd, a large class of boys and girls from the parish of St. Simon and St. Jude, Tignish, received their first Holy Communion from their pastor, Rev. J.A. MacDonaid at an eight o'clock Mass. The children looked lovely, the little girls in white dresses and veils and the boys in dark suits with bows of white ribbon tied on their left arms. The church was pretty well filled with parents and relatives of the children.

Mr. John B. Christopher, Tignish, and Mr. John Ryan, DeBleis, went to East Royalty last Thursday to look over some race horses. While there they were the guests of Mr. Frank McKay. Both Mr. Christopher and Mr. Ryan are very interested in horse racing. At present Mr. Christopher has a colt he is starting to train. This colt has all the signs of being a fast one and Mr. Christopher has high hopes for him. Mr. Ryan owns the mare "Ima C" and she has a good

No, Mr. Brown

By Gertrude Knevels

"Ten not," April said. "I haven't been invited. Mr. Brown - Mr. Parker."

"Glad to meet you, Brown. Night, April. I'll be good. Mind you're the same." Ten disappeared, grinning.

"I suppose," said Mr. William Brown, differently, "that I have the right to call on my friend, Mrs. Polly Bundy, and bring her a few miserable flowers?"

"I don't know what I can do about it," April sighed. "Oh, Bill, what a delectable box. And after all my scolding about being extravagant! I've a mind to put these in the fire."

But not even the box, with its white satin ribbons and violet tissue, went into the fire. At the sight of violets—purple, fresh, and dewy—April gave the little squeal of joy she always gave over something gay and pretty, any little luxury in her simple existence. She sat down on the shabby couch, buried her nose, and gloated, Bill, following her, suddenly dared slip a hand under her chin, lifted her face and looked down into her eyes. "Not such a good match, after all. Not dark enough. Not blue enough."

"Polly Bundy's eyes," April laughed, "are hazel. Bring her some hazel nuts next time, if you like, but don't dare buy any more flowers for me."

"Sorry, if you don't like them. You know I adore them. But I know you can't afford them, Bill, and it makes me un—"

"Now listen," he insisted. "It was the only way I could think of to tell you how sorry I am I was such a grouch the other day at the Bureau." Bill sat on the rug at April's feet, occupied himself with the fire. "I hadn't any business to talk the way I did. I'd been out of town, you know when King told me of your engagement, I was well—"

"Surprised?" April suggested. "No—sunk. As if the bottom had dropped out of everything. Look here, I'd better go. If I stay I'll be saying things."

"What kind of things?" April kept her nose in the violets, but edged a little way along the couch. "Bill stood up and towered over her. 'I'd like to ask what I've got no right to ask,' he burst out. 'I want to know if you really care for Parker. If you're happy with him. Or is it his confounded money?'"

"It is not!" April repped it sharply. "How dare you suggest such a thing? I've always been fond of Ten—" She was interrupted by loud voices in the hall. The door burst open and Ten Parker blew in, dragging Gwenn Harding by the hand. "Hi!" Ten cried. "Look what the cat's brought in. Met her right at the gate—out scouting for her man. She's tracked you, Brown. Did you get your dates mixed?"

"I'll make you pay for this, Bill!" Gwenn Harding laughed. She was all aglow with the cold. Soft furs were shrugged over an evening frock of yellow crepe. Heavy French perfume heralded her approach. "That lad's the most unpunctual varmint on my string," she complained to April. "Bill, I might forgive you if you'd let me bum a cigarette."

Gwenn laughed, talked in gay excited jerks. The flare of Bill's lighter showed up her darkly glowing face as he held it to her cigarette. She tossed aside her wrap, plucked herself on the couch beside a not too responsive hostess. "Violets!" Gwenn shrieked. "Ten, you must be drawing on your prospects."

"Not me," Ten eyed the flowers sulkily. "She knows I'm broke."

"There, I might have recognized Bill's taste," Gwenn giggled. "Can't make me jealous April. You should see the washtub full of red roses that arrived for me last night. 'Well,' she addressed the company in general, 'what are you going to do with me, now you've got me here? Speak up. Ten. Are we staying or going?'"

"Staying," Ten declared promptly. "A rubber of bridge by the fire. I'll get Bundy to fix us some eats, and Brown can take you home, Gwenn, if I don't get a head of him. How about it, April? Well, have what Aunt Buzz calls a 'nice, home evening.' Eh, Sweetheart?"

CHAPTER XVI The kind of entertainment that one suffering under his present load of restrictions could best enjoy, Ten explained, was a "Bad

Manners' or 'Bad Taste Party'. It was perfectly simple. You began with invitations typed on bright pink paper with ruled lines and spelled all wrong. 'I appoint you Committee on Invitations,' April laughed. 'You never wrote a correctly spelled letter in your life.'
