U. S. Steel-Making Continues Decline

CLEVELAND, June 19 - (AP) - Steel-making in the United States continued last week a slow decline which has been underway since March, the magazine Steel reported Saturday. The magazine said in its weekly review that a substantial drop in production is in prospect next month when many steel consuming plants shut down for mass vacations of a week or two weeks. The review said that only one plant last week to 96.5 per cent capacity - the lowest level since April 1948.
