MOORE & McLEOD Limited

Chateau Sinister

By Leslie Beresford

"Boy, I just couldn't bring myself to do that!" the other interrupted. Not anyway till we'd found out why he's been playing such a queer trick. And—there's another little matter to be cleared up. Since Andrew Payne's alive, the dead one must be Peter Burnaby. Stands to reason, doesn't it? Well, how did it come about that he was murdered, his clothes containing papers identifying him as Andrew Payne?

"How do I know?" O'Hara demonstrated wearily. "Looks like Payne may have some trouble explaining that," the other pointed out, as if ruthlessly dissecting the basis for a film-plot in his usual manner. "Could I break it to you, my dear old relation? I might yet be dealt with by the hangman? That's why I came along to see you. We two have got to get our heads together, and see what's behind this awkward resurrection of Old Man Payne before we reveal anything to her."

"Plenty in this story for the good film-director!" Rittenberg grimaced as O'Hara finished. "Looks like Carey's old relative is a master piece of work even than he looked. And if there really is a topographic background to the business, it's going to be no joke." As he was speaking the taxi stopped at a corner of one of Camden Town's ugly streets, the driver looking back enquiringly. Rittenberg got out, paid the man off, and began to walk along the street with O'Hara beside him.

"It'd better give you the hang of things round this part," Rittenberg said as they moved slowly along the pavement. "Payne doesn't know of course, that I trailed him to where he was living. I let him get the impression that, apart from surprise at barging into him when I'd thought him still in France, I didn't care if we never met again. I even had the sense to say I wasn't any longer interested in filming that old Chateau, so that he shouldn't think I knew anything. And then, pretending I was in no end of a hurry, I left him."

Rittenberg stopped here at the mouth of one of the streets he saw to be some old mess, now converted into garages, with living accommodation on the upper floors. The cobbled way between the buildings was rather tightly wedged just now with cars, being washed or made ready for the owners to claim them after leaving business. It was now the beginning of the evening rush-hour, with many people around.

Christmas And New Year's Activities At The Infirmary

The Christmas and New Year's seasons were greatly enjoyed by the two hundred and eleven patients dwelling in this Institution. The decorations of trimmings and trees tastefully arranged throughout the building by the staff presented a very pleasing appearance and the services and entertainments by the following were deeply appreciated.

On Sabbath 19th Rev. Simpson of the St. Dunstan's University and also the Salvation Army held devotional services and on December 20th, Rev. G. C. Webster and the Y. P. S. C. E. of Zion held their annual Christmas concert. Rev. Mr. Webster brought the message and which the Y. P. S. C. E. took over with a variety program of carols, vocal and instrumental selections, etc. At the close of the program they treated the patients to apples.

On Tuesday night, Dec. 22, the Girl Guides of Trinity Church with their leader, Mrs. Harry Cudmore, wended their way to the recreation hall and entertained the patients with carol singing and a Christmas Eve interesting Christmas picture was shown by Major and Mrs. Hutchinson of the Salvation Army.

Later Christmas Eve expectant children hung their stockings and Santa who arrived in due time and filled all stockings with an abundance of toys, fruit, candy, etc., and the kiddies hearts were overjoyed as they opened their gifts the following morning.

Santa, who was unable to return to the North Pole as scheduled, called in on Christmas morning to reassure himself that the older patients were not forgotten, and spent with the excitement of the recreation hall where all had gathered to receive their gifts when they heard the familiar laugh and greetings of old Santa as he sauntered in playing the accordion and being the recipient of much hilarity as he sang and played and distributed gifts and treats of candy, fruit and nuts from the Christmas tree to all present. He then strolled through the building, a visiting, stocking and Santa, who arrived in due time and filled all stockings with an abundance of toys, fruit, candy, etc., and the kiddies hearts were overjoyed as they opened their gifts the following morning.

On Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 23, the Christmas dinner was served in the dining room. The menu consisted of turkey, cranberry sauce, etc. The supper menu consisted of mince pie, ice cream and doughnuts.

L.O.B.A. Hold Annual Meeting

On Friday evening the annual meeting of Memorial L. O. B. A. was held with a good attendance of members present. The first part of the meeting was in the Orange Degree when four candidates were presented for advancement and duly initiated, at the close of which the lodge opened in the Orange Degree and the routine order of business was carried out.

Although the yearly reports of the secretary and treasurer were not ready until next night of meeting it was noted there had been fifteen initiations and sixteen degrees during the year, and that the lodge is in splendid financial standing after all bills are paid and donations to drives and charitable institutions were deducted.

Several of the members enjoyed the pleasure of attending the sessions of the Most Worshipful Grand Lodge held in Hamilton last June, where Mrs. Jessie Larter had the honor of being elected to the office of M. W. G. D. L.

King was presented with a fraternal ring by Mrs. Janet Beaton, D. M. and an address read by Mrs. Annie Darrach, R. S. on behalf of the members in appreciation of her faithfulness and helpfulness in the past year, to which Sister King very fittingly replied, thanking the officers and members for their co-operation and loyal support.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. JEMIMA ROBERTSON

On December 6th, Cavendish and surrounding districts were saddened by the passing of Mrs. Jemima Robertson, widow of Mr. Gordon Robertson who passed away some years ago.

The end came very suddenly on the morning of December 5th. Her remains arrived on the Island on Friday, December 10th, accompanied by her niece Miss Clara Howes and a friend Mr. Walter Butters. The funeral services were held in the Cavendish Baptist Church on Saturday afternoon. A large number gathered to pay their respects to their friend, who some years ago had lived in this community and was a kind neighbour and true friend, Mimmie, as she was called by her friends, tenderly nursed her husband until he passed away May 10th, 1921. When the home was broken up she moved to Saint John, N.B., and later to Dorchester, Mass. where she was companion and nurse to Mr. Clapp, who had been an invalid for a number of years. On Sunday morning she fed her patient her breakfast and was almost immediately seized with a heart attack and passed away.

It can be truly said of her "She hath done what she could". Besides a host of friends there are left to mourn one sister, Mrs. Samuel Howes of Dorchester, a half-brother Mr. Rufus Bonnell of Saint John, N. B. and a large number of nieces and nephews.

The service in Cavendish was conducted by the Pastor Rev. Paul Richardson assisted by the Rev. George Gough of the United Church. Mr. Richardson spoke words of comfort from the first two verses of the 14th chapter of St. John's Gospel. He also warned those present to be prepared for we know not the day nor the hour when the call may come to us. Mrs. Robertson's favourite hymns were sung. "There's not a like the lowly Jesus", "Nearer My God To Thee", "What a Friend We Have in Jesus" and "Abide With Me" were sung by the choir. Rev. George Gough led in prayer and pronounced the benediction.

After the commitment service the remains were tenderly laid to rest beside her husband to await the resurrection call.

The pallbearers were Messrs. Ernest McNeill, Lorne McNeill, Geo. McCoubrey, Fred Clark, Clarence Stewart and William Simpson. Mr. Joseph Davidson of Kensington was undertaker.
