FOCH TWICE AVERTED DISASTER TO BRITISH AT YPRES, DEPUTY SAYS

Sent Own Reserves When General French's Line Was Broken in 1914 and Turned Defeat into Victory Another Time. M. Meunier-Surcouf Asserts.

The appointment of General Foch as generalissimo of the Allied forces has brought out a new crop of stories about him. Some of the best are related by M. Meunier-Surcouf, Deputy from Saint-Brieux, who served for twenty months on Foch's staff at the beginning of the war.

"October 30, 1914," says M. Meunier-Surcouf, "General Foch learned that the English cavalry had been attacked by superior forces and had had to give considerable ground to the south of Ypres. The two points of support were lost, the line had been broken and the flank of General Dubois was in danger. General Foch hurried to St. Omer, arriving at 5 o'clock in the morning.

"Marshal French was awakened. 'Marshal, your line is broken,' said General Foch. 'Yes, the marshal replied. 'Have you any reserves?' 'I have nothing.' 'Give Own Reserves to British.

"All right," said General Foch. 'I will give you mine. We must stop the hole at once. If the line is pierced at one point we will be lost, because of the overwhelming numbers of the enemy. I have eight battalions of the 32nd Division that General Joffre has sent me. Take them and forward.

"Marshal French was greatly moved. He shook hands warmly with General Foch, saying: 'It is a fine thing you have done for me.' At 2 o'clock the orders were given. The gap was stopped and we were advancing.

"Another time. It was to the north of Ypres and the English had been forced back. A division of the First Corps was almost annihilated. In vain they fought for duty on the staff of General Sir Douglas Haig charged at the head of a brigade of the Guard. His staff was killed and his troops were shot to pieces. He was obliged to give way.

"General Foch hurried again to the crisis. 'Fight to the death! You must never retreat in full battle. This point would be frightful. Today it would be a catastrophe. Hold! I will come to your aid.

"While speaking he wrote on a scrap of paper he picked up from the table his idea of what should be done, and passed it to the marshal. 'The British general took the paper, wrote on it. 'Execute the order of General Foch,' signed it and gave it to one of his officers.

"As soon as the orders were given the English stopped their retreat and counter-attacked. We supported them. The Germans were stopped. They are still stopped.

"Another of the anecdotes of M. Meunier-Surcouf relates to General Foch's method of choosing the members of his staff. It seems that at the beginning of the war the colonel of an infantry regiment called for a sergeant to volunteer for an extremely perilous mission.

"The sergeant stepped forward. ## CROSSED JORDAN AT PROBABLE PLACE OF SAVIOUR'S BAPTISM

Turks Not Numerous, But Were Well Supplied with Machine Guns and Stood on Ground Which Was Peculiarly Suitable to Defence Work Until Forced to Flee Before the British.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN PALESTINE, May 2. (Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—It was at Maadethidjiah, where the baptism of Christ is said to have taken place, that the British army forced a passage of the River Jordan after a brisk engagement with the Turks and a small body of Germans on the night of March 21.

The crossing was attempted at three spots. The average breadth of the Jordan is thirty yards and even in the driest season the water level is never less than three and a half to four feet deep. Both banks are lined with a thick jungle called by the Arabs "Ezzer" and is the haunt of wild bear. It is traversed by very few tracks leading to the ford.

At two of the fords, even men on horseback were unable to breast the strong current, while riffs and pontoons were swept away. The Turkish alive to the fact that the crossing was being attempted, set fire to some dry scrub on their side of the bank which lit up the waters almost with brightness of daylight revealing with cruel distinctness our men venturing from cover in the thickets at Maadethidjiah. There the river has a straight run and the current is consequently less swift. Seven volunteers succeeded in swimming to the other bank with a rope by means of which a pontoon was pulled over, serving as a ferry for a sufficient force.

The British established a strong bridgehead before dawn. The Turks were not very numerous, but were plentifully supplied with machine guns while the ground lent itself to defence. Beyond the belt of scrub through which it was necessary to cut one's way was a bare open space about five hundred yards wide and then a series of ledges where the Turks were encamped in trenches with perfect field for fire in front of them. While daylight lasted it was impossible to cross the line. After dusk the British pushed the Turkish positions. A steel pontoon bridge was constructed which was crossed most gallantly under shell fire by cavalry which promptly made an end to the Turkish resistance, galloping down the machine-guns and capturing about three Maxims and seventy prisoners. Wheeling to the left the troops secured the opposite bank of the Ghor, untried ford and soon the infantry was pouring across following close on the heels of the Turks who made an other stand at Shunethidjiah across the old caravan road leading to Es Salt.

There the troops were among the

PARIS PUTS BAN ON WAR RUMORS

Paris, May 2.—It was a famous French psychologist who said recently that rumor was one of the evils among others of all wars, and especially of this one. He pointed out that rumors were not only bad and sometimes did as much harm as the worst of enemy propaganda.

The rumor had hardly been passed when the standard-bearer of "new results" Boulevardiers of all creeds were brought before the military commissions to explain their "divulged acts of indiscretion." There were some whose sole offense, according to their explanations, was that they had merely and truthfully told a friend whose confidence had been told by the press carrier that on the day after tomorrow the Germans would surely carry out a terrible attack on Paris.

Others were certain, and let it be said with entire candor on the terms of the ban, that the rumors which were only too often Paris was really this unprovoked. It is true, they were sure that somewhere and far from Paris, hidden to a forest, were a number of ordinary small caliber cannon which had been captured in doubt since the battle of the Marne and were suddenly put into action by a battery of German personnel who had escaped from the camp at Flanders.

These and other "gossip" lines of information dropped, in consequence of some well-meaning persons have been found to prove a source of exaggerated news.

During the two days in which the conference has been in session, all military questions of moment were examined and settled in full agreement. The results obtained are unanimously regarded as most satisfactory.

"Did your grandfathers live in a green old age?" was the query put by a 21st to a young fellow. "Well, I should think so." He was swindled three times after he was seventy," replied the old man.
